The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment (Mrs. Angela Rumbold): I thank my hon. Friends the Members for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Macfarlane) and for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) for the kind words with which they began their contributions. I am also grateful to them on behalf of the civil servants who worked in Marsham street for many a long year with my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam.

I do fully understand my hon. Friend's arguments about the manner in which the London borough of Sutton has conducted its affairs over a number of years. My hon. Friend the Member for Carshalton and Wallington paid tribute to the local authority's good management and spoke of how such good management affects people who live and work in that outer London borough. I sympathise and I do not want anything that we do to be to the detriment of such boroughs.

My hon. Friends will accept that the rate support grant system is at the best of times undeniably complex. This settlement has been more complex because of the additional task of accommodating the abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan authorities. I welcome the opportunity to try to reassure my hon. Friends and their constituents about the borough's position.

First, I shall deal with how the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement might have affected Sutton if we had not made any changes to the grant system. Like all other outer Londer authorities the borough would have lost block grant because we have reduced the proportion of overall spending which is met by the Exchequer grant, of which block grant is a part. We have followed that policy because we wanted to reduce the Exchequer support to local government in an attempt to improve local accountability. My hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam accepted that. The loss of grant for this reason amounted to over £1·5 million. Sutton would have lost a further £333,000 due to increased rateable values. It would have gained about £800,000 because we have moved resources between various services.

With some other smaller losses and gains, overall Sutton would have received about £900,000 less in grant than in 1985-86 if we had simply rolled the old system forward to 1986-87.

However, we could not leave the basic grant system alone. The most important feature of the settlement next year is that we have removed targets and holdback. At the same time, we have increased the effects of the existing mechanism so as to continue the constraints on spending. Sutton gained £1 million in grant from that move.

We have also continued the development of grant-related expenditure as an objective measure of spending need. Sutton gains a further £1·2 million in grant from those changes which mainly affect its education and concessionary fares provision. As I said, we have abolished the GLC, which means that Sutton has gained a further £1·5 million of grant towards the services that it has taken on as a consequence of abolition.

The net result of all the changes to which I have referred is that if Sutton were to spend at a level equal to its own 1985-86 spending and include its share of the GLC's 1985-86 spending — increased by 3·4 per cent. — its block grant would increase by £2·8 million to £27·8 million—an increase of 11·3 per cent.

Many outer London boroughs have claimed that profligate inner London boroughs have been rewarded rather than penalised, as the outer boroughs would wish. However, many inner London boroughs are subject to lower expenditure limits next year. For example, Greenwich is being required to reduce its expenditure by 10 per cent. in real terms, Hackney by over 12 per cent. and Lewisham by 14 per cent., all as a direct consequence of rate capping.

Such demands are difficult to achieve, as I know to my cost. It is hard for a local authority to achieve much more than a 3 per cent. direct cut in expenditure during the rollover of one financial year. However, we are required to operate the block grant system on general principles which have to be consistent. We have no power to single out authorities for favourable or unfavourable treatment. The rate support grant system is based on the principles of need and resources equalisation. The aim is for authorities to provide similar services at broadly the same rate poundage cost to their ratepayers, regardless of differences in their needs and rateable resources.

Although we are not here today to decide the future of the local government finance system, it would be appropriate for me to mention that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has just launched a major Green Paper which addresses the fundamental issues of equalisation and the extent to which it should continue under a new financial system for local government. We shall certainly welcome all thoughts and contributions from local authorities in the coming months. I hope that my hon. Friends will take that message back to their local authority.

The abolition of the GLC is particularly important to the London borough of Sutton. My hon. Friends will recall that we intended that the financial effects of abolition would be neutral—there would be neither gainers nor losers arising out of the abolition. We have not built into the rate support grant settlement any assumption about what savings can be made by the successor authorities.

Our aim has been that, taken as a whole, London will receive the same level of grant to which it would have been entitled if the GLC had continued to exist and to spend at the level assumed in the settlement. We have done that by allocating the GLC's grant-related expenditure and its 1985-86 budget to the successor authorities on the most objective assumptions that we could find, after a full process of consultation with the local authority associations.

We have also extended the London rate equalisation scheme to replace the equalising effect of the GLC precept. That was necessary to avoid windfall gains to the central boroughs at the expense of ratepayers outside London.

It is important to understand that not only do authorities inherit expenditure obligations from the GLC, and the grant-related expenditure to go with them, but they inherit an obligation to raise some of the resources to meet those needs from their own ratepayers, just as the GLC did by precepting. That means that there is no uniform relationship between GRE increases and grant increases due to abolition.

However, in Sutton's case the grant entitlement on our spending assumption of an increase of 3·4 per cent. would suggest a rate rise of only 2·5 per cent. If Sutton could repeat last year's use of balances, the rise could be even lower—perhaps even zero.

My hon. Friends asked me to touch on Sutton's grant related expenditure. I know that Sutton is unhappy about several aspects of that. It lost about £500,000 from figures provisionally announced in October 1985, mainly due to new data on traffic flows affecting the highway maintenance grant-related expenditure. We made it clear that such changes were possible. The concessionary fare GRE does not match what Sutton believes it will be required to spend according to the statutory scheme, although the new GRE methodology is better for Sutton than the old one. I assume my hon. Friends that we are, looking at whether we can help on this aspect for future years. We are acutely aware of the problems that arise from continually looking at the grant-related expenditure assessment. That throws up problems not only for Sutton, but for other authorities, and one has to be careful about how one changes the assessments.

I know that Sutton has been worried about the costs associated with the abolition of the GLC. The likely reduction of the proposed London Residuary Body levy from £180 million to around £60 million, to which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State referred in the RSG debate on 20 January, represents a saving to Sutton of over £3 million.

My hon. Friends may also know that no less than £200 million of the provisional charges, London-wide, circulated by the LRB in November, related to housing debt that the boroughs already pay for. To add this as a new expense due to abolition would be mistaken. It would result in double counting, and this may help to explain some of the figures for rate increases put about by boroughs generally, although I know that Sutton has not made that mistake.

Furthermore, my right hon. Friend announced that the GLC's balances will now be distributed on a population basis. Sutton will get £250,000 instead of £150,000 for every £10 million of balances distributed. I hope that takes care of that point.

I should like to refer to a mistake that has occurred in the split of the GLC's highway maintenance expenditure to the boroughs when the RSG settlement was being prepared. I recognise how difficult it is for anyone not immersed in this system, which is known for its Byzantine complexity, not to become confused, but this error is different from the changes of highway maintenance and other GREs between provisional announcement and settlement which I talked about earlier. It has to do with the calculation of the expenditure to be taken on by each borough from the GLC, which is necessary so that limits are set on the gains and losses of grant as a result. These limits—safety nets—were needed to achieve the neutral effect that I mentioned before. The grant loss to Sutton is almost £800,000.

[Mrs. Angela Rumbold]

I am urgently considering how this can be corrected within the grant year. There are various ways in which we might do this. I am committed to consulting the local authority associations with a view to producing a solution which will correct this error before boroughs have to make a rate.

I know that the council's latest forecast for next year's expenditure, taking account of some of these changes, is now about £1·5 million less than when I met my hon. Friends with a deputation from the borough of Sutton. But at £71 million, it is still almost £2 million above our settlement assumption. It would be about 9 per cent. up on last year — a far bigger increase than can be accounted for by inflation. On these figures Sutton could lose about £3 million of grant overall. I hope Sutton can find ways of reducing that forecast.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State used the phrase "grant recycling." Last year, penalties incurred by overspending authorities went back to the Treasury. This year, grant lost by those spending above the settlement assumptions will be recycled to all by the traditional process of close ending. My right hon. Friend showed to the House in the RSG debate the effects of distributing a pool of £400 million. Sutton would have received nearly £1·25 million as a result. How much of this is a grant gain will depend upon how much Sutton contributed to the pool by spending above the assumptions we have made. If it can keep its own spending down, it will maximise the benefits for ratepayers.

I think it is fair to say that Sutton has not had a bad settlement. I would be fairer to say that Sutton had rather a good settlement. If its overall spending goes up in line with inflation—4·5 per cent.—we estimate that its rates need only go up by 5·2 per cent. That will be as little as 2·7 per cent. if Sutton can repeat last year's use of balances. If it can get its spending below that figure, rates rises could be even lower.

I hope that I have provided additional information which I am sure my hon. Friends can take back to help mitigate some of the differences between the borough's estimate of expenditure next year and our own. Therefore, the message I should leave with my hon. Friends is to urge the council to keep up its record of exemplary housekeeping. The rewards for its ratepayers will be great.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at five minutes past Two o'clock.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Trespass

Mr. Stern asked the Attorney-General if he has any plans to seek to amend the law of trespass, to speed up the process of eviction of illegal itinerant occupiers of private or public-owned land.

The Attorney-General: No. It is considered that there is already available both in the High Court and county courts a summary procedure which enables an order for recovery of possession of land to be made very quickly in such cases.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cormorants

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the number of applications for licences to kill cormorants received in 1984 and 1985; and what was the number granted, the number of cormorants allowed to be killed, and the number of cormorants killed, with, in each case, the location and the reason for the killing.

Mrs. Fenner: Twelve applications for licences to kill cormorants were received by Agricultural Departments in England and Wales in 1984, of which four were granted. In 1985, five applications were received, of which one was granted. Details of licences granted in 1984 and 1985 are as follows:

Location	Nature and extent of damage	Maximum number permitted to be killed	Number actually taken
Blithfield reservoir, Staffs	Serious damage to trout stocks	10	*
Withington pools, Wilmslow, Cheshire (2licences)	Serious damage to trout stocks	(i) 10 (ii) 5	4 4
Maldon, Essex	Serious damage to trout stocks	10	9
Wales: Cefni reservoir, Anglesey	Serious damage to trout stocks	6	*
1985
Maldon, Essex	Serious damage to trout stocks	10	†

* Nil.
† Nil to date (Licence expires November 1986).

Trout

Mr. Key asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the question from the hon. Member for Salisbury on 18 July 1985, Official Report, column 275, whether his Department has concluded its survey to assess levels of antimicrobial agents in the edible tissues of trout; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The survey to assess levels of antimicrobial agents in the edible tissues of trout is still in progress.

Lancashire and Western Sea Fisheries Joint Committee

Dr. Cunningham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the contribution of the Greater Manchester and Merseyside county councils to the revenues of the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee in 1985-86 in cash and as a proportion of the total precept-borne revenue.

Mr. Gummer: I understand from the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee that the contributions to its revenue in 1985-86 of Greater Manchester and Merseyside metropolitan county councils were £94,043 and £56,024 respectively and that these represented 32·6 per cent. and 19·4 per cent. of the total precept-borne revenue.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the future of the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee following the abolition of the Greater Manchester and Merseyside county councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The effect of the abolition of the Greater Manchester and Merseyside county councils on the future of the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee will depend upon the outcome of consultations which are at present taking place with the district councils in these areas, which will inherit the relevant powers of the metropolitan county councils.

Fish (Mercury Levels)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the present safety limit for concentrations of mercury in the flesh of fish caught for human consumption; and when that limit was last revised.

Mrs. Fenner: There are no statutory levels for the presence of mercury in food in the United Kingdom. The World Health Organisation in 1972 recommended that the tolerable level of intake for methyl mercury from all sources is 0·2 milligrams per week. As part of its programme of control of pollution of the aquatic environment the EC laid down in 1982 a specific limit of 0·3 milligram per kilogram of mercury in fish flesh.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average concentration of mercury present in fish caught in the sea areas regulated by the Lancashire and Western Sea Fisheries Joint Committee, at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: 0.27 milligrams per kilogram.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Energy Exploration

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library details of the recipients, and prospective recipients, of licences to prospect for lignite and petroleum in Northern Ireland together with a map of the areas of exploration.

Dr. Boyson: On 10 December 1985 I announced the intention of the Department of Economic Development to award two petroleum licences and three prospecting licences for lignite. Details of these prospective licensees and of the holders of two existing petroleum licences and one lignite prospecting licence were included in a press release. I have made arrangements for the Library to receive a copy of this press release together with a map of Northern Ireland showing the areas which are currently licensed for petroleum or lignite exploration and the areas for which the Department's intention to award licences has been announced.

ENERGY

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy what ports of entry will be used for spent fast reactor fuel for the reprocessing plant at Dounreay.

Mr. Goodlad: The planning application from the UKAEA and BNFL to construct a demonstration fast reactor reprocessing plant at Dounreay has been called in by the Secretary of State for Scotland and will be the subject of a public local inquiry starting on 7 April.

I am advised that the applicants have, at his request, informed the reporter to the inquiry that their present preferred port options are (in alphabetical order):

Cromarty Firth (Alness/Invergordon/Nigg)
Scrabster.

They have, however, told the reporter that in view of the fact that transport would not commence until the 1990s they would not require to make a decision as to their final choice of port for some years. That decision would be made in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much prototype fast reactor fuel has been recovered at Dounreay since 1979 from the prototype fast reactor core and from the prototype fast reactor blanket; how much was reprocessed each calendar year; and how much plutonium was extracted from each in each year.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised that the prototype fast reactor (PFR) fuel reprocessing plant first reprocessed PFR fuel in 1980 and throughput has kept pace with the arisings from the reactor. The amount of PFR core sub-assemblies reprocessed and the plutonium output from that reprocessing for each calendar year since 1980 is as follows. None of the breeder blanket sub-assemblies has been reprocessed.

1980	1,181	0
1981	814	173
1982	1,206	179
1983	0	142
1984	539	124
Total	6,162	983

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy what quantity of the prototype fast reactor fuel recovered at Dounreay was processed elsewhere; how much of the plutonium and uranium recovered was recycled into new prototype fast reactor fuel rods; and what is the weight of plutonium and uranium in each fuel rod and each fuel sub-assembly before and after irradiation.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised that prototype fast reactor (PFR) fuel has been reprocessed only at Dounreay. Except for relatively small amounts used in experimental work associated with the PFR fuel cycle, all plutonium so recovered at Dounreay is transferred to British Nuclear Fuels (BNFL) Sellafield for fabrication into new sub-assemblies for use within the PFR fuel cycle. The uranium recovered is retained in store at Dounreay. The weight of plutonium and uranium in each sub-assembly before and after irradiation varies with experimental and operational requirements and with the zone in which it is placed in the reactor.

Waddilove Committee

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) when he will be publishing the Government's response to the Waddilove committee on compensation for subsidence damage; and if he will give the reasons for the delay;

(2) how many representations he has received seeking publication of the response to the Waddilove committee on compensation for subsidence damage; and what responses he has made.

Mr. David Hunt: The Waddilove report raised a number of complex issues which deserve — and are receiving — full and careful consideration; the Government's response will be published as soon as possible. I have replied on these lines to a number of interested parties, including Members of this House and representatives of agricultural and commercial bodies, whose inquiries I welcome and who continue to keep me informed of their views.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Lord Privy Seal if, pursuant to the answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 441, about the allowance to hon. Members for assistance in drafting private Members' Bills, he has any plans to increase the allowance.

Mr. Biffen: I have no present plans to propose any increase in this allowance. During the last four Sessions there have only been five applications from hon. Members for this form of assistance.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Women and Children (Assaults)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he derives from health sources about the incidence of assaults on women and children.

Mr. Mellor: None at present. For the purpose of research on the incidence of such assaults, it has been found more useful and practicable to make use of data from the British crime survey and, for offences against children, the NSPCC's child abuse registration system.

Prisons (Maintenance)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which major prison works developments have been held up as a result of the prison department's decisions communicated to prison governors in August 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The letting of contracts for the following major capital building schemes was deferred in order to keep within the cash limit on the relevant vote sub-head:

Prisons	Building Schemes
Albany	Fire precautionary measures in woodmill
Aylesbury	Wing segregation
Birmingham	Commissioning of staff facilities
Brockhill	New visits and reception unit
Bullwood Hall	Security fence
Channings Wood	Additional living unit
Durham	Staff mess
Erlestoke	Further redevelopment
Frankland	Staff facilities and car park extension
Manchester	New hospital
Onley	Extension to visits, reception and administration units
Pentonville	Conversion of bathhouse to showers
Risley	Additional car parking
Stocken	Commissioning work
Thorn Cross	Commissioning work

Contracts for some of these schemes have now been let; the remainder will follow during the next few months.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what types of maintenance and improvement work in prisons have been delayed as a result of the prison department's decision communicated to prison governors in August 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The non-urgent maintenance and improvement work delayed as a result of the measures taken to deal with the increased levels of the prison population included schemes of the following kinds:

(a) House block renovation, and repairs to the fabric of other prison buildings, including workshops and ancillary accommodation.
(b) Improvements to boiler houses and plant rooms and other electrical and mechanical work.
(c) Repairs to roads and paths.
(d) Upgrading and repair of drainage, water mains and sewage works.
(e) Repairs to security walls and fences.
(f) Upgrading and repair of staff facilities.
(g) Other miscellaneous items.

All the projects that have been deferred will be undertaken at the earliest possible opportunity once funds become available.

Police Car Accidents

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report all accidents involving the death of a police officer or a member of the public as a result of police car accidents for 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is not available centrally. We have asked that for the future we collect information on police vehicle accidents involving death or serious injury, and proposals as to the precise means of doing so are being considered by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Nationality Division

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the income of the nationality division in 1986-87;

(2) what is his estimate of the cost in 1986-87 of providing extra advice, information and publicity to people whose right to registration under the British Nationality Act 1981 expires at the end of 1987.

Mr. Waddington: Detailed estimates including estimates for the cost of publicity are currently being produced in the light of the overall planning assumptions announced in the White Paper on Public Expenditure published on 15 January.

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers seeking admission as visitors were required to submit to further examination by nationality and outcome of the case at terminal 3 Heathrow during the latest three-month period.

Mr. Waddington: The information is not readily available in the form requested. In the period 1 October to 31 December 1985 the total number of passengers who were (a) required to submit to further examination and (b) subsequently refused entry at terminal 3 Heathrow was as follows:

	(a) Further examination	(b) Refused
October	1,462	996
November	1,203	706
December	1,392	783

At terminal 3 in 1985 some 75 per cent. of all passengers required to submit to further examination and 68 per cent. of all passengers refused entry initially sought entry as visitors.

Criminal Injury Compensation Policy

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the objectives of his Department's criminal injury compensation policy; how he is monitoring its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Our policy is to make available public funds for the compensation of innocent victims of violent crime by way of the criminal injuries compensation scheme. Under the terms of the scheme, the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board is exclusively responsible for the consideration and determination of individual applications for compensation. The board's annual report, however, enables my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to keep the general working of the scheme under review.

Warsaw Pact Sailors (Shore Leave)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many individuals came ashore from Warsaw pact ships during 1985 at Ullapool, Aberdeen, Stornoway and Leith;

(2) what steps are taken as a matter of routine to seek to ensure that crewmen from ships of Warsaw pact nations are properly documented and recorded when disembarking for shore leave in British ports.

Mr. Waddington: Under section 8 of the Immigration Act crew members are normally exempted from the provision to obtain formal permission from an immigration officer before going ashore. They are required to leave the port with the ship. The master is required to provide a crew list and to report any deserter. These provisions apply at all United Kingdom ports and they apply to non-British crew members of all nationalities, without distinction. Records are not kept of seamen coming ashore in this way. Warsaw pact ships are visited for the purpose of checking crews, but it would not be appropriate to disclose the detail or frequency of these arrangements.

Women Police Officers

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the increase in absolute and percentage terms in women police officers employed by each police force in each year since 1979.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is as follows:

European Court of Human Rights (Right of Petition)

Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether Her Majesty's Government intend to restore the right of individual petition by people resident in the Isle of Man to the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Her Majesty's Government have asked the Isle of Man Government whether they wish Her Majesty's Government to make a declaration on the Island's behalf recognising the right of individual petition to the European Commission of Human Rights. Their reply is awaited.

Corporal and Capital Punishment

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to provide for a referendum on the issue of corporal and capital punishment.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Television Licences

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many colour television licences were issued in Wales in 1979 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Information about the number of colour television licences issued in Wales in the course of a particular year is not readily available, but the number of such licences which were in force in the area covered by the Wales and Marches Postal Board as at 31 December 1979 was 779,667. The comparable figure for 30 November 1985 was 981,875.

Ms. Sue Pitman

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an urgent investigation into the circumstances that resulted in the physical injuries to Ms. Sue Pitman, at the site of the Carmarthen district council peacetime emergency control centre on Saturday 11 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an inquiry into the incidents at Carmarthen on 11 January, in which a member of CND-CYMRU was injured; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I was sorry to hear of the injury suffered by Ms. Pitman. I understand that allegations have been made to the police in respect of the incident and these are being investigated. It would not be proper for me to comment further while the investigation is proceeding. However, I have asked the chief constable to provide me with a report when this investigation is concluded.

Community Radio Stations

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to assess local public opinion on competing applications for community radio station licences.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend's selection of the successful applicants for the experimental community radio licences will be made in the light of advice from the advisory panel on community radio, which has taken account of the level of public support that different stations might attract. The aim of the experiment is to test the viability of and scope for a range of different types of community radio stations set up and financed in different ways, so that other considerations are also relevant to selections in individual areas.

Park Rangers (Wirral)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has now been able to confirm the byelaws to give park rangers greater control over dogs and dog owners using parks in Wirral.

Mr. Mellor: The byelaws adopted by Wirral council to regulate their parks were confirmed on 26 September and came into operation on 9 October.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a date has now been set for the abolition of the district command structure and the transfer of responsibilities to the area and division headquarters in the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No firm date has yet been fixed for the formal dismantling of the district structure, but this is expected to take place in the spring. An essential preliminary to ensure a smooth handover of responsibilities and functions when the districts are finally abolished has been the setting up of the new area headquarters. Almost all the commanders designated for area posts have now moved to their new locations. Where this has involved transferring commanders from districts, the posts thereby vacated are not being filled but a chief superintendent has in each case been appointed to take responsibility for district-related functions whilst the districts remain.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 21 November 1985, Official Report, column 272, whether he is now in a position to give the information requested in relation to any of the squads and units referred to; if he expects consultation to be completed and decisions made before the districts are abolished; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply shortly.

Security Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to seek powers for the licensing of security guards employed by private security organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Shaw: No. The Government continue to support the steps which have been taken by the British Security Industry Association and the International Professional Security Association towards self regulation of the private security industry.

Immigration

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when immigration officers will be issued with instructions concerning British citizen children, seeking to enter the United Kingdom from Bangladesh, being required to prove paternity by blood tests; and if he will publish these instructions.

Mr. Waddington: There is no such requirement.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he proposes to introduce any requirement to obtain prior entry clearance on those settled in Bangladesh who wish to visit the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 5 December at col. 311.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards acceptance of blood tests as offering conclusive evidence of family relationships;

(2) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards acceptance of the genetic finger printing test as conclusive evidence of family relationship.

Mr. Waddington: The weight of evidence before the courts is a matter of the courts and not for Her Majesty's Government.

In the context of immigration, conventional blood tests do not in general offer conclusive evidence of family relationships. The newly-developed DNA test offers the prospect of such evidence. Preparations are accordingly being made to assess the acceptability and feasibility of using it in immigration cases.

SCOTLAND

A1 Road

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish information on the volume and speed of traffic on the A1 road in East Lothian for the last 10 years.

Mr. Ancram: The following table provides the most up to date information available on vehicle counts on various sections of the A1 trunk road in East Lothian:

	Vehicles per day
Cockburnspath to Dunbar
August 1975	5,922
August 1978	6,706
August 1979	6,353
October 1984	4,892
Dunbar to Haddington
August 1975	9,137
August 1979	11,315
June 1981	6,356
Haddington to Macmerry
August 1976	10,676
August 1979	11,439
Tranent to Wallyford
August 1975	14,481
August 1977	12,489
Wallyford to East Musselburgh
August 1978	17,832
October 1980	18,217

There is no recording of the speed of traffic on the A1 except for ad hoc measurements, for example to assess the need for speed limits.

Macauley Institute of Soil Research (Merger)

Mr. Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if any estimate has been made of savings which may be achieved by merging the Macauley Institute of Soil Research and the Hill Farming Research Organisation on the Macauley site in Aberdeen; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what are the estimated savings expected to be achieved by the proposed merger of the Macauley Institute of Soil Research and the Hill Farming Research Organisation on a combined site in Edinburgh;

(3) what is the estimated cost for transferring staff of the Macauley Institute of Soil Research from Aberdeen to Edinburgh for employment at the Hill Farming Research Organisation site;

(4) what is the estimated site value of land and buildings of the Macauley Institute of Soil Research at Aberdeen.

Mr. John MacKay: No detailed estimates have yet been made of the costs and savings likely to be involved through location of the new institute at either of the two main possible sites. The feasibility study will require to include assessments of the costs of staff transfers, the value of land and buildings and other financial, administrative and scientific aspects relevant to the consideration of the most appropriate location for the new institute.

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations have been held with the Macaulay Trust on the proposed merger of the Macaulay Institute of Soil Research and the Hill Farming Research Organisation on a site in Edinburgh.

Mr. John MacKay: None so far, but consultation with representatives of the Council of Management of the Institute, which holds in trust the land occupied by the institute, will be undertaken in the further studies which have now been launched.

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff will be employed by a combined Macaulay Institute of Soil Research and Hill Farming Research Organisation on a site in Edinburgh and how many staff will be transferred from Aberdeen.

Mr. John MacKay: No decisions can be taken about the number of staff to be employed by the new amalgamated Institute, or how many staff of the existing Scottish agricultural research institutes will be required to transfer from their existing place of employment until agreement has been reached on the precise remit of the new institute, on other questions relating to the location, organisation and staffing of the new institute, and on the allocation of the present work of the Macaulay Institute for Soil Research to the Scottish agricultural colleges and the Scottish Crop Research Institute.

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he will have with trade union representatives of those employed at the Macaulay Institute of Soil Research in Aberdeen on conditions for staff involved in the proposed merger with the Hill Farming Research Organisation in Edinburgh.

Mr. John MacKay: A meeting has been arranged between the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and the Institution of Professional Civil Servants to discuss a number of issues arising from the paper "Strategy for Agricultural Research and Development". Further discussions with trade union representatives will be arranged on specific issues as appropriate.

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the remit of the feasibility study into the proposed merger of the Macaulay Institute of Soil Research and the Hill Farming Research Organisation on a site in Edinburgh; and if a merger on the Macaulay site in Aberdeen will be considered.

Mr. John MacKay: The arrangements for the feasibility study, including the remit, are under active consideration with the various interests concerned. The study will include an assessment of the relative merits of both the Bush Estate, Edinburgh and Aberdeen as a location for the new institute.

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the personnel who will conduct the feasibility study into the proposed merger of the Macaulay Institute of Soil Research and the Hill Farming Research Organisation on a site in Edinburgh.

Mr. John MacKay: Ths study will be conducted by officials of the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland reporting to a Steering Committee comprising the directors of the Macaulay Institute for Soil Research, the Hill Farming Research Organisation, the Scottish Crop Research Institute and the Secretary-General of the Council of Scottish Agricultural Colleges, as well as senior officials of the Department.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Postal Services (Gwynedd)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he discussed with the chairman of the Post Office at their meeting of 24 October the state of postal services in Gwynedd.

Mr. Pattie: No, that is an operational matter for the Post Office Board.

Iraq

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, during the recent visit to the United Kingdom of the Iraqi Foreign Minister, he had any discussions concerning loans or credits to Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brittan: We had no discussion of any substance on this subject.

Soviet Union (British Books)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British books have been republished in the Soviet Union during the last five years; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in this regard.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Statistics on the numbers of British books republished in the Soviet Union are not collected. In the United Kingdom-USSR educational, scientific and cultural agreement of 1959, the two Governments agreed, inter alia, to encourage co-operation in the field of publishing and the exchange of books. Her Majesty's Government continue to support co-operation in this and other fields on the basis of mutual benefit.

Scotch House Group (Trade Mark)

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what basis a trade mark based on the lion rampant symbol has been granted to the Scotch House retail group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: Trade marks embodying lions rempant in various forms have been registered to the Scotch House group and various other concerns over many years. The registrations cover a variety of goods. They have been made on the basis that a lion rampant is in itself registerable as a trade mark, subject to the general rules governing registration. The fact that a lion rampant may sometimes appear as part of a national emblem or flag does not disqualify a device of this type from registration in its own right.

Trade Marks

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the criteria governing decisions on applications for the registering of national symbols as trade marks.

Mr. Pattie: In the United Kingdom, there is a statutory bar to the registration as trade marks of the royal arms, royal crowns and the royal and national flags. Similarly, these may not be included as elements of registered trade marks. The United Kingdom also observes the Paris convention for the protection of Industrial Property. This provides, inter alia, that emblems of the states subscribing to the convention shall not be registered as trade marks nor shall trade marks be registered in which those emblems appear as elements. The registrar ensures that these prohibitions are observed.

Applications for the registration in their own right of commonplace elements which sometimes figure in national symbols eg a lion or unicorn or thistle or leek are considered on their merits against the more general criteria for registration. There is no statutory bar to their registration.

Financial Institutions (Investment Practices)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 717, if he will indicate the nature of the investigations which took place into the investment practices of the financial institutions as part of his Department's recent review of regional policy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In their recent review the Government invited views on a wide range of regional industrial policy issues, and received almost 500 submissions in response. The investment practices of financial institutions were the subject of little or no comment in these responses.

Lloyd's

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will publish the date of the commencement of the inquiry into Lloyd's; and if he will give an assurance that the inquiry will be completed before the Financial Services Bill completes all its parliamentary stages;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the members of the inquiry into Lloyd's.

Mr. Howard: While the inquiry will begin work as soon as possible, I have nothing to add to what my right hon. and learned Friend said in the House during the Second Reading debate on the Financial Services Bill on 14 January and in my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 15 January.

GEC-Plesseys (Takeover)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received opposing the takeover bid by the General Electric Company for Plesseys.

Mr. Howard: It is the normal practice to treat as confidential representations on merger matters, and it would therefore not be appropriate to comment on them.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will now refer the proposed takeover of Plesseys by the General Electric Company to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the official record of his meeting with Sir Raymond Lygo of 8 January was submitted to him for approval before it was finalised; and why the minute of the meeting on 8 January was not signed until 10 January.

Mr. Brittan: The record was read to me over the telephone. The meeting concluded at 17.40 on 8 January, the note was dictated on 9 January, and signed, dated and circulated about lunchtime on 10 January, following confirmation by all those present from the Department that it was an accurate record.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the draft manuscript notes of 8 January, taken by officials, recorded at his meeting with Sir Raymond Lygo.

Mr. Brittan: No.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what other minutes or records were made by officials in his Department of his meeting with Sir Raymond Lygo on 8 January other than the single published record sent to the private secretary of the Minister of State, dated 10 January.

Mr. Brittan: The record prepared by my private secretary, and published on 15 January, was circulated following confirmation by all those present from the Department that it was an accurate record.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if at any time in his conversation with Sir Raymond Lygo on 8 January the question of British Aerospace's withdrawal from the European consortium on Westland helicopters was discussed.

Mr. Brittan: No.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposed at his meeting on 8 January to Sir Raymond Lygo, following his statement that the European consortium bid might affect sales of the A 320.

Mr. Brittan: I said I was ready to act immediately in defending British Aerospace's interest.

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has had any discussions with representatives of the United States Government about whether the involvement of Fiat in the offer to Westland would bring the company within the United States trade embargo with Libya.

Mr. Brittan: No.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what access Mr. Jeffrey Archer has been given to his Department's papers relating to Westland.

Mr. Brittan: None.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why he expected to be consulted by British Aerospace prior to its joining the European consortium on Westlands.

Mr. Brittan: I did not expect to be consulted. I said it might have been helpful if British Aerospace had spoken to me.

British Telecom

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the number of British Telecom shareholders now holding (a) between one and 399 shares, (b) between 400 and 700 shares, (c) between 800 and 1,599 shares and (d) between 1,600 and 1 billion shares; and if he will state for each of the categories (a) to (d) (i) what is the number of shares, and (ii) what percentage of the total shares, including the Government's, that represents.

Mr. Geoffrey Pattie: While this is properly a matter for British Telecom, I understand that the latest information available, showing the pattern of shareholdings at 30 November 1985, is as set out in the table. Figures for category (ii) are only available for holdings between 400 and 799 shares.

Size of holdings	Number of holdings	Percentage of total	Number of shares held (millions)	Percentage of total
(i) 1-399	472,025	28·6	93	1·6
(ii) 400-799	793,786	48·1	362	6·0

Size of holdings	Number of holdings	Percentage of total	Number of shares held (millions)	Percentage of total
(iii) 800-1,599	356,772	21·6	289	4·8
(iv) 1,600-1,000 million and above	27,139	1·7	5,256	87·6
Totals	1,649,722	100	6,000	100

Category (iv) includes the Government shareholding of 2,988 millions shares, or 49·8 per cent. of total shares.

Privatisation

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East on Wednesday 15 January, Official Report, column 1060, he will list those businesses which are intended to be wholly returned to the private sector during the current Parliament.

Mr. Peter Morrison: British Shipbuilders aims to sell its remaining warship building yards by 31 March 1986. It is my right hon. and learned Friend's intention that, subject to market conditions, Rolls Royce should be returned to the private sector within the lifetime of this Parliament. Decisions on the method and timing of returning other businesses to the private sector will be announced when they have been taken.

House of Fraser

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any discussions took place between representatives of the Sultan of Brunei and his Department on the takeover of the House of Fraser; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No such discussions took place.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, pursuant to the answer of 16 January to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) his Department received any other representations apart from the request from the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, seeking an extension of the period for the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to report on the merger reference of Lonrho and House of Fraser; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry received no other representations on the question of extension of the period for the MMC report.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information was available to his Department as to the interests of Mohammed Fayed or representatives of the Sultan of Brunei in the takeover of the House of Fraser before his predecessor's statement on the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 14 March 1985 that on the information before him he had decided not to refer the proposed acquisition of House of Fraser by Alfayed Investment Holdings plc to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. It is the normal practice to treat as confidential representations on merger matters.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will seek the permission of Mr. R. W. Rowland, chief executive of Lonrho, to publish in the Official Report the letter to him from Mr. Rowland of December 1985 regarding the takeover of the House of Fraser; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report his reply to the letter he received in December 1985 from Mr. R. W. Rowland, chief executive of Lonrho, regarding the takeover of the House of Fraser; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Counterfeiting

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new measures he proposes to combat the counterfeiting of manufactured goods in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 591]: The existing laws covered trade descriptions, trade marks, copyright, patents, designs, and passing-off provide an effective framework of protection to deal with counterfeit manufactured goods in the United Kingdom. Some proposals for change have been put forward by the Anti-Counterfeiting Group, which represents firms in a range of industries, and these form the subject of current discussions between the Group and my officials. I shall carefully consider what action could or should be taken in the light of these discussions.

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the share of the total world market which has been held by the United Kingdom aerospace industry in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Pattie [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 632]: Information on the share of the total aerospace market, as distinct from the share of total aerospace exports, is not readily available. The United Kingdom industry's share of exports of aircraft and associated equipment by the non-communist world for 1975-1984 has been as follows:

1975	9
1976	8
1977	9
1978	10
1979	9
1980	12
1981	10

Year	United Kingdom share of world exports percentage
1982	11
1984	11

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the share of the total European aerospace market which has been held by the United Kingdom aerospace industry in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Pattie [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 632]: Because many countries do not provide a complete breakdown of trade by region for aerospace goods, it is not possible to estimate reliably the United Kingdom industry's share of the aerospace exports of non-communist countries to western Europe.

Mr. Raison: Figures of total aid to each individual country for 1984 are set out in detail in table 18 of "British Aid Statistics 1980-1984", copies of which are in the Library of the House. Figures for 1985 are expected to be published in July.

Nicaragua

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions he gave to the German executive director concerning the report to the executive board of the Inter-American Development Bank meeting on 15 January about the proposed loan for agriculture to Nicaragua; and what was the outcome.

Mr. Raison: Discussion of this report has been postponed until 5 March, at the request of the executive director representing Nicaragua. It is not our policy to disclose the nature of instructions to the executive director of the constituency which contains the United Kingdom.

WALES

Re-Chem International (Panteg Site)

10. Mr. Abse asked the Secretary of State for Wales if, in the light of representations to that effect received from Torfaen district council and Gwent county council, he will make it his policy to hold a public inquiry prior to deciding on the request for a grant from Re-Chem International in respect of its Panteg site.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have visited the farm on several occasions in the past but have no plans to visit it again at the present.

Labour Statistics

15. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what were the total numbers registered as unemployed in Caernarfon and Wales in 1979 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: On 12 December 1985 the number of unemployed claimants in the Bangor and Caernarfon travel-to-work area totalled 5,261. The figure for Wales was 181,496. Comparable 1979 figures for the Bangor and Caernarfon travel-to-work areas are not available because of changes to area boundaries. The December 1979 figure for Wales was 78,476.

17. Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are unemployed in Wales; how many were unemployed in 1979; and by how much unemployment has increased, both as a total and as a percentage.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: On 12 December 1985 there were 181,496 unemployed claimants in Wales. The corresponding figure in December 1979 was an estimated 78,476 and the increase between the two dates is 103,020 or 131·3 per cent.

Pupil-Teacher Ratio

16. Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest figure for the pupil-teacher ratio overall in maintained schools in Wales; and what was the corresponding figure in 1978-79.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The pupil-teacher ratio overall, for all maintained schools in Wales, excluding special schools, was 17·6 in 1984-85. The corresponding figure for 1978-79 was 18·2.

Infant Mortality

18. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage reduction there has been in infant mortality rates in Wales in each of the last four five-year periods; and what information he has on comparable figures in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) West Germany, (d) France and (e) Sweden.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I welcome the evidence in the following figures that Wales has shared in the very substantial reduction in infant mortality in western Europe.

The percentage reduction in infant mortality rates, ie deaths under 1 year per 1,000 live births is as follows:

	1960 to 1965	1965 to 1970	1970 to 1975	1975 to 1980	1980 to 1984*
Wales	19·8	7·9	22·5	21·4	22·8
England	12·5	3·7	13·7	23·6	21·7
Scotland	12·5	15·2	12·2	29·7	14·9
West Germany	29·3	1·3	16·5	36·0	†18·3
France	20·1	16·9	24·2	27·5	‡6·0
Sweden	19·9	17·3	24·5	16·9	7·2

† Information for 1984 not yet available.
‡ Information for 1983 and 1984 not yet available.

Farmers (Severe Weather Aid)

19. Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will consider granting assistance for those farmers whose farms were badly affected by the weather last summer but which lay outside the boundaries of the parishes which qualify for aid.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Although most farmers were affected by the bad summer, I am not prepared to go back on the difficult decisions that were taken and announced in November, which concentrated assistance on those in the most disadvantaged areas.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the Government's assumption for the percentage increase in pay within local government services in Wales when the rate support grant settlement for 1985-86 was first published; and what is his latest estimate of the increase in pay within local government in Wales for the same period.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The Government do not make specific assumptions about pay for local authority employees. If local authorities, as employers, concede excessive pay settlements, they cannot expect the Government to provide additional resources. Pay awards should not lead automatically to higher spending nor should they result in higher rate bills. Councils should seek to absorb any additional costs through better use of resources and by achieving better value for money. The increase in expenditure on pay during 1985-86 will not be known until authorities submit their revenue outturn returns later this year.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what correction he has published following the error contained in his briefing notes for editors (Ref. FD/S/40/D7) published by his Department in relation to the rate support grant settlement of 18 December 1985, which wrongly calculated the potential for rate reduction in the Arfon area.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The rating projections for Arfon contained in the Briefing Note for editors issued in relation to the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement did not take full account of the increase in rateable value resulting from the opening of Dinorwic power station. Allowing for this gives a projected rate increase of 1·6 per cent., if the authority spends 5 per cent. more than this year.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give an assurance that targets for local authority spending in Wales will not be re-introduced in 1987-88.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have no plans at present to re-introduce targets in 1987-88. Decisions about the rate support grant mechanisms for that year will be taken towards the end of the year.

Water Supplies

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the most recent figures for the nitrate levels found in public drinking water supplies in Wales compared with acceptable standards.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The Welsh water authority annual report and accounts 1984-85—a copy of which is in the Library — indicates that all supplies of water passing into the distribution system were well below the 50mg/1 nitrate limit set by the EC Directive relating to the quality of water intended for human consumption (80/778/EEC).

Expenditure Plans

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish an analysis of the expenditure shown in table 3.17 of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89", Cmnd. 9702 II, on a similar basis to tables 3.4, 3.5, 3.7, 3.8, 3.9, 3.10, 3.12, 3.13 and 3.14 of the same publication.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is set out in the following tables. In all the tables the totals have been derived from unrounded figures and thus the components may not always add exactly to the totals shown.

Singleton Casualty Unit

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will investigate the circumstances relating to the alleged failure to provide treatment to an accident victim near the now closed Singleton casualty unit on Monday 13 January, details of which have been sent to him.

Mr. Mark Robinson: No. Any formal complaint about treatment in this case should be addressed to West Glamorgan health authority.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Antarctica

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards each of the resolutions on Antarctica passed at the United Nations at the close of 1985 and towards their implications for the Antarctic treaty system.

Mr. Eggar: We and all the consultative parties to the Antarctic Treaty saw each of the resolutions as potentially prejudicing the peaceful operation of the Antarctic Treaty system. The treaty is consistent with and supports the principles of the United Nations. We, in common with others, took the unusual step of registering disapproval of these Resolutions by not participating in the vote on them at the 40th session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Hong Kong

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the number of people who will become stateless during the transfer of sovereignty of Hong Kong.

Mr. Eggar: None. We have already undertaken that no former Hong Kong British Dependent Territories citizens will become stateless as a result of the Sino-British agreement on Hong Kong.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government or the Hong Kong Government propose to introduce direct elections to the Legislative or Executive Council at any time before sovereignty for the whole territory is transferred in 1997.

Mr. Eggar: It was announced by the Hong Kong Government in their white paper on the further Development of representative government in Hong Kong in 1984 that there would be a review in 1987 of the future development of representative government in Hong Kong, and that this would include the question of the introduction of direct elections. I cannot anticipate the outcome of that review.

Terrorism (Convention)

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of the Republic of Ireland about the accession of that Government to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism; and when he expects that accession to take place.

Mr. Eggar: The Government of the Republic of Ireland are well aware of our views on this subject. They announced in the joint communiqué of November 1985 (Cmnd. 9657) their intention to accede to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism as soon as possible.

Republic of Ireland (Extradition)

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he is satisfied with the present arrangements for the extradition from the Republic of Ireland of those suspected of having committed criminal offences within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: Extradition arrangements between the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom provide for a comparatively simple and expeditious procedure based on the endorsement in the second jurisdiction of warrants of arrest in the first. Over a broad band of criminal offences some 25 persons per year on average are extradited from the Republic to the United Kingdom. In the joint communiqué issued at the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement on 15 November 1985 (Cmnd. 9657), the Government of the Republic of Ireland expressed their intention to accede to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism as soon as possible. Irish accession to the convention should improve the position as far as security-related offences are concerned.

Atlantic Fisheries

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects an announcement to be made of the scope and nature of a multilaterally based fisheries conservation and management regime in the south west Atlantic.

Mr. Eggar: The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation is at present carrying out a technical study of the south west Atlantic fishery. We hope this will lead on without delay to discussion and agreement on multilateral fisheries conservation and management arrangements for the area. We fully support the FAO's initiative and have urged all the governments involved to co-operate actively.

Westland plc

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what directions were conveyed by him to Her Majesty's ambassador in Rome to seek to discourage the Italian Government from giving public support to the European consortium's bid for Westland Helicopters; when these directions were sent; and what form they took.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make public the text of the communications sent to Her Majesty's Government's embassy in Rome referred to by the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) in the debate on Westland plc on Wednesday 15 January.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the instruction issued to his officials in Italy about Italian involvement in the Westland consortium.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: On 7 January the Italian Prime Minister issued a statement which said, among other things, that the Italian Government hoped it would still be possible to choose the European option. This was the first public statement on the matter by the Italian Government.

It is not our policy to publish the texts of confidential telegrams. However, following this statement, on 8 January Her Majesty's ambassador in Rome was instructed to point out to the Italian Prime Minister's office that the British Government's position on Westland's prospects for European collaboration had been set out in the Prime Minister's letter of 1 January to Sir John Cuckney.

This letter had been published. Lord Bridges was instructed also to emphasise that Westland was a private company and that it was for the Board of Westland and the shareholders to decide on the relative merits of the proposals made by Sikorsky-Fiat and by the European consortium. It was not helpful for Governments to make public statements about matters of this kind which were internal to the United Kingdom and the concern of the private sector.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning any part played by his Department, and specifically Her Majesty's embassy in Rome, in relation to plans to assist Westland plc.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Interested posts abroad were informed of the Government's policy on Westlands. So far as Her Majesty's embassy in Rome is concerned, on 7 January the Italian Prime Minister issued a statement which said, among other things, that the Italian Government hoped it would still be possible to choose the European option. This was the first public statement on the matter by the Italian Government.

Following this statement, on 8 January Her Majesty's ambassador in Rome was instructed to point out to the Italian Prime Minister's office that the British Government's position on Westland's prospects for European collaboration had been set out in the Prime Minister's letter of 1 January to Sir John Cuckney.

Lord Bridges was instructed also to emphasise that Westland was a private company and that it was for the Board of Westland and the shareholders to decide on the relative merits of the proposals made by Sikorsky-Fiat and by the European consortium. Immigration

Mr Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether those applicants in Bangladesh, seeking entry to the United Kingdom on the basis of being British citizens, will continue to enjoy priority when new tests to ascertain family relationship are introduced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Present queueing arrangements will be unaltered. As at present those with a potential claim to the right of abode will be placed in queue 1.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what authority he has introduced a fee of £25 for those seeking entry clearance to settle in the United Kingdom; on what authority he has introduced a fee of £12 for those seeking entry clearance to visit the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The new fees were introduced by means of The Consular Fees (Amendment) Order 1985 No. 1984 made under the Consular Fees Act 1980, as was required by that legislation. The Act does not provide for any parliamentary procedure in relation to orders made under it.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in those cases where applicants seeking entry clearance to settle in the United Kingdom are shown on a single passport, each applicant will be required to pay the new fee of £25; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: When Members of a family are travelling on a single passport and made a joint application, only one fee is payable.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if any news release was issued in Bangladesh, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, concerning the announcement made by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Enfield, North (Mr. Eggar) about blood tests being required by British citizen children seeking to enter the United Kingdom from Bangladesh; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consultation took place between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Bangladesh prior to the announcement made in Bangladesh by the Parliamentary under-Secretary of State concerning the requirement of British citizen children, seeking to enter Britain from Bangledesh, to undergo blood tests to prove paternity.

Mr. Eggar: No news release was issued. Prior to the announcement I had disclosed to the Bangladesh Home Minister and Home Secretary and said that we were intending to carry out an experimental scheme in Dhaka using the DNA fingerprinting techniques.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information was issued by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State during his visit to Bangladesh, concerning the requirement of British citizen children to prove paternity by blood test; on what date; and in what form.

Mr. Eggar: Children with an established claim to British citizenship do not require entry clearance.

At my press conference at Dhaka airport on 10 January I said that we were intending to introduce an experimental scheme using DNA techniques. The technique would establish parentage in entry clearance applications where this is at issue. In response to questions I emphasised that the results of the experimental scheme would be assessed before any decision was taken to introduce the technique more generally. I stressed that participation would be entirely voluntary.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to make available the text of the announcement made by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State concerning the requirement of British citizen children, seeking to leave Bangladesh to join their fathers in the United Kingdom, to prove paternity by undergoing a blood test.

Mr. Eggar: This was not a formal statement and there is no official verbatim record of the press conference.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on what facilities exist in Bangladesh for carrying out blood tests to prove paternity, the average cost of such tests and what qualifications will be required by Her Majesty's Government of those carrying out such tests; and what information he has as to how many such people are available in Bangladesh.

Mr. Eggar: An experimental scheme only is envisaged. Blood samples will be taken by qualified medical personnel. A British doctor will be joining the high commissioner's staff later this year. The samples will be tested in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) from what date British citizen children, seeking to enter the United Kingdom from Bangladesh, will be required to prove paternity by blood tests;

(2) whether any tests to prove paternity, taken by British citizen children seeking to enter the United Kingdom from Bangladesh, will be taken on a voluntary basis.

Mr. Eggar: The parentage tests will be carried out on a voluntary basis. A definite date has not yet been fixed for the start of the experimental scheme. It is hoped that it may take place in April.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, following the return from Bangladesh of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State he will make a statement concerning the announcement that British citizen children, seeking to enter Britain from Bangladesh, will be required to prove paternity by blood test.

Mr. Eggar: No children will be required to prove parentage by means of a DNA test.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the announcement by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State during a visit to Bangladesh, that British citizen children in Bangladesh seeking to join their fathers settled in the United Kingdom will be required to prove paternity by blood test, represents Government policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State, Home Office, and I are agreed that it is desirable that a DNA experimental scheme should be carried out in Dhaka to establish the acceptability of DNA fingerprinting as a means of establishing parentage for immigration purposes. If this scheme were to be successful a decision will be taken on the further use of this technique.

Diplomatic Service (Personal Attacks)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many members of the diplomatic service have been victims of terrorist attacks in each of the last 10 years; in each instance, in which country the attack took place; and if the attackers were apprehended.

Mr. Eggar: Three members of the diplomatic service and an assistant cultural attache have been victims of terrorist attack in the period 1976 to 1985. The table shows the date and location of the attacks. None of the attackers was apprehended.

Diplomatic service: Terrorist attacks

Date	Country	Type of attack
21 July 1976	Irish Republic	Ambassador's car attacked by command wire bomb device. The ambassador, Mr. Ewart-Biggs killed together with passenger. Other passenger and driver injured.
22 March 1979	Netherlands	Ambassador, Sir Richard Sykes and footman killed at residence entrance by small arms fire. Driver wounded.
28 March 1984	Greece	Assistant cultural attache, Mr. K. Whitty (a member of the British Council) and local employee killed in car by small arms fire.
27 November 1984	India	Deputy high commissioner, Bombay, Mr. P. Norris, killed in car by small arms fire.

EMPLOYMENT

Political Levy

Mr. Lawrence asked the Paymaster General whether he is proposing to take any action to seek to ensure that every trade unionist is informed of his right to contract out of paying the political levy.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Trade unions which have held ballots to retain their political funds are obliged by statute and by their own rules to inform members of their right to contract out of paying the political levy. Any trade unionist who has not been so informed may complain to the court, which has power to require the union concerned to meet its obligations.

I shall be doing all I can to ensure union members are aware of their rights and remedies on this matter.

It should be just as much each trade union's intention as it is the Government's that members should not contribute to a political levy through ignorance either of its existence or of the simple procedure to object to paying.

A member may contract out by submitting to his union a standard exemption notice, obtainable from the union itself or from the certification officer, or by simply notifying the union in writing.

If a member pays the union subscription by deduction from earnings, the employer must cease deduction of the political levy on receipt of notice from the employee that he is exempt from, or has applied to contract out of, paying such contributions.

Youth Training

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General if he will provide a breakdown of places covered in the north west region by the following schemes (a) the community programme, (b) community industry, (c) the enterprise allowance and (d) the youth training scheme, showing mode A and B placements.

Mr. Trippier: The information at the end of November is estimated as follows.

Community industry	1,095
Community programme	27,600
Enterprise allowance scheme	9,926
Youth Training Scheme
Mode A	33,795
Mode B	11,865

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General how many 16 to 18-year-olds are (a) on the unemployment register, (b) in employment, excluding special training schemes and (c) in special training schemes, by scheme; and what percentage of the relevant age group these represent.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available information comes from different sources and refers to different dates, as follows:

(a) The number of persons aged 16-19 claiming unemployment benefit in Great Britain on 10 October 1985 was 535,697 (14·8 per cent. of all persons aged 16-19).

(b) The 1984 labour force survey estimates that the number of persons aged 16-19 in employment, excluding those on special employment and training measures, in Great Britain in spring 1984 was 1,651,000 (45·5 per cent. of all persons aged 16-19).

(c) The number of persons aged 16-19 covered by the most relevant special employment and training measures in Great Britain at the end of November 1985 is estimated as follows:

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General how many people are now on each of the following schemes: full-time job release, part-time job release, young worker's scheme, job-splitting scheme, community programme, community industry, enterprise allowances scheme, youth training scheme, and the training opportunities scheme; and if he will provide comparable figures where applicable for each of the last five years.

‡ The minimum age used throughout is 16, for consistency, even though the minimum school leaving age was 15 up to 1973.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to the answer of 17 December 1985 to the hon. Member for Leicester, East, Official Report, column 125, he will now publish in the Official Report the 50 parliamentary constituencies in which unemployment has been reduced by the greatest number since September 1984, giving the percentage reduction in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the progress of the technical and vocational education initiative and on its cost to local authorities.

Mr. Trippier: The initiative is now in its third year. In 1983, 14 local education authorities in England and Wales mounted the first TVEI projects, involving 144 schools and colleges. In 1984 the Government asked the Manpower Services Commission to extend the initiative and there are currently 74 projects in England, Scotland and Wales with 500 schools and colleges participating. Projects have proved to be popular and many have been over-subscribed. A further 28 proposals are currently being considered for a 1986 start.

All projects starting in 1984 and 1985 and due to commence in 1986 are funded up to a ceiling of £2 million over five academic years by the Manpower Services Commission. The provision of any additional funding for projects is a matter for the individual authority.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received seeking to extend to two years the youth training scheme for all 18-year-old school leavers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I have not received any such representations. Our main concern has been with the training and prospects of 16 and 17-year-old school leavers, and that concern will be met by the expansion of YTS from April this year. It will offer two years' high quality training to 16-year-old school leavers and one year for 17-year-old leavers, and the opportunity to gain a recognised qualification. This represents a major step forward for the age group.

There will be 18-year-olds on YTS, even though 18-year-old school leavers are not catered for; 18-year-olds have access to a range of Government schemes; and all our adult training programmes are open to people aged 18 and over.

Wages

Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the latest average weekly gross wages for men aged 21 years and over working (a) in the food processing industry and (b) generally in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: The latest available information for full-time manual and non-manual male employees on adult rates in the food processing and manufacturing industry relates to April 1985, and is published in tables 4 and 5 of the report, "New Earnings Survey, 1985, part A", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Gas Safety (Exhibition)

Mr. Baldry asked the Paymaster General if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to gas safety to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The exhibition will take place from 3 to 8 February. I expect to open the exhibition on 4 February.

British Holidaymakers

Mr. Terlezki asked the Paymaster General what information he has on the number of British people who took their holidays abroad in 1979 and 1984.

Mr. Trippier: Estimates of the number of holiday visits abroad by United Kingdom residents are prepared regularly from the results of the international passenger survey and published in the Business Monitors on Overseas Travel and Tourism (table 7 in the quarterly issue MQ6 and table 14 in the annual issue MA6). Copies of the 1979 and 1984 publications are available in the Library.

Tourist Organisations

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Paymaster General, further to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 724, if he will bring forward structural changes to the United Kingdom tourist organisations in order to assist in the promotion abroad of regional tourist attractions.

Mr. Trippier: The British Tourist Authority already works closely with the English regional tourist boards in its overseas promotional campaigns and the regional boards are free to mount their own overseas promotions if they wish. I am aware that the first report of the Trade and Industry Committee 1985-86, "Tourism in the UK" includes recommendations for changes in the present tourist boards structure. The Government will give a considered reply to this report in due course.

Deregulation Programme (Health and Safety Implications)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will make it his policy to publish in tandem with all deregulation proposals made by Her Majesty's Government a health and safety impact assessment of those proposals.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Deregulation is intended to reduce the burden of Government requirements on business and not to make new proposals for regulations. The Government have made clear that it remains committed to maintaining necessary health and safety protections.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General whether he will make it his policy under deregulation programmes to seek to ensure that current health and safety standards are maintained.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The Government are committed to maintaining necessary health and safety protection and has no intention of down-grading standards.

Scottish Tourist Board

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Paymaster General whether he proposes to gather the views of Scottish hon. Members on the abolition of the Scottish Tourist Board proposed in the first report of the Trade and Industry Committee 1985-86, HC 106-I; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Government's considered reply to the specific recommendations of the first report of the Trade and Industry Committee 1985-86 106-I will be delivered to Parliament in due course and will encompass the views of departments, including the Scottish Office, with a direct interest in the report's conclusions and recommendations. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will be glad to consider the views of right hon. and hon. Members in Scotland in reaching his own views on the matters the report raises.

Rosyth, Plymouth and Fife (Vacancies)

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General how many vacancies there are in (a) Rosyth and (b) Plymouth for (i) electricians and (ii) emploment relating to ship repair.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table shows, for the latest available months, the numbers of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres in the Dunfermline, which covers Rosyth, and the Plymouth jobcentre areas.

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General how many vacancies there are in engineering posts in (a) Plymouth, (b) Fife and (c) Rosyth.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table shows, for 3 November 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, the numbers of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres in engineering industries for the areas requested.

	Number
Plymouth jobcentre area	23
Dunfermline jobcentre area (includes Rosyth)	4
Fife*	31

* Unfilled vacancies in those jobcentre areas (including Dunfermline) which closely correspond to the Scottish Region of Fife.

Rosyth, Plymouth and Fife (Training)

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General what opportunities his Department provides for training in (a) engineering, (b) electrical skills, (c) computer science and (d) ship repair in (i) Plymouth, (ii) Rosyth and (iii) Fife.

Mr. Trippier: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

THE ARTS

Northern Arts

27. Mr. Dormand asked the Minister for the Arts what is the proposed level of funding for Northern Arts for 1986-87; and what were the comparable figures for the five preceding years.

Mr. Luce: It is for the Arts Council to determine the level of funding of individual regional arts association. The 1986-87 funding level for Northern Arts has not yet been announced. The table, shows comparable figures for the five preceding years.

ENVIRONMENT

Cherwell (Parish Boundaries)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he anticipates a decision being made concerning the recent review of parish boundaries within the Cherwell district council administrative area.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend hopes to make a decision shortly on proposals by the Local Government Boundary Commission in respect of Cherwell district council's parish review.

Travelling People

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of travellers' caravans on (a) authorised and (b) unauthorised sites in Greater London; and how this compares with similar estimates over the past five years.

Mr. Tracey: The Department collects information from a voluntary census carried out twice-yearly by London borough councils. The numbers of gypsy caravans recorded in the last five years are as follows:

Caravans

	Unauthorised sites	Authorised sites
January 1981	358	528
July 1981	321	450
January 1982	298	480
July 1982	292	365
January 1983	295	488
July 1983	280	514
January 1984	294	585
July 1984	300	440
January 1985*	209	407
July 1985*	277	380

* In January 1985 seven Boroughs did not make returns; in July 1985 four Boroughs did not make returns.

Planning Circulars

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many circulars on planning matters have been issued by his Department in each year since 1970.

Mr. Tracey: The numbers of planning and related circulars issued by my Department in each year since its formation in 1970 are as follows:

	Number
1970	2
1971	4
1972	10
1973	10
1974	12
1975	3
1976	15
1977	19
1978	11
1979	5
1980	2
1981	9
1982	7
1983	6
1984	10
1985	15

Tent and Caravan Camping Sites

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any intention of introducing any further changes to the law relating to the licensing of tent sites or caravan camping sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Although it remains my intention to introduce legislation to unify site licensing controls on touring caravanning and tented camping at a suitable opportunity, I cannot say when this will happen or precisely what form the legislation will take. Further public consultation is likely before any fresh proposals are introduced.

Council House Sales

Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will list details of the total numbers of completed sales of council housing to sitting tenants in each year between 1979-80 and 1984-85 in the Corby district;

(2) how many completed sales of council housing to sitting tenants have been made in the Corby district during 1985-86;

(3) whether he will list details of completed sales of council housing to non-sitting tenants in each year between 1979-80 and 1984-85 in the Corby district;

(4) how many completed sales of council housing have been made to non-sitting tenants in the Corby district during 1985-86;

(5) how many outstanding applications to buy local authority dwellings there were in the Corby district at the latest convenient date.

Sir George Young: Reported numbers of sales by Corby district council of dwellings to sitting tenants and of vacant dwellings appear in the following issues of "Local Housing Statistics" which are available in the Library:

Year	Issue Number
1980-81	62
1981-82	63
1982-83	67
1983-84 } 1984-85 }	75

In the first half of 1985-86, Corby district council reported 199 sales to sitting tenants and 12 other sales, and Corby new town reported two sales to sitting tenants.

The corresponding breakdown for 1979-80 is not available, but the district council reported selling a total of 126 dwellings.

The district council has reported that 234 accepted applications under the right to buy were outstanding at 30 September 1985: corresponding information is not available about other applications to buy.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authorities concerning the funding of voluntary projects by the London Docklands Development Corporation for the financial year 1986-87.

Sir George Young: The Secretary of State has received one such representation, from the London borough of Newham.

Fish Farming

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish legislative proposals covering fish farming.

Mr. John Patten: Proposals for legislation on fish farms were published in the consultation paper on the review of inland and coastal fisheries in England and Wales, issued jointly by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Welsh Office in July 1981. The Government intend to resolve the water abstraction difficulties associated with fish farming when the parliamentary timetable allows.

Water and Sewerage Law

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive a report from the working party on water and sewerage law.

Mr. John Patten: I have received a report on the working party's findings which I am considering.

Housing (Leeds)

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to pay an official visit to Leeds in order to inspect the condition of the city's housing stock.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend has at present no plans to do so. However, my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction is planning to make such a visit to Leeds in the near future.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what provision exists under the financial guidelines relating to management agreements under section 28 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 for compensation to agricultural or forestry employees who are made redundant as a result of the designation of a site of special scientific interest or subsequent management agreement;

(2) whether records are kept of redundancies resulting directly from the designation of sites of special scientific interest by his Department or by the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mrs. Rumbold: Management agreements entered into by the Nature Conservancy Council with owners or occupiers of land in sites of special scientific interest may include provision for payments in respect of financial losses directly attributable to changes in management practices required to conserve the scientific interest of the land. The Nature Conservancy Council would expect in appropriate circumstances to take account of losses arising from redundancy payments in negotiating an agreement.

Neither the Department nor the Nature Conservancy Council is aware of any redundancies arising from management agreements. In general, management of land to maintain or enhance its conservation interest tends to require greater use of labour intensive methods.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Asha women's group, for which the Greater London council applied on 23 October 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the All London teachers against racism and fascism for which the Greater London council applied on 17 May 1985;

Mr. Tracey: These cases are applications for my right hon. Friend's consent under section 7 of the Local Government (Interim Provisions) Act 1984 and are receiving careful consideration.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Chinese information and advice centre for which the Greater London council applied on 26 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend gave consent to this grant on 16 January.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 13 January, Official Report, column 469, if he will give details of his response of 10 December to the London Co-ordinating Committee regarding section 137 limits.

Mr. Tracey: My Department's reply to the London Co-ordinating Committee indicated that we have no present plans to amend local authorities' section 137 limits, pending the report of the Widdicombe inquiry, without firm evidence of immediate difficulties in meeting commitments and funding worthwhile projects; and that we are keeping the position under review.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Greater London council clinical waste incinerator at Edmonton will continue to be used for the disposal of clinical waste after abolition of the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The future of the facilities for the disposal of clinical waste at the Edmonton incinerator is a matter for the North London waste authority. I understand that this is presently under consideration by that authority.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has received a copy of the third report of the review group on the disposal of clinical wastes in the London area; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department was sent a copy of this Report on 23 December 1985.

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the rebuilding of a London Fire Brigade training centre for which the Greater London council applied on 31 July 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to Dial-a-ride leasing computers for which the Greater London council applied on 31 July 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Further consideration will be given to these applications when the council responds to the Department's request for further information.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Polytechnic of Central London for a study on decentralisation of services in London boroughs for which the Greater London council applied on 25 October 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Royal Society for Mentally Handicapped Children and Adults for which the Greater London council applied on 31 October 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to Palmers Green station car park for which the Greater London council applied on 22 November 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to Hounslow West station car park for which the Greater London council applied on 11 December 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Each application needs to be considered carefully on its merits. Decisions will be reached as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to an anti-speeding campaign for which the Greater London council applied on 14 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Consent was given on 15 January 1986.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the formulation of the Roundhouse as a limited company for which the Greater London council applied on 15 July 1985.

Mr. Tracey: No application has been received from the GLC for consent to the formulation of the Roundhouse as a limited company.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the Battlebridge basin refurbishment scheme for which the Greater London council applied on 20 August 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Consent was given on 26 November 1985.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 13 January, Official Report, column 469, if there have been any variations in the destination of Greater London council functions and responsibilities since they were set out in his Department's guidance note of 16 July 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I understand that the boroughs have agreed that the Inner London Education Authority will take on responsibility for the supplies department. On waste disposal, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Sumberg) at column 255-7. Otherwise, the destinations of functions remain as in annex A to the guidance note.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to update the estimates of savings and costs regarding Greater London council and metropolitan county council abolition given by Ministers during the passage of the Local Government Act 1985 and included in the explanatory and financial memorandum to that Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: No.

St. Mary's House, Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received, and from whom, concerning the proposed demolition of the listed building, St. Mary's house, Portsmouth.

Mr. Tracey: I have received no representations concerning the proposed demolition of this listed building.

Cornwallis Crescent, Portsmouth.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will make his decision on the closure of three rights of way through Cornwallis Crescent, Portsmouth.

Mr. Tracey: The city council submitted the closure order to the Secretary of State for confirmation in October, but only completed the necessary documentation last week. It will not be possible to estimate when the decision can be expected until the objectors decide whether they wish to proceed by written representations or a local inquiry.

Housing Revenue Account Dwellings

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of Exchequer subsidies and rate fund contribution, separately, to local authorities housing revenue account dwellings, on a per dwelling basis, for the years 1978-79 to 1985-86, and the estimate for 1986-87, and the number of local authority housing revenue account dwellings on which these figures are based.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 663-64]: The number of local authority housing revenue account dwellings on which the figures are based is set out as follows.

Year	Dwellings (millions)
1978-79	4.90
1979-80	4.90
1980-81	4.95
1981-82	4.91
1982-83	4·64
1983-84	4.78
1984-85	4.56
1985-86	4.55

TRANSPORT

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what system of public accountability he plans to introduce after assuming responsibility for the operation of the Woolwich ferry;

(2) what estimates he has made of the financial and manpower implications for his Department resulting from his decision to assume responsibility for the operation of the Woolwich ferry.

Mr. Ridley: Provision will be taken in the annual Supply Estimates. Those for 1986-87, to be published in March, will include provision based on costs incurred by the GLC in past years. The ferry will be included in the Appropriation Accounts presented to Parliament annually and subject to the scrutiny of the Comptroller and Auditor General. It is my intention that an agent borough will employ the staff to operate the ferry.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation he undertook and what other options he considered before deciding to assume responsibility for the operation of the Woolwich ferry.

Mr. Ridley: I consulted both generally beginning with my consultative document of July 1984 "Reallocation of Transport Responsibilities in London following Abolition of the GLC" and with the two riparian boroughs about future responsibility for the ferry. My decision about the most appropriate arrangement took account of all views expressed to me.

Public Service Vehicles

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many additional examiners have been authorised by his Department in the past year for testing and inspecting public service vehicles; and if he will list the traffic areas to which they have been allocated.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Recruitment of 24 additional examiners has been authorised.

They are allocated as follows:

	Number
Metropolitan traffic area	2
South Eastern traffic area	2
Eastern traffic area	4
South Wales traffic area	1
Western traffic area	2
West Midlands traffic area	2
North Western traffic area	3
North Eastern traffic area	6
Scottish traffic area	2

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Transport why he appointed one additional examiner to cover the London metropolitan area to test and inspect public service vehicles.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Two additional posts are located within the metropolitan traffic area. One, at the regional headquarters, Acton, will cover additional new vehicles certification work throughout the southern half of the country. The other, at the Guildford heavy goods vehicle test station, will deal with the additional work arising from deregulation in the metropolitan traffic area outside London and in the adjacent part of the south-eastern traffic area.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the number of vehicles that failed the annual public service vehicle test in 1984-85, in Wales, by operator group;

(2) what was the number of vehicles that failed the annual public service vehicle test in 1984-85, in Great Britain, by operator group.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I shall answer these questions shortly.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about London Regional Transport's bus and tube services.

Mr. David Mitchell: I receive a number of representations from time to time on LRT's bus and underground services. Detailed matters concerning services are referred to LRT as the responsibility of management.

Dangerous Substances

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if 3-amino-(1H)-1, 2, 4-Triazole, Aminotriazole has been (a) approved as a dangerous substance that is permitted for conveyance by road or (b) classified for the purpose of assigning a hazard warning sign on transporting vehicles.

Mr. Ridley: This substance is not regarded as dangerous in transport and vehicles carrying it are not required to display hazard warning panels.

Cars (Dim-dip Lighting)

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he will suspend the dim-dip lighting regulations due for introduction on 1 October in view of the decision by the European Economic Community to take the matter to the European Court of Justice;

(2) what is his estimate of the current cost per car of installing dim-dip equipment; and how this compares with his original estimate;

(3) whether he is satisfied with the technical standards of proposed dim-dip installations specified for fitment on all cars sold in the United Kingdom from 1 October.

Mr. David Mitchell: The lighting regulations require dim-dip devices on most vehicles whih are both manufactured from 1 October 1986 and first registered from 1 April 1987. I understand the European Commission is preparing an application to the European Court arguing that our regulations should include an exemption for those vehicles that satisfy the requirement of the lighting installation directive. This is not, in my view, a reason for suspending the regulations.

Such development work done by manufacturers over the last three years, about which I have information, has confirmed our original view that dim-dip can be provided quite simply and at a cost which will generally amount to a few pounds per vehicle.

The Department is satisfied that the technical requirements will ensure adequate conspicuity without the risk of glare, thus increasing road safety in well lit streets, in dull weather and in twilight.

Wheelclamps (Camden)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received any request from the London borough of Camden to permit the use of Denver Boot wheelclamps within the area of that authority.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No.

M4 (Coach Crash)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the crash on the M4 near Reading on 15 January, involving a double-decker bus.

Mr. David Mitchell: Officers of my Department have already examined the vehicles involved in the accident and are continuing to help the police with their inquiries. The coach was fitted with a speed limiter device and a tachograph, and the latter may assist further in determining the circumstances of the crash. Eleven of the 43 passengers on the coach received injuries sufficient to require hospital treatment.

Railway Passenger Services (Wortley)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he recieved an application from the British Railways Board for authority to discontinue all railway passenger services between Wortley North and Wortley South; on what date he announced his decision; what was his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have not received any such proposal from the British Railways Board.

Pavement Parking Ban

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent he plans to monitor the enforcement of the pavement parking ban under section 15 of the GLC (General Powers) Act 1974 after the Greater London council is abolished; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: When responsibility for the ban transfers to the London borough councils, it will be for them to decide what monitoring is appropriate.

Public Corporations (Investment)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport, further to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 772, if he will publish the criteria for assessing whether the submissions of public corporations relating to public sector investment decisions are commercially confidential; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: Investment submissions from public corporations frequently contain information of commercial value to their competitors.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Family Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the net weekly spending power of a man with a wife and two children aged eight and 11 years, whose gross earnings are (a) £120, (b) £130, (c) £140 and (d) £150 per week and whose rent and rates are £20 and £7 respectively (i) when he is working and (ii) if he was unemployed, assuming that he and his wife were both earning £4 per week disregarded income and in each case were receiving all benefits to which they were entitled.

Mr. Newton: The net weekly spending power of a man with a wife and two children aged eight and 11 years if his gross earnings were (a) £120, (b) £130, (c) £140 and (d) £150 a week would be £86·15, £88·42, £87·50 and £92·48, respectively.

If the family's only income, apart from benefits, was from part-time earnings and both the man and his wife had £4 of their part-time earnings disregarded for supplementary benefit purposes, the net weekly spending power would be £85·17.

Water rates of £1·65 are assumed to be included in the rates figure of £7. It is assumed that current benefit and national insurance contribution rates are in force and that fares to work are £5·95 a week. All other assumptions are as in the April 1985 tax/benefit model tables, copies of which are in the Library.

It should be noted that it is estimated that only about 1·8 per cent. of married supplementary benefit claimants have part-time earnings. The proportion where both the claimant and spouse work is not known but must be less than 1·8 per cent.

Wythenshawe Hospital

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) why Wythenshawe hospital was closed to all medical admissions for 24 hours on three occasions in recent months;

(2) why emergency chest medicine patients have recently been turned away from Wythenshawe hospital and subjected to long ambulance journeys to other hospitals;

(3) why seriously ill chest patients have frequently had to be admitted to beds in gynaecological or surgical wards at Wythenshawe hospital;

(4) why at least 70 requests for admission from family doctors were refused by Wythenshawe hospital because of the acute shortage of beds there.

Mr. Whitney: I regret we do not hold such information centrally. The right hon. Member may like to make his inquiries of the chairman of South Manchester health authority, which is responsible for the management of Wythenshawe hospital.

Schoolchildren (Smoking)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures he proposes to introduce to eliminate smoking by schoolchildren under the permitted age, following the report recently published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Mr. Whitney: The Government are concerned that, despite the well-known risks to health, young people are continuing to take up smoking in large numbers. We are funding a £1 million advertising campaign to discourage the habit among teenagers and other initiatives are being taken by the Health Education Council. They include the distribution of new health education material on smoking to all secondary schools.

South Manchester Health Authority

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now increase the resources presently available to the south Manchester health authority, and the authority's permitted level of expenditure for 1986-87.

Mr. Hayhoe: Making individual district health authorities' allocations from north-western region's growing share of resources is the responsibility of the North-Western regional health authority. The right hon. Member may care to address his inquiry to the chairman of the regional health authority.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Prescott asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the number of regular family income supplement payments in the north-west; and what proportion of the eligible population this represents.

Mr. Major: At 29 October 1985, the latest date for which information is available, there were 36,000 families in receipt of family income supplement (FIS) in the north-western social security region, which covers Lancashire, Cheshire, Cumbria and part of Derbyshire.

It is not possible to estimate what proportion of the eligible population in the area this represents but the estimate of take-up of FIS in Great Britain as a whole is about half.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he proposes to give extra publicity to the new levels of family income supplement, in view of the incorrect figure published in existing child benefit books.

Mr. Major: The main purpose for including a slip in child benefit order books is to make recipients aware of the existence of family income supplement and one-parent benefit and to refer them to leaflets and posters which can be seen at post offices and local social security offices. Both the leaflets and posters on display do publicise the correct current rates of benefit. The outdated order book slips will be replaced by the end of this month with slips giving current rates. I regret that it was not possible to insert them in child benefit order books earlier.

Benefit Reform

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish figures showing the distribution of gains and losses among working families with children as a result of (a) the proposals for family credit and (b) all changes affecting working families with children as set out in Cmnd. 9691, assuming a take-up of (i) 50 per cent. and (ii) 40 per cent. for family credit.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) on 20 December at columns 435-36.

Child Abuse

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has now decided whether information on child abuse should be reported centrally; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Bolton, South-East (Mr. Young) on 9 December at column 496.

"Reform of Social Security"

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state all the circumstances in which the family premium proposed in the "Reform of Social Security" will be paid in addition to other premiums.

Mr. Newton: A family premium will be paid to all those with children on income support and can be paid in combination with any one of the client group premiums proposed in the White Paper. In addition, an extra family premium will be paid for each disabled child in a family.

DHSS Local Offices (Birmingham)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many supplementary benefit single payments were made by the local offices in Walsall road and Soho road, Birmingham in 1985; and if he will give figures for payments (a) less than £50, (b) £50 to £100, (c) £100 to £500, (d) £500 to £1,000, (e) £1,000 to £1,500 and (f) over £1,500.

Mr. Major: During the year ending on 17 December 1985, the latest date for which information is available, the Birmingham (Perry Barr) office made 10,433 single payments and the Birmingham (Handsworth) office made 24,650 single payments.

Information about the individual value of those payments is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Vessa Sprint Wheelchairs

Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he has taken to satisfy himself of the safety of Vessa Sprint wheelchairs supplied by artificial limb and appliance centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Vessa Sprint is based on a standard departmental design modified to allow a higher degree of activity by users who, on medical assessment, show a reasonable level of co-ordination and reaction, and whose lifestyle will be enhanced by such a wheelchair. It has satisfactorily undergone safety tests normally carried out on wheelchairs supplied by the Department, including those for strength, fire retardancy and stability.

Residential Care

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received concerning different methods of treating income and capital of people in residential homes and their spouses who are supported by both supplementary benefit and a local authority through topping-up payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Representations have been made by a few local authorities and voluntary bodies. Basic differences in the local authority and supplementary benefit systems have given rise to difficulty in some cases, but where a person's means have already been assessed for supplementary benefit purposes a local authority is not obliged to make a separate assessment when topping up. We shall be considering with the local authority associations how differences in the respective systems can best be reconciled.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice he gives concerning their place of ordinary residence for the purposes of the National Assistance Act 1948 to people in residential care sponsored by a local authority, other than that in which the home is situated, responsibility for whose financial support is transferred to his Department.

Mr. Whitney: The local authority responsible for providing services under the National Assistance Act would be the authority in whose area the person concerned was ordinarily resident immediately before the need for the provision arose. Which local authority this is, is a matter to be determined on the facts in each case. If the right hon. Member has a particular case in mind, he may care to write to me.

Social Security (Reform)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what consideration he has given to the effect of his proposals in "Reform of Social Security: Programme for Action", on the medical rehabilitation services; if they will provide any disincentive to treatment; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consideration he has given to the effect of his proposals in "Reform of Social Security: Programme for Action", on the employment medical rehabilitation services; if they will provide any disincentives to rehabilitation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the right hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available about the impact on claimants in Newham arising from the proposals for the reform of social security.

Mr. Newton: None. The sample data used for the illustrative figures in the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) are not broken down by local authority.

Disablement Premium

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services at what level of earnings a man with a wife and two children who qualified for a disablement premium under income support would receive an equivalent net income from earnings and family credit; and what the figure would be if the disablement premium was included in the threshold adopted for family credit.

Mr. Newton: Assuming that no benefit on account of disablement was payable when the man or wife was in work, or if it was payable that it was disregarded in the family credit calculation (as would be the case with attendance allowance or mobility allowance), then on the basis of the illustrative amounts in para 2.4 of the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) the level of earnings would be £36·95 net, or £38·90 gross. Since, in the illustrative figures, this amount would be below the family credit threshold, and maximum family credit would therefore be payable, it would not be affected by adding a disablement premium to the threshold.

If any other benefit was payable which had to be taken into account in the family credit calculation then the level of earnings would vary depending on the amount of that benefit.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the number of disabled people aged 16 to 59 years who are not incapable of work but who are in receipt of the long-term rate of supplementary benefit; and how many of these would qualify for the proposed disablement premium.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the claimants likely to fall within the category described are not identified separately within existing statistical records and an estimate could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Those in this category who are blind will be passported on to the disablement premium through that route.

Paracetamol

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths have been directly attributed to the taking of paracetamol during each of the past five years for which figures are available; what representations he has received about the dangers of using paracetamol; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information given in the table is taken from death certificates issued in England and Wales. The 1984 figures are provisional. Paracetamol is included in a number of widely-used combination analgesics, often in combination with dextropropoxyphene. Where such a product was mentioned in a death certificate, the death is included in the "with other drug" figures. Deaths reported as suicide are included. The figures in parentheses relate to deaths where use of alcohol was mentioned.

The Committee on Safety of Medicines has received no reports of death associated with the use of paracetamol at normal doses.

I am advised that paracetamol is a very safe drug if taken in accordance with the usage instructions set out on the labels of all paracetamol, or paracetamol-containing, products. The dangers of overdose are well known and patients are told on product labels not to exceed the stated dose. No recent representations about paracetamol have been received.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many households (a) in total, (b) by tenure (council tenants, home owners and others) and (c) by household type (pensioners, families with children and others) are expected to receive (i) more and (ii) less housing benefit by up to £1 a week, £1 to £1·99 a week, £2 to £2·99 a week, £3 to £3·99 a week, £4 to £4·99 a week, £5 to £7·49 a week, £7·50 to £9·99 a week and £10 a week or more as a result of the following changes to the housing benefit scheme outlined in the White Paper: (1) the requirements that all households should meet at least 20 per cent. of their rates, (2) the changes to the needs allowance and taper formulae and (3) the treatment of capital; and if he will identify the gains and losses attributable to each of these changes individually and to the cumulative impact of all three;

(2) what is the number of households (a) in total, (b) by tenure and (c) by household type (pensioners, families with children and others) who will cease to qualify for any housing benefit as a result of the following changes to the housing benefit scheme outlined in the White Paper: (i) the changes to the needs allowance and taper formulae, and in the assessment of income and (ii) the treatment of capital.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Hearing Aids

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time which people have to wait for a hearing aid on the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: The Department no longer collects this information centrally. Responsibility for supplying hearing aids in England and Wales was transferred to Mersey regional health authority on 1 April 1985. Information collected from hearing aid centres by the authority includes the number of outpatients waiting for appointments for fitting or exchanging hearing aids.

My hon. Friend may therefore wish to contact the chairman of the health authority direct.

Ear, Nose and Throat Appointments

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average waiting time for ear, nose and throat appointments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend the information he seeks. Information on waiting times for outpatient appointments is not collected centrally.

Stanley Royd Hospital

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he received the report on the food poisoning outbreak at the Stanley Royd hospital; and if he has yet arranged for an exact date of publication.

Mr. Hayhoe: The report was received on 6 December and will be published very shortly.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received any representations from individuals seeking to reveal the addresses of supplementary benefit claimants for the purpose of private litigation to recover outstanding debts.

Mr. Major: Requests of this kind have been received from time to time. For reasons of preserving confidentiality, addresses of claimants are not provided to other individuals for the purpose of pursuing private litigation in which the Department does not have a direct interest.

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will seek powers to introduce a scheme whereby his Department deducts specific amounts from supplementary benefit claimants who have changed addresses and cannot be traced by individual creditors.

Mr. Major: We have no present plans to do so.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps have been taken for severe weather payments to be made to assist with winter fuel bills.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Batley and Spen (Mrs. Peacock) on 6 December 1985 at columns 400-1.

Breast Cancer Screening

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take the necessary steps to arrange for statistics relating to breast cancer screening to be collected centrally.

Mr. Hayhoe: Not at present. This will be considered when future policy on breast cancer screening is reviewed in the light of the report by the working group on breast cancer screening.

Speech Therapists

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the current situation in relation to the scale of remuneration for speech therapists.

Mr. Whitney: Agreement has been reached on increased salary scales with effect from 1 April 1985, and this was notified to health authorities on 27 November 1985. The new scales represented an increase of 4·81 per cent. on previous rates. The agreement did not provide for increases in allowances and the overall value of the settlement was 4·7 per cent. This was the value of all agreements reached for National Health Service staff whose remuneration is negotiated on Whitley councils.

Benefits (Appeals Advice)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements are made by the president of the Social Security Appeal Tribunals to provide appellants at those tribunals with addresses of local agencies offering advice and representation at the appeal hearing.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Wycombe (Mr. Whitney) to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 23 July at column 520.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he has made to provide people whose claims for social security benefits are refused with the addresses of local agencies offering advice and information about social security benefits.

Mr. Major: Forms notifying decisions on claims to benefit are being revised to include the following paragraph, which has been approved by the president of social security appeal tribunals:

"Help or advice

An advice centre like the Citizens Advice Bureau, or a local law centre can give you free advice. If you appeal, they will sometimes go to the tribunal with you.

You can find a list of their addresses in the 'phone book, at the front of the Yellow Pages or at the library.

It will help the advice centre if you take this letter to show them."

Officials are currently discussing with interested groups whether arrangements might be made to provide specific localised information.

AIDS

Mr. Ernie Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance Her Majesty's Government gives to those screening for acquired immune deficiency syndrome as to the extent to which they may pass on details of the tests or the results other than to the patient and his medical advisers, the form in which such information may be disclosed and the extent to which the information disclosed may identify the patient; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The advice my Department has issued on the confidentiality of information relating to people who have AIDS or are infected with HTLV III antibody is contained in the document "Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome—AIDS Booklet 2—Information for doctors concerning the introduction of the HTLV III Antibody Test", a copy of which is in the Library. That states:

"The strictest confidentiality must be maintained when an HTLV III antibody positive individual is identified . . . Unless the patient has given his consent, personal health data relating to him must not be disclosed to anyone for any purpose other than the health care of that patient, except where the disclosure is necessary to prevent the spread of infection."

Such exceptional circumstances are a matter of professional judgment by a doctor in the light of the circumstances of a case.

Sheltered Workshops

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effect the proposals in the White Paper on the reform of social security will have on the sheltered industry; and what steps he will take to protect the position of sheltered workshops for the blind and disabled.

Mr. Newton: At present, where someone is awarded a supplementary benefit single payment for household effects or furniture, and the item is known to be available at a reasonable price from a local sheltered workshop, staff are instructed to explain this to the claimant and to offer to arrange for its supply with the claimant's agreement and on his behalf. The White Paper proposes that single payments should be replaced by loans or grants from a new, discretionary social fund. We recognise the valuable work done by sheltered workshops and are examining whether comparable arrangements for the supply of workshop goods could be made under the social fund, consistent with the role of the fund as outlined in the White Paper.

Nicorette

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies have been carried out by his Department into the effectiveness of Nicorette in helping smokers giving up.

Mr. Whitney: The effectiveness of nicotine chewing gum as part of the treatment offered by general practitioners to help people stop smoking is being examined in a Government-funded study currently in progress at the Maudsley hospital.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for State for Social Services what recent guidance he has given to health authorities in England and Wales on the interpretation of the regulations governing the registration of nursing homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: For England health circular HC(84)21 was issued in October 1984. A copy is in the Library. It notified health authorities of changes in the legislation governing the registration and inspection of private nursing homes and hospitals that came into force on 1 January 1985, gave guidance on the new provisions, and commended to health authorities a handbook on registration and inspection produced by the National Association of Health Authorities. Advice on registration both as a residential care home and as a nursing home was included.

Guidance to health authorities in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for State for Social Services how many people died of food poisoning in National Health Service hospitals in 1979 and each succeeding year, distinguishing between patients and others.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 605]: The numbers of deaths occurring in National Health Service hospitals in England and Wales, where the underlying cause of death was food poisoning,* are shown in the table for each available year since 1979.

These statistics are for place of death. The location of the deceased at the time of the acquisition of the infection is not known to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. It is not possible from these statistics to distinguish between patients and others.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Higher Education

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how the United Kingdom compares internationally in the nature and scope of the support given to students in higher education.

Sir Keith Joseph: The United Kingdom is much more generous. We spend on average between three and five times as much per student as is spent in the Netherlands and West Germany and much more still compared to Denmark, France and Italy. The United Kingdom devotes a much higher proportion of its GNP to student support than other major developed countries. The following table compares two measures of student support (excluding fees) as a percentage of gross national product and per student:

Teacher Wastage

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the net wastage rate for teachers under 60 years of age in the last five years for which figures are available; how this compares with figures for the previous five years; and what proportion left the profession under schemes of early retirement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The proportion of full-time teachers under 60 years of age leaving the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector in England and Wales was 6·7 per cent. in 1983-84, the latest year for which figures are available. The proportion of wastage accounted for by teachers who left under schemes of early retirement was 20·3 per cent. Figures for 1983-84 and the previous five years are as follows:

(1) Year ending 31 March	(2) Wastage rate including early retirement per cent.	(3) Early retirement as proportion of wastage in column (2) per cent.

Schools (Expenditure)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the cost of teachers salaries as a proportion of total expenditure on education, including and excluding Government spending on the independent sector, in each year since 1978-79 to the latest available date, the amount spent by local education authorities on books and equipment over the same period at 1984-85 prices and indexed using 1978-79 figures as a base, and the amount of capital expenditure over the same period by (a) central Government and (b) local education authorities at 1984-85 prices and indexed using 1978-79 figures as a base.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information for the schools sector is as follows:

England

	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84

* The exclusion of Government spending on the independent sector has no effect on the percentages.

Pupils (Travel Expenses)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the levels of spending on travel expenses by (a) local authorities and (b) central Government for children at (i) public sector schools and (ii) independent or independent-assisted schools for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available, at 1984-85 prices.

Mr. Dunn: The expenditure on transport between home and school for pupils in maintained schools in England is as follows. The corresponding information is not available for independent schools.

1974-75	157·0
1975-76	171·3
1976-77	182·3

*Real terms are the cash expenditures for each year repriced to 1984-85 prices using the gross domestic product (market prices) deflator.

School Meals

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the percentage of school meals which have been provided free of charge to pupils in each local education authority for each year from 1975 to the latest available date;

(2) how many children received, or are expected to receive, school meals in each of the last five years to 1986-87.

Mr. Dunn: Of the figures requested by the hon. Member, information is available up to 1984 only. This can be found in the annual reports of the School Meals Census, copies of which are in the Library.

PICKUP Programme

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the targets of moneys directed by his Department via the PICKUP programme, together with the total cost of the programme so far, including and excluding (a) administration fees and (b) incidental costs.

Mr. Walden: The overall aid of the DES PICKUP programme is to increase and improve the provision of adult updating and training for employees provided by colleges, polytechnics and universities. The programme started in 1982 and the Department's annual expenditure, excluding administrative costs has been:

1983-84	763,996
1984-85	1,084,795
1985-86*	5,696,000

* Estimated

The PICKUP budget for 1985-86 is being deployed on:

Research and development (including for example, the PICKUP short courses directory, the Coventry consortium, a learning pack on marketing PICKUP.

The local collaborative projects programme (a programme of projects jointly funded by DES, MSC, WOED and SED to initiate or improve the identification of local training needs and provision to meet them).

The PICKUP university initiative (which aims to improve the response of universities to industry's training needs).

The staff development scheme (which supports the provision and organisation of FE staff development courses to update staff in their professional knowledge and skills relevant for PICKUP work).

Further education unit (a programme of curriculum projects and co-ordination and management of the PICKUP regional development agents).

Education support grant (to help local education authorities develop PICKUP activities).

The total expenditure to 31 March 1986 excluding the Department's administrative costs is estimated to be £7,833,791 and including those costs £8,351,269.

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total value of all full-value awards granted by local authorities to students over 19 years for the last five years for which data are available at outturn and at 1984-85 prices, and indexed using 1979 as a base; and what was the total value of mandatory awards according to the same categories.

Mr. Walden: Such information is not collected according to the student's age. Students in receipt of a full-value mandatory or discretionary award are normally aged at least 19, although a small number may be younger. The information relates to maintenance expenditure in respect of all students in receipt of a full-value award.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the number of new discretionary awards made each year since 1979 (a) in full and (b) in part; and what proportion they represent within total awards made.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

	Number of new full-value discretionary awards	As percentage of all new awards	Number of new lesser value discretionary awards	As percentage of all new awards
1979-80	29,279	15	50,034	25

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total cost, or the estimated total cost, to parents of the assessed contributions to student grants in each year since 1974 in (a) cash terms and (b) 1984-85 prices; and if he will provide forecasts for future years.

Mr. Walden: The information relates to all full-value mandatory and discretionary awards.

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to re-introduce his special review of student grants.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend announced on 12 November 1985, at column 113, that, since the possibility of replacing maintenance grants wholly or partly with loans had been ruled out at the present time by the Government, he did not consider that any useful purpose would be served by the publication of a consultative paper on student support.

Overseas Students

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the number of overseas students studying in higher education in European Economic Community member states, the United States of America, Japan and the Soviet Union, and the percentage they represent within the indicated full-time student population as a whole, for the latest year available.

Mr. Walden: The available information is as follows:

Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the total cost to Open University students of summer school fees together with the number of students embarking on a summer school course, by subject, for each of the last five years for which data are available.

Mr. Walden: The Open University's income from school fees, and student numbers by faculty, are given in the table. Information on student numbers by subject is not available.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average cost of an Open University ordinary degree in each of the last five years for which data are available at (a) cash and (b) 1984-85 prices.

Mr. Walden: The cost is composed of three elements: tuition fees, summer school fees and ancillary costs such as books and travel. The first two are known but ancillary costs can only be estimated. An average student attends four summer schools. On the basis the costs sought are as follows:

	Cash	1984-85 prices

Higher Education (Staff)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many (a) teaching staff and (b) research staff were employed in higher education in May 1979 and for each year since.

Mr. Walden: The available information on numbers of teaching and research staff in British universities and in public sector higher education in England since 1978-89 is as follows:

Information on research staff in public sector higher education in England is not available on the same basis. The numbers funded by sources other than the local education authority were 400 in 1983-84 and 450 in 1984-85.

O-Level Pupils

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, at the latest date for which figures are available, if he will publish in the Official Report the percentage of pupils with five or more O-levels or O-level equivalent remaining in full-time education (a) on initial entry and (b) for one or more years, in each local authority in England, and in England as a whole.

Mr. Dunn: Information is not available in the form requested. The proportions of maintained school leavers in England with five or more higher grade O/CSE passes who had either stayed on at school for sixth form study or who had left at the minimum school leaving age, intending to continue full-time education elsewhere are as shown:

Leavers from maintained schools in England with five or more higher grade(1) passes at O-level or CSE.
Total of leavers aged 15 who intended to pursue full-time courses of further education and leavers aged 16 or over, as a percentage of all leavers with five or more higher grade(1) passes at O-level or CSE.

Nursery Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentages of three and four-year-old children in each local education authority area, and in England as a whole, are (a) in full-time nursery education and (b) in part-time nursery education; and how this compares with each of the last six years.

Mr. Dunn: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Independent Schools (Teachers' Salaries)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the average levels of salaries for teachers in the independent sector.

Mr. Chris Patten: This information is not collected by the Department.

Vocational Training

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the system of vocational training within educational institutions in member states of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My Department receives regular information on vocational education and training within the member states of the European Community from a variety of sources, including the various institutions of the Community and other international institutions such as, for example, the OECD. I would draw the hon. Member's attention, in particular, to the publications of the European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training (CEDEFOP). Its vocational training bulletin appears three times a year and copies are available in the Library.

Academic Staff (Redundancies)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing how many academic staff in universities, polytechnics, higher education colleges and further education colleges have been made redundant or have taken early retirement since 1979; what proportion of the academic work force they represent; and how many in each category had tenured posts.

Mr. Walden: The number of academic staff in British universities made redundant or taking early retirement between 1981-82 and 1984-85 when the scheme was in operation is 3,317. This represents 7·8 per cent. of the 1979-80 staff, 7·7 per cent. of the 1980-81 staff, 7·7 per cent. of the 1981-82 staff, 7·9 per cent. of the 1982-83 staff, 7·9 per cent. of the 1983-84 staff and 7·8 per cent. of the 1984-85 staff.

Since 1979 the number of polytechnic teachers in England and Wales who had applied under the premature retirement scheme was 1,784. If this is expressed as a percentage of the full-time staff in each financial year from 1978-79 to 1983-84, the percentages are 10·6 per cent., 10·5 per cent., 10·6 per cent., 11·0 per cent., 11·2 per cent. and 11·5 per cent., respectively. Redundancies and early retirements for staff in other further and higher education colleges cannot readily be separated from the total number of redundancies and early retirements amongst all further and adult education staff and those from some independent schools.

Information on tenured posts is not available.

New School Building

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why his Department has ceased to collect information on the numbers of new primary and secondary schools built annually in England; and how his Department surveys the progress of their construction.

Mr. Dunn: This information is no longer required for the Department's operational purposes. Local education authorities have a duty to ensure that sufficient schools are provided and progress with the construction of schools in the maintained sector is a matter for them, or, in the case of voluntary aided and special agreement schools, for the voluntary body concerned. The Department continues to maintain a record containing information about school building projects approved by my right hon. Friend.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is (a) the amount of Government expenditure on the assisted places scheme for each year since its introduction, (b) the percentage this represents of total education spending, (c) the number of children covered by the scheme and (d) the proportion they represent within the maintained school population.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is as follows:

	Expenditure on Assisted Places Scheme (£m financial year)	Percentage of total education spending	Number of Assisted Pupils (Academic year)	Percentage of maintained secondary school population
1981-82	3·022	0·03	4,185	0·11

1983-84	14·995	0·12	13,102	0·36
1984-85	22·152	0·17	17,386	0·49

School Leaving Age

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received advocating that the school leaving age should be raised for all those who do not take a place on the youth training scheme, or any other recognised training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: None. The Government are not considering raising the school leaving age and believe that the many educational and training opportunities currently available for young people are most effectively offered on a voluntary basis.

Research Projects

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by number and value the research projects which have been funded by research councils in each of the last five years.

Mr. Walden: The number and value of research grants funded by the research councils in the academic years 1980-81 to 1984-85, in cash terms, are as follows:

£ million

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by number and value the alpha rated research projects which have not proceeded by reason of lack of funding by a research council in each of the last five years.

Mr. Walden: The number and value of alpha rated research grants which the research councils have been unable to fund in each of the past five years are as follows:

Research Council	1980-81		1981-82		1982-83		1983-84		1984-85

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the value of pure and applied research work undertaken by universities and centres of higher education which has been funded by business and educational and charitable foundations in each of the past five years.

Mr. Walden: The income of universities in Great Britain from research grants and contracts other than from Government sources has been:

1980-81	*77·2
1981-82	74·8
1982-83	90·7

Newcastle College of Law

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to which local education authorities at present do not award maintenance grants to students at the college of law and as to which authorities will not award grants for students beginning courses at the college of law in September.

Mr. Walden: The Department does not collect information on the discretionary awards policies of local education authorities.

British Antarctic Survey

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the grant proposed for the British Antarctic Survey for the financial year 1986-87; and how much was granted in 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Walden: The Natural Environment Research Council, of which the British Antarctic Survey (BAS) is a component institute, has proposed an allocation of £13,340,000 for BAS in the 1986-87 financial year. The allocation in the previous years was:

1983-84	10,356,000
1984-85	11,245,000
1985-86	12,790,000

Royal Research Ship John Biscoe

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has on the future of the royal research ship John Biscoe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The RRS John Biscoe is now 29 years old and although structurally sound cannot reasonably be expected to continue Antarctic service much beyond the late 1980s. Discussions are currently taking place between the Department and the Natural Environment Research Council on the future logistic and research requirements of the British Antarctic Survey. The issue of a replacement for the RRS John Biscoe is being addressed as part of those discussions.

Scientific Research

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether, in view of the establishment of the Save British Science movement he intends to review the present policies towards scientific research.

Mr. Walden: Government policies for the support of science are reviewed annually as part of the cycle of public expenditure surveys. The Government will continue to listen carefully to the views of distinguished British scientists.

University and Polytechnic Teachers and Researchers (Salaries)

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to institute a review of the salaries of university and polytechnic teachers and researchers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: None. The pay machinery for university teachers provides for a two-staged negotiating procedure. First, the staff side and university employers must agree to a proposal and, second, that proposal must then be agreed by a committee consisting of representatives of both sides and of the Government. Pay negotiations are in progress between the staff side and university employers.

The salaries of polytechnic teachers are considered by the Burnham further education committee. Negotiations which provided for increases phased between April and December 1985 were completed last November.

Research and Development

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the sums allocated in 1984-85 for civil and military research and development.

Mr. Walden: Details of Government expenditures on research and development are given in the annual review of Government funded R and D, which is available in the Library.

Clinical Academic Staff (Salaries)

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has yet come to a decision on the maintenance of parity between the salaries of clinical academic staff and those of their professional colleagues in the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend is not yet able to make a statement about the pay of clinical academic staff.

Grove School, Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will use his discretionary powers to halt the closure of Grove school, Portsmouth until a survey of all schools and education needs is carried out in Portsmouth.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend approved Hampshire local education authority's proposals to cease to maintain the Grove middle school, Portsmouth, in October last year. He has no power to reverse or withdraw this decision.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inland Revenue

Mr. Cartwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of unanswered letters in Inland Revenue offices at the most recent convenient date; what is the average delay in replying to letters; and what steps he is taking to seek to reduce these delays.

Mr. Moore: The Inland Revenue estimates that there were 1,100,000 unanswered letters on hand on 10 January 1986. It has insufficient information from which to determine the average delay in replying to letters. On 12 November 1985, the Inland Revenue announced measures to clear its backlog of work and I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 15 November 1985 to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, North (Mr. Baker).

Indexation

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 12 February 1985, Official Report, columns 145-46, he will update and publish the table detailing the breakdown costs or yields of reinstating the indexed 1978-79 tax regime, taking the 1985-86 income tax base.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Revenue

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 14 February 1985, Official Report, column 288, he will publish and update the table on direct revenue effects for 1985-86.

Mr. Moore: The information is as follows:

1979-80	20,599	17,620

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 11 February 1985, Official Report, columns 60-61, he will publish and update the table on total estimated tax revenue, broken down into the headings shown, for 1985-86.

Mr. Moore: Estimates based on the Autumn Statement forecast for 1985-86 are given in the table.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 28 March 1984, Official Report, column 206, he will publish and update the table showing the real changes in revenue sources between 1978-79 and 1985-86.

Mr. Moore: Estimates based on the Autumn Statement forecast for 1985-86 are given in the table. They differ from the estimates given on 29 March 1985 (WA col. 366) because the latter were based on the FSBR forecast and on an earlier estimate of the GDP deflator (used to revalue the 1978-79 estimates of revenue).

Mortgage Interest Relief

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether, in the manner of the answer given on 4 February 1985, Official Report, column 397, he will publish and update the table on mortgage interest tax relief by income group for 1985-86;

(2) whether, in the manner of the answer given on 4 February 1985, Official Report, column 397, he will (a) publish and update the table on restructuring mortgage interest relief to different rates of taxation for 1985-86, (b) report how many mortgagors receive relief at rates in excess of the basic rates of income tax and (c) report how many persons currently pay tax only at standard rate would pay tax at a higher rate if mortgage tax relief were removed from higher rates of tax; and what would be the additional income to the Exchequer.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Taxpayers

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, he will publish and update the table on the number of taxpayers for 1984-85 and 1985-86 on the same basis as the answer given on 25 January 1984, Official Report, columns 607-8.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Debt Default

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contingency provisions exist to assist United Kingdom banks in the event of default by major debtors of those banks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Should such cases arise, each case would need to be considered on its merits.

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards the use of the business expansion scheme for the provision of bed and breakfast accommodation for homeless families; and whether the use of the scheme for this purpose is limited to people designated as homeless under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 651]: The business expansion scheme is designed to encourage investment in unquoted United Kingdom trading companies. Whether or not a company which provides bed and breakfast accommodation for homeless families will satisfy the conditions of the scheme will depend on the particular circumstances.

PRIME MINISTER

Mrs. Groce and Mrs. Jarrett

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Prime Minister what formal expressions of regret have been sent by Her Majesty's Government to the families of Mrs. Groce and the late Mrs. Jarrett; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No formal expressions of regret were sent but I understand that my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary expressed his personal sympathy to Mrs. Groce's family for the injury she had suffered. I also take this opportunity to express sympathy to the families.

Commission for Racial Equality (Investigation)

Sir John Farr asked the Prime Minister what are the relative priorities in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards industry accorded to (a) co-operation with investigations by the Commission for Racial Equality, (b) the encouragement of greater efficiency through a reduction in costs and (c) the recruitment to industry of a higher proportion of the most able candidates.

The Prime Minister: The Commission for Racial Equality has powers to conduct formal investigations within industry under the terms of the Race Relations Act 1976.

The Government's policies on inflation and deregulation are aimed at reducing industrial costs as a basis for increasing competitiveness and jobs. Recruitment based on objective criteria is an essential requisite if employers are to select the best available candidates.

The Government are fully committed to policies which aim to promote racial equality, to increase efficiency and secure a better utilisation of human resources.

Mr. Abdul Shamji

Mr. Foulkes asked the Prime Minister if she will list the occasions on which she met Mr. Abdul Shamji of Gomba in the course of her official duties over the past four years; and what the purpose of the meeting was in each case.

The Prime Minister: It would be neither practicable nor reasonable for me to answer questions about where and when I meet private named individuals; and I do not propose to do so.

Records show that Mr. Shamji has attended official receptions at 10 Downing Street on the following occasions:

Reception	Date
Red Cross	19 October 1983
Commonwealth youth exchange	11 February 1985

Public Expenditure

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Prime Minister, further to her reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 709, whether she will estimate the costs associated with breaking down the Government's annual public expenditure plans by reference to each English region.

The Prime Minister: Most public expenditure is planned on a national basis as detailed in the Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89 (Cmnd. 9702). For Government Departments whose spending benefits the country as a whole, it would not be meaningful to plan expenditure by region; the costs of attempting to do so would be high but cannot be precisely quantified. For those public services which are implemented by local government, detailed budgets covering the relevant areas are drawn up by the responsible authorities and details of regional spending by health authorities are available in the annual Health Estimates.

Estimates of past levels of spending by these authorities, grouped on a regional basis, are published in the Central Statistical Office publication Regional Trends, along with central Government regional aid to industry. Estimates are also included of past expenditure on certain social security benefits by regions. The information is given in tables 4.3, 6.2, 8.9 and 10.1 of the 1985 edition of Regional Trends.

Economic Sub-Committee

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Prime Minister if, in the light of the recent revelations of Government discussions on Westland plc, she will now list the membership of the Economic Committee of the Cabinet.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my reply of 14 November 1984 to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell).

Mr. Spearing asked the Prime Minister if she will state the terms of the decision taken at the meeting of 9 December 1985 referred to in her speech of 15 January, Official Report, column 1094.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to what I said in my speech on 15 January at column 1094.

Ministers (Letters)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government regarding the circumstances in which the existence of letters to Ministers or to her marked "Private and Strictly Confidential" is denied.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) on 17 January.

Solicitor-General (Letter)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister (1) if in the course of the inquiry into the leaking of the Solicitor-General's letter of 4 January, any official of the Department of Trade and Industry has been interviewed;

(2) who is conducting the inquiry into the leaking of the Solicitor-General's letter of 4 January; and what resources are being devoted to the inquiry.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West, (Mr. Williams) on 16 January at column 629.

Westland plc

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister if she will authorise the publication of the notes prepared by civil servants on 8 January on the meeting between Sir Raymond Lygo and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister if she will publish the minute of the ministerial meeting on 9 December which discussed the possibility of a further meeting of Ministers in that week.

The Prime Minister: No. the normal rules for the release of Cabinet committee papers will apply.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if it was with her authority that an official from her office contacted the British Broadcasting Corporation and asked it not to broadcast an interview to be given by the then Secretary of State for Defence the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) on 22 December; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Against the background of a Cabinet decision on 19 December reported to the House that same day at question time, my chief press secretary, with my authority, sought to persuade neither the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry nor the then Secretary of State for Defence to participate in BBC Radio 4's "World this Weekend" programme on Sunday 22 December. In the course of this, he communicated to the BBC the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's decision to withdraw his consent to its broadcasting an interview with him which had been pre-recorded. In the event, interviews with both Ministers were broadcast.

Dr. Gilbert asked the Prime Minister if any officials in the Department of Trade and Industry have complained to either the permanent secretary or the head of the Civil Service about the accuracy of the report prepared by Mr. Mogg of the meeting between Sir Raymond Lygo and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Prime Minister if Ministers or officials of Her Majesty's Government have had discussions with members of the United States Administration about the position of Westland.

The Prime Minister: I am not aware of any view or advice offered by the United States Government nor of any request from Ministers and officials of Her Majesty's Government to the United States Government in relation to the position of Westland. Information about the Government's approach has been provided in the normal way.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister (1) if she will now authorise the publication of the document of 4 October prepared by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on Westland helicopters;

(2) if she will now authorise the publication of the document of 18 October prepared by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on Westland helicopters.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister (1) whether she authorised Mr. Jeffrey Archer to read the Cabinet and departmental papers relating to the Government's policy towards Westland;

(2) what access to Cabinet papers is given to Mr. Jeffrey Archer.

The Prime Minister: Mr. Jeffrey Archer has no access to Cabinet or departmental papers.

Ministers (Interviews)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the events surrounding approaches by her press officer to the BBC about the appearance of Ministers on the BBC radio programme "The World this Weekend" on 22 December 1985.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister what is the practice of her press office with regard to making requests to the broadcasting authorities to provide advance information concerning the identity of right hon. and hon. Members who are to be interviewed; if this procedure applies to right hon. and hon. Members of all parties; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As part of its co-ordinating function, and to amplify the information contained in the Radio Times and the TV Times, my press office has a regular two-way exchange with producers of a number of radio and television programmes. The objective is to establish the subjects the producers intend to pursue and the members of the Government they wish, or have arranged, to take part.

British Aerospace

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if she will take steps urgently to seek to improve relations between Her Majesty's Government and British Aerospace; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the exchange of letters between Sir Raymond Lygo, chief executive of British Aerospace, and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry dated 17 January 1986, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

17th January, 1986

Dear Secretary of State,

As we have stated publicly, British Aerospace regrets the controversy which has developed over what was said at the meeting held in your office on 8th January, 1986 and, of course, I totally share that view. We have not sought this situation, nor at any time has the Company or I sought to question your integrity. I understand that likewise you are not questioning my own integrity either personally or as the Chief Executive of British Aerospace.

In the House of Commons yesterday, in answer to questions, the Prime Minister did not demur from the view that there must have been a misunderstanding of the remarks you made to me at the meeting. I understand that you have since expressed your assent to that general proposition. I welcome this. If, indeed, you said only that it was in the national interest that the present uncertainty over Westland's future be ended as soon as possible and not, as I previously understood you to say, that the continuing campaign on behalf of the European Consortium was against the national interest, I would accept that. I also accept that you at no time said that "British Aerospace should withdraw from the European Consortium", nor have I ever suggested that you used those words. However, in the course of our discussion of the possible risks to British Aerospace of the leading role we had recently adopted in support of the European Consortium — risks which we mutually recognised — we discussed the possibility of the Company reverting to the lower profile it had previously adopted in order to lessen those risks. I believe it may have been during this part of our conversation that an unfortunate misunderstanding arose and it may well be that you intended to infer that, in view of British Aerospace's wider interests, I personally should withdraw in the sense of lowering my profile as spokesman for the Consortium.

I notice there are certain other discrepancies in our respective records of the meeting, but these appear relatively minor.

I very much hope the matter can be left on this basis.

I have shown this letter to my Chairman, Sir Austin Pearce, who fully approves its content.

Yours sincerely,
Ray Lygo

17 January 1986

Dear Sir Raymond,

Thank you for your letter of today's date.

I am most grateful to you for writing. I believe the misunderstanding between us has now been cleared up. Certainly I do not question—and have never sought to question—your integrity, either personally or as Chief Executive of British Aerospace.

Yours Sincerely,
Leon Brittan

Gifts

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister if she will list all the gifts she has received in her official capacity above the value of £1,000 and which she has not retained personally on the grounds that their value is in excess of the permitted limit, since 1 January 1984.

The Prime Minister: There have been several such gifts. I am not, however, prepared to give details of the individual gifts which I have received; to do so would risk discourtesy to the donors. Such gifts have been dealt with according to the rules, which I referred to in my reply to the hon. Gentleman on 15 January at column 578.

DEFENCE

HMS Endurance

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been made for the refitting of HMS Endurance; and what is the estimated cost of the refit.

Mr. Lee: HMS Endurance is to be refitted at Devonport dockyard starting in mid-1986. For planning purposes, a cost for the work of some £16 million has been assumed.

Battlefield Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has made in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation for the negotiation of reductions in battlefield nuclear weapons by both the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the Warsaw pact countries.

Mr. Stanley: Battlefield nuclear weapons are not currently the subject of arms control negotiations. Priority is rightly being given by the United States and the Soviet Union to reaching agreements on strategic and intermediate range weapons. However, NATO has made clear its commitment to retain only the minimum forces required for deterrence, as has been demonstrated by the withdrawal of 1,000 warheads from Europe since 1979, and the decision at Montebello in 1983 to remove a further 1,400 over the next few years.

NATO Nuclear Planning Group

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the date and location of the next meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's nuclear planning group.

Mr. Stanley: The next meeting of the NATO nuclear planning group will be held in the Federal Republic of Germany in spring 1986. Further details will be released nearer the time.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when SACEUR's team on the modernisation of United States' battlefield nuclear weapons assigned to support the British Army of the Rhine will hold discussions with his Department;

(2) whether the W-82 155mm artillery fired atomic projectile is being considered as a replacement for existing nuclear artillery shells assigned to the British Army of the Rhine;

(3) whether the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's modernisation plan for its battlefield nuclear weapons includes a new short-range ballistic missile and a nuclear version of the multiple launch rocket system.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member on 14 January, at columns 562-63, and to the NATO nuclear planning group's final communiqué of 30 October 1985, a copy of which is in the Library.

The details of SACEUR's proposals for reductions and improvements affecting NATO's nuclear forces in Europe are classified.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence's predecessor has made it clear that a report would be made to Parliament in respect of modernisation affecting British forces when the appropriate moment comes.

Research and Development

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the proposed military research and development science budget for 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested for 1986-87 is not yet available. Details of defence research and development expenditure for 1985-86 and earlier years are given in tables 3.2 and 3.3 of the "Statement on Defence Estimates 1985, Volumne 2" (Cmnd. 9430-II).

Apprentices (Royal Dockyards)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence, in the last two years for which figures are available, how many apprentices who completed their training in Devonport or Rosyth dockyards found work in Devonport dockyard and Rosyth dockyard.

Mr. Lee: The table gives the numbers of apprentices re-employed as craftsmen on completion of training in the last two years at Devonport and Rosyth dockyards.

Year	Devonport	Rosyth
1984	242	100
1985	128	104

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed in apprentice training in Rosyth dockyard.

Mr. Lee: There are 46 instructional staff employed in the apprentice training centre at Rosyth dockyard.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many apprentices have been trained in Devonport in each of the last 10 years; and in what skills.

Mr. Lee: Apprenticeships normally take four years. Those completing training in each of the years in question were as follows:

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed in apprentice training in Devonport dockyard.

Mr. Lee: There are 61 instructional staff employed in the apprentice training centre at Devonport dockyard.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many applicants there were for the apprentice training schemes in Devonport and Rosyth dockyards in the last three years.

Mr. Lee: This information is not available. However, the numbers of applicants at each dockyard in the last three years who sat the apprentices training scheme entry examination were as follows:

	Devonport dockyard	Rosyth dockyard
1983	1,407	1,110
1984	1,401	1,078
1985	935	1,109

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many apprentices were trained in Portsmouth dockyard for the five years before training ceased.

Mr. Lee: The table gives the number of craft apprenticeships completed in Portsmouth dockyard in each of the five years up to 1981, when training was suspended. Apprentice training was resumed under the reformed Portsmouth fleet maintenance and repair organisation in 1984.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what apprentice courses are available in Rosyth dockyard;

(2) what apprentice courses are available in Devonport dockyard.

Mr. Lee: Apprentice courses are available at Devonport and Rosyth dockyards for training in the following trades: fitter turner; electrical fitter; boilermaker; iron caulker riveter; joiner; coppersmith; welder; painter-glazier; blacksmith; plumber; shipwright; founder; hosemaker; patternmaker; sailmaker.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many apprentices have been trained in Rosyth in each of the last 10 years and in what skills.

Mr. Lee: Apprenticeships normally take four years. Those completing training in each of the years in question were as follows:

Flight Lieutenant M. J. J. Gray

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the procedures and conduct of the Royal Air Force in the time leading up to the court-martial of Flight Lieutenant M. J. J. Gray on 16 October 1985 at RAF Station Laarbruch.

Mr. Lee: Yes.

Defence School of Music

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the escalation in costs of resiting the Defence School of Music at Deal.

Mr. Lee: The earlier studies on the Defence School of Music made certain assumptions about musical training requirements and methods, on which the capital cost estimates were based. More detailed studies during 1985 resulted in proposals for enhanced training and additional facilities. The estimated capital costs accordingly rose from £5·8 million to £10·6 million. We are now examining the requirement for instruction and buildings in order to bring the cost down to the original estimate.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has made any assessment of the cost of siting the Defence School of Music at Portsmouth, as compared with Deal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The investment appraisal carried out early in 1985 showed that the total costs of siting the Defence School of Music were greater at Eastney than at Deal. The subsequent increase in the estimated capital costs at Deal were the result of enhanced requirements and therefore would have applied equally to a Defence School of Music site elsewhere. These costs are now being re-examined.

Westland plc

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what access Mr. Jeffrey Archer has been given to his Department's papers regarding Westland.

Mr. Norman Lamont: None.

Tuscano Aircraft

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he is satisfied with progress on the Shorts Tuscano aircraft;

(2) when the first 12 Shorts Tuscano aircraft will enter Royal Air Force service;

(3) when the Shorts Tuscano will enter Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There has been some slippage in the programme, due partly to a strike at Shorts, which is expected to lead to a few months' delay in the delivery of the early Tuscano T Mk 1 aircraft. The first aircraft is forecast to be delivered in early 1987 and the first 12 by the end of 1987. We hope to be able to recover some of the slippage later in the delivery programme.

Armoured Personnel Carriers (Berlin Brigade)

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if any orders have been signed for armoured personnel carriers intended for use by the Berlin Brigade of the British Army.

Mr. Stanley: No orders have been signed.

Berlin (Procurement)

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what financial limits are placed on procurement contracts which may be entered into by the Commander and Military Governor of Berlin's British sector.

Mr. Stanley: The GOC Berlin, in common with other military commanders, has limited delegated financial powers to approve local procurement of goods and services. These limits vary depending upon the commodity being purchased, but do not exceed £2,500. Orders in excess of this limit, even though they may be contracted for locally, are subject to the prior approval of HQ BAOR.

Milk Production

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish statistics for each member state of the European Economic Community showing how far milk production has been restricted consequent upon the introduction of production quotas.

Mr. Gummer: The milk supplementary levy system was introduced on 2 April 1984. The table compares deliveries to dairies throughout the Community for the 1983-84 and 1984-85 marketing years. These figures show that in most member states, and in the Community as a whole, deliveries fell during the first year of implementation of quotas.

ENERGY

Hinckley Point

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) pursuant to his reply of 21 November, Official Report, column 279, whether any steam or gases were released to the atmosphere from the steam side circuits of the boiler systems of reactor 4 at Hinckley Point nuclear power station on 25 October; whether any part or parts of the steam side circuits became contaminated during the incident; whether any steam or gases released may have been contaminated; and if he will estimate the radioactive inventory of any such releases;

(2) pursuant to his reply of 21 November, Official Report, column 279, if he will state the volume of water, in gallons, that escaped into reactor 4 of Hinckley Point nuclear power station on 25 October.

Mr. Goodlad: This is a matter for the Central Electricity Generating Board. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Coalmining Subsidence

Mr. Concannon asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his conclusions on the Waddilove committee report on coalmining subsidence claims.

Mr. David Hunt: The Waddilove report raised a number of complex issues which are undergoing full and careful consideration; the Government's response will be published as soon as possible.

Coal Exports

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much coal mined in the United Kingdom was exported in each of the last 10 years; what were the main destinations; and what is his policy towards coal exports by the National Coal Board and the extent to which such exports should be profitable.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government expect the National Coal Board to maximise its long-term profitability by securing those sales which are profitable on a continuing basis in competition with other fuels. Within this the level and profitability of NCB coal exports is a matter for the board's commercial judgment.

Details of coal exports since 1976 are shown in the table.

Hinckley Point

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will explain the circumstances in which potassium iodate tablets were taken by personnel at Hinckley Point nuclear power station of 29 November; what was the maximum level of individual exposures anticipated at that time; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the maximum individual effective dose equivalent commitment in milli-sieverts of any person as a result of the site incident at Hinckley Point nuclear power station on 29 November; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list and describe the calculated total radioactive inventory of the gas, including any fissile particles and debris, released from reactor 3 at Hinckley Point nuclear power station during and subsequent to the site incident on 29 November; what was the calculated collective effective dose equivalent commitment in man-sieverts arising from this incident; and what proportions were attributable to (a) personnel on the site and (b) members of the public outside the site;

(4) what were the quantities of carbon dioxide gas coolant released from reactor 3 at Hinckley Point nuclear power station during and subsequent to the site incident on 29 November (a) as an unfiltered escape and (b) as deliberate releases, stating the degree to which these were filtered to remove fissile particles and debris; and if he will list and describe the radioactive inventory of the gas in the reactor immediately prior to the incident;

(5) if he will estimate the approximate number of days in a year on which fissile products from damaged nuclear fuel elements are present in the carbon dioxide gas coolant of (a) a typical Magnox power reactor and (b) a typical advanced gas-cooled reactor; and if he will describe the typical length of delay before a damaged fuel element is withdrawn from a reactor;

(6) if he will publish a list showing, for each type of nuclear power reactor in commercial use, and for each type of nuclear fuel element, the typical rate of failure of fuel element integrity under normal operating conditions in a reactor;

(7) if he will estimate the approximate daily cost of reactor 3 at Hinckley Point nuclear power station being shut down following the site incident on 29 November; and if he will make a statement;

(8) what was the number of days in the last year on which fissile products from damaged nuclear fuel elements were present in the carbon dioxide gas coolant of each of the four reactors at Hinckley Point nuclear power station; and if he will make a statement;

(9) if he will describe the measures undertaken, in progress, or planned to inspect and test gas circulators on reactor 3 and reactor 4 at Hinckley Point nuclear power station following the site incident on 29 November, stating when such work is likely to be completed; if he will describe the precautionary measures taken before such inspection and testing is properly completed; and if he will make a statement;

(10) if he will describe the circumstances in which some minor fault or faults in a gas circulator on reactor 3 at Hinckley Point nuclear power station led to a site incident being declared on 29 November; and whether he is satisfied at present that reactors with such gas circulators are safe for continued operation.

Mr. Goodlad [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1985, c. 751-52]. This is a matter for the Central Electricity Generating Board. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

SCOTLAND

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to introduce further measures aimed at the seizure and confiscation of the profits of drug trafficking crimes in Scotland in the light of the measures proposed by the Home Secretary in the Drug Trafficking Offences Bill.

Mr. Rifkind: Like my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, I am determined that the courts should have all the powers they need to deal effectively with the crimes of drug traffickers. Scottish courts have already been given new powers, in the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1985, which contribute to this end: in particular, Scottish courts passing custodial sentences on indictment for such crimes must now have regard to the profits made and impose a fine as well as a custodial sentence unless satisfied that it would be inappropriate to do so. If such an offender is sentenced to imprisonment because that fine has not been paid, he will serve that additional period of imprisonment consecutively.

The measures proposed by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary in the Drug Trafficking Offences Bill go beyond this, and I intend at the earliest opportunity to introduce equivalent legislation suitable for operation in Scotland. It would not be practicable simply to extend the Bill to Scotland, as there are distinctive features of our legal system which require to be taken into account in preparing a suitable legislative scheme for Scotland relating to forfeiture of proceeds of drug trafficking. For example, while the use of receivers and of charging orders in the enforcement procedures under the Home Office Bill builds on established English law, both would require novel provisions in Scotland.

The Scottish Law Commission, which has carried out some preliminary work on the general question of forfeiture in response to a reference which my predecessor gave them in 1985, agree with the view that extension to Scotland of the Home Office Bill is not a viable option. Moreover, this work has shown that the commission's normal process of consideration of and consultation on separate Scottish legislation could not be completed in time to allow for legislation in the present Parliament. Given the urgent need for legislation on the forfeiture of the proceeds of drug trafficking, I think it would be inappropriate to delay legislation on this particular issue to allow for completion of that reference. After consultation with the commission, I have suspended the reference meantime and have instructed my officials to set in hand the preparation of legislation on that topic.

I am most grateful to the commission both for its preliminary work and for its kind offer of advice on problems that may arise in relation to the preparation of such a Bill.

Meanwhile, provision will be made in the Home Office Bill to enable orders of the courts in England and Wales made under the Bill to be enforceable in Scotland through the Scottish courts. This will ensure that Scotland does not become a haven for the assets of drug traffickers within the jurisdiction of the English courts.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the statistics for the assisted places scheme in the 1985-86 school session in Scotland, and the income scale which will apply to the scheme in school session 1986-87.

Mr. Rifkind: At the beginning of the current school session there were 2,583 pupils receiving assistance under the assisted places scheme. Additional pupils will be admitted to assisted places throughout the 1985-86 school session.

Of the 2,583 pupils in the scheme, 1,300 (50 per cent.) attended a fee paying school prior to taking up an assisted place. The corresponding proportion for the new intake of pupils joining the scheme at the beginning of the current session was 48 per cent.

The scheme continues to concentrate assistance on lower income families. In 1985-86, 1,267 pupils (49 per cent. of those in the scheme) will be receiving full fee remission because they have a family income of £6,376 per annum or less. A further 146 pupils (6 per cent.) have family incomes between £6,377 and £7,000 per annum and 242 (9 per cent.) between £7,001 and £8,000.

For school session 1986-87 I propose to lay regulations before the House in due course providing for progressive parental contributions for one assisted pupil in relation to family income as follows:

Part of relevant income to which the specified percentage applies	Parental contribution (per cent.)
That part (if any) which exceeds £6,640 but does not exceed £7,220	9
That part (if any) which exceeds £7,220 but does not exceed £7,810	12
That part (if any) which exceeds £7,810 but does not exceed £8,980	15
That part (if any) which exceeds £8,980 but does not exceed £10,780	12
That part (if any) which exceeds £10,780 but does not exceed £13,130	24
That part (if any) which exceeds £13,130	33

The relevant income scale is open ended, but the remission can of course be given only where the parental contribution is less than the school tuition fee.

School Examinations

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make a statement about the implementation of standard grade and revised higher grade examinations.

Mr. Rifkind: The Government have given very careful consideration to the revised timetable for the introduction of standard grade which my predecessor announced on 15 January last year, at column 39.

The Government remain firmly committed to the introduction of standard grade and to the consequent revision of higher grade. The new courses offer more relevant and effective education for children of all abilities and have continued to receive wide support both from within the education service and from universities, employers organisations and other users of the certificate. It therefore remains a central aim to introduce standard grade for all pupils in all subjects as soon as possible.

I recognise, however, that the boycott of curricular development which the Educational Institute of Scotland and other teachers' unions have operated since August 1984 has seriously affected the implementation of the standard grade courses which were introduced in 1984 and the development of new courses. This is in spite of the strong support of many teachers for the principles of standard grade. It has meant that relatively few schools will be able to present pupils for standard grade in 1986 and has led to serious uncertainty both about the future of standard grade and about arrangements for certification if standard grade continues to be boycotted in many schools.

My aim is to reach an early settlement of the teachers' dispute which will among other things secure the commitment of teachers to curriculum development. The Government have recognised however that there is force in the argument that in present circumstances the proposed pace of curricular change is likely to prove too fast for the education service, in particular for the classroom teacher. I also believe it is essential that avoidable uncertainty about future examination arrangements should not continue. In the light of these factors I am making the following proposals:

i. standard grade examinations for the courses introduced as phase 1 of the programme should take place as planned in 1986 and 1987 and should continue thereafter.

ii. examinations for subjects in phase 2 of the programme should be held as planned in 1988 and subsequently.

iii. standard grade computing studies should be offered for examination in 1988 as part of phase 2 rather than in phase 3 as originally planned, because of the wide support shown for the new course.

iv. otherwise, the courses in phase 3 of the programme should be offered for first examination as planned in 1989, subject to consultation on the course proposals. Development work in some subjects however has been seriously affected by the dispute and introduction of these may have to be deferred for one or more years with first examinations in 1990 or later. Precisely which of these subjects have to be deferred will be determined as soon as possible in the light of progress.

v. further consideration should be given to the position of subjects not so far included in the first 3 phases of standard grade but little progress on developing further courses can be expected until after the teachers' dispute has been resolved.

vi. the development programme for the revision of highers and post-highers should continue where possible so that the new courses can be available to follow on from standard grade as long as they can be developed satisfactorily in the present circumstances and achieve appropriate recognition.

vii. at the same time however the traditional forms of examination at ordinary grade, higher grade and for the certificate of sixth year studies should continue to be offered in parallel with the revised forms of examination. Once satisfactory progress has been made in implementing each phase of the new examinations, I would expect the traditional forms to be withdrawn but no decision on the timing of withdrawal would be taken until after the dispute is over.

I believe that these proposals will relieve the present uncertainty about future public examination arrangements for schools and allow education authorities and their schools to proceed with the implementation of standard grade as best they can in present circumstances. Authorities will wish to note that the Government's expenditure plans continue to provide for staffing in secondary schools of 6 per cent. over Red Book in order to allow for the implementation of standard grade.

My officials have written to the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and to the Scottish Examination Board to seek their urgent comments on these proposals.

Road Accident (East Lothian)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many accidents occurred on the A1 road in East Lothian, involving damage to vehicles or property, injuries to people and death, respectively, in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Ancram: The numbers of reported road accidents involving personal injury or death from 1979 were as follows:

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Fatal	6	—	7	1	6	3
Injury only	87	81	86	75	78	83
Total	93	81	93	76	84	86

Because of technical difficulties, figures prior to 1979 are not available. Information on accidents involving vehicle or property damage only is not held centrally.

Agriculture and Veterinary Services

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what criteria were used to determine the cuts in advisory and specialist services given by Scottish agricultural colleges;

(2) what criteria were used to determine the reduction of funding for the veterinary investigation services in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: Decisions on the planned reductions in the funding of the agricultural advisory services with effect from 1 April 1987 were taken as part of the 1984 public expenditure survey and reflect the Government's view that those who use and benefit from the services provided should make a contribution towards their cost.

The veterinary investigation services in Scotland are provided by the three Scottish agricultural colleges as part of the advisory services to the agriculture industry.

Food and Environment Protection

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland which agency will monitor and provide inspectors for the implementation and enforcement of part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 in Scotland; and if he will indicate by region how many extra inspectors will be provided.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 January by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the similar question he addressed to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Leverndale Psychiatric Hospital

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland on what basis charges are being made to patients at Leverndale psychiatric hospital in Glasgow for certain items of furniture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The report of the working party on Incapax patients funds which was published in July 1983 reminded health boards that there is much scope for improving the quality of life for patients who are incapable of managing their own affairs by making fuller use of the funds to which they are entitled; and guidelines were suggested as to how this was to be achieved. The report stressed, however, that patients' funds should not be used to purchase goods or services which would normally be provided by the National Health Service. It is for Greater Glasgow health board to indicate the basis on which the purchase of items of furniture is to be charged to individual patients' funds at Leverndale hospital.

WALES

Higher Education

Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is able to announce his decisions on local authority higher education provision in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Having consulted the Welsh Joint Education Committee and the Welsh Counties Committee I have decided that the advanced further education quantum for 1986-87 should be set at £31·0 million. This represents an 8·8 per cent. increase between 1985-86 and 1986-87.

I have received advice from the Wales Advisory Body on the planned disposition of academic provision and the number of student places on higher education courses in local authority colleges in Wales. The WAB proposals provide for a 3 per cent. growth in student numbers between 1985-86 and 1986-87, rising from approximately 13,200 to 13,595 in 1986-87. The proposals provide for a continued emphasis to be given to courses in science, engineering and other vocational disciplines and for sub-degree and part-time provision to be protected. The WAB has also provided advice on how the AFE quantum of £31·0 million should be distributed between local authorities, and I have also consulted the WJEC and the WCC about this. The proposals for distributing the quantum are related to the proposals for target student numbers for 1986-87 by institution, mode of attendance and subject, and they allow additional funding for degree and postgraduate courses. The method of allocation proposed will put pressure on high spending institutions to become more cost effective, but will also protect institutions against unacceptably large reductions in their funding between 1985-86 and 1986-87.

I have decided to accept the WAB's advice on academic provision and student numbers and on the methodology for distributing the quantum. In the absence of firm advice from the WAB about a minimum level of funding, I have decided that for 1986-87 every local education authority will receive at least 92½ per cent. of its 1985-86 allocation. Local education authorities have been informed of these decisions and of their individual allocations.

Copies of a note explaining the method by which the AFE quantum for 1986-87 are being distributed and have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Council House Sales

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many council houses were sold in 1979 in Wales and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I refer my hon. Friend to table 29 of the publication "Welsh Housing Statistics No. 5, 1985", a copy of which is in the Library.

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many working days have been lost in Wales during the years 1977, 1978, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984, respectively, as a result of industrial action.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The number of working days lost in Wales due to industrial disputes for each calendar year requested was as follows:

Year	Days lost ('000)
1977	667
1978	444
1980	2,918
1981	292
1982	283
1983	353
1984	3,527

Regional Development Grant

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many approved applications for regional development grant were outstanding for payment at 30 November 1985; how much money these applications represent; and what further delay he expects.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: 2,317 approved applications for old-style regional development grant were outstanding at 30 November 1985, representing approximately £46 million of grant. Payment of grant on each application will be made within the terms of the four-month moratorium announced on 17 January 1985.

Environment Policy

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to set up one overall co-ordinating elected body in Wales to subsume the work of the National Parks, the National Trust, the Nature Conservancy and the Countryside Commission on an all-Wales level.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. The National Trust is an independent body which is not, and should not be, subject to Government control. I have no evidence to suggest that a new body is necessary to subsume the functions of public sector bodies involved.

Company Registrations

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many new companies have been registered in Wales in each year since 1983.

Mr. Michael Howard: I have been asked to reply.

All companies incorporated in England and Wales are registered at Cardiff. No separate statistics are kept of those who have their registered offices in Wales or in any other area. The Registrar of Companies estimates that about 2 per cent. of companies incorporated (currently at the rate of 100,000 per year) have their registered offices in Wales.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

UNESCO

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to continue the functioning of the National Commission on the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation following British withdrawal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: I have disbanded the United Kingdom National Commission for UNESCO.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Gross National Product

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the latest available figure for average gross national product per capita in Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries; what comparable information he has for the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance countries and the rest of the world, respectively; and what information he has as to the trends in these figures in the past decade.

Mr. MacGregor: It is well recognised that international comparisons of national income, product and expenditure are best made in terms of purchasing power parities. The latest available data for OECD on this basis are given in the OECD publication "National Accounts —Main Aggregates Volume 1, 1960-1983", page 125. This is available in the Library. For the OECD as a whole, the figures since 1976 are as follows:

GDP per head in current dollars using current purchasing power parities

(US dollars)

	OECD—Total
1976	5,975
1977	6,516
1978	7,219
1979	8,021
1980	8,823
1981	9,741
1982	10,284
1983	10,914

There are no fully comparable data for the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance countries, nor for the rest of the world as a whole. Such estimates as are published by other international bodies must be treated with extreme caution.

EC (Budget)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to take any steps to counter the European Commission's implementation of the Community budget in the form approved by the European Parliament; if he intends to pay the United Kingdom's share for February on the basis of the budget approved by the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

EMPLOYMENT

Trade Union Ballots

1. Mr. Marlow asked the Paymaster General how many unions have received public money for trade union ballots.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I am informed by the certification officer that 27 trade unions have received public money for secret ballots under the provisions of section 1 of the Employment Act 1980.

21. Mr. Hayward asked the Paymaster General how many unions have now brought their election practices into line with the Trade Union Act 1984.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Press reports indicate that 19 trade unions have decided to change their electoral practices in order to comply with the 1984 Act. Others are considering changes. For some unions no changes will be necessary.

Unions which do not afford their members the democratic rights required by the Act leave themselves open to challenge by any member through the certification officer or the courts.

23. Mr. William Powell asked the Paymaster General how many pre-strike ballots have taken place under the provisions of the Trade Union Act 1984.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Department is aware of 115 pre-strike ballots believed to comply with the provisions of the Trade Union Act 1984, but there will have been other ballots which the Department does not know about.

Small Firms

2. Mr. Hind asked the Paymaster General what progress has been made in reducing bureaucratic burdens on small firms.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Government have made good progress in following up the proposals in the White Paper "Lifting the Burden" to reduce the administrative requirements on business and particularly small firms. We intend to produce a second White Paper reporting progress and making further proposals later this year.

31. Mr. Soames asked the Paymaster General what steps he proposes to take to seek to encourage small firms to use distance learning packages to improve their management expertise.

Mr. Trippier: I am anxious to encourage small firms to consider relevant training opportunities of all types as a route to success. Open learning methods have much to offer the small business sector in a number of areas including management training. The Manpower Services Commission's open tech programme has funded the North East Wales Institute to design material specifically for small businesses, and these packages will be available early in 1986. Other open tech projects have produced material which is helpful for small businesses. Training using open learning methods can be funded by the MSC through the normal rules applying to grant payments under its other schemes.

In the context of our request to the commission to focus adult training programmes more sharply on the needs of small firms and enterprise, we have asked the MSC to consider whether there is a need for additional open learning material to improve the management expertise of small firms, and whether more should be done to make small firms aware of the facilities available to them.

36. Mr. Bellingham asked the Paymaster General what is the net increase in small firms in the United Kingdom over the last 12 months.

Mr. Trippier: It is estimated that the net increase in the number of small firms in the United Kingdom in 1984 (the latest period for which an estimate is available) was of the order of 35,000.

The figures were published in British Business on 23 August 1985, and a copy has been placed in the Library.

71. Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Paymaster General what is the trend in venture capital investment in small firms.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Chope) on 3 December 1985, at column 183.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General what training supported wholly or partly from public funds is available for those starting small firms.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission supports a range of training courses for people wishing to start up their own business as part of the training for enterprise programme. In the current financial year the programme has a budget of £14·3 million, and around 25,000 people setting up or running small businesses are expected to benefit.

In addition, many further and higher education institutions provide courses geared to the needs of new and small businesses.

We have asked the Manpower Services Commission to focus its adult training programmes more sharply on the needs of small firms, and I am at present considering whether more needs to be done to encourage those starting small firms to undertake relevant training.

Hi-tech Centres

11. Mr. Hoyle asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to encourage hi-tech centres.

Mr. Trippier: Information technology centres are an important national resource and we shall continue to support them, both with normal youth training scheme funds and with special transitional financing. We are also actively encouraging improved marketing, business planning and diversification of their training activities.

Labour Statistics

14. Mr. Cabom asked the Paymaster General what proportion of the work force was unemployed in May 1979; and what is the proportion unemployed at the present time.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 12 December 1985 the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate, excluding school leavers, was 13·2 per cent. The corresponding unemployment rate for May 1979 was 4·9 per cent.

22. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General how many people have been unemployed for over one year, two years and three years, respectively; and what were the comparable figures for May 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table shows the requested information in respect of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom as at 10 October 1985, the latest data for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, and for unemployed registrants at 5 April 1979 (not available for May 1979). The figures for April 1979 and October 1985 are not comparable because of changes in the way the figures are collected.

Unemployment—United Kingdom

Registrants	Over One Year	Over Two Years	Over Three Years
5 April 1979	366,711	179,784	106,351
Claimants
10 October 1985	1,351,857	823,127	532,573

24. Mr. Skinner asked the Paymaster General how many people have been unemployed for 12 months or more; and what this is as a percentage of the total number of registered unemployed.

78. Mr. Flannery asked the Paymaster General what are the numbers of people who have been unemployed for over 12 months; and what this is as a percentage of those registered as unemployed.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 10 October 1985, the latest date for which an analysis by duration is available, the number of claimants in the United Kingdom, who had been unemployed for over 12 months, was 1,351,857. This is 41·3 per cent. of the total.

27. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many of those presently unemployed are under 25 years of age; and what percentage of the total unemployed this represents.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 10 October 1985, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by age is available, the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom under 25 years of age was 1,245,218 —38 per cent. of the total.

28. Dr. M. S. Miller asked the Paymaster General how many people have been unemployed for over 12 months; and what was the figure for May 1979.

72. Mr. Welsh asked the Paymaster General what are the numbers of people who have been unemployed for 12 months or more; and what were the figures for May 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 10 October 1985 the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, the number of claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for over 12 months was 1,351, 857. It is difficult to make a comparison with April 1979 (no figures are available for May) because of changes in the way figures were collected. However, the number of registrants who had been unemployed for over 12 months in April 1979 was 366,711.

37. Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Paymaster General if he will indicate the aggregated component numbers from which a conclusion has been deduced adding 600,000 to the total number in full-time employment.

Mr. Alan Clark: The employed labour force is estimated to have increased by 709,000 (seasonally adjusted)—from 23,015,000 to 23,724,000—between March 1983 and September 1985, the latest date for which figures are available. The estimates cover the number of employees in employment, self-employed and members of Her Majesty's forces, whether working full time or part-time, and are published monthly in table 1.1 of the labour market data section of Employment Gazette with further subdivisions being presented in other tables.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 10 October 1985, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, the number of claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for over 12 months was 1,351,857. Comparable figures for October 1980 are not available because of changes in the way figures are collected. However, the number of registrants who had been unemployed for over 12 months in October 1980 was 401,114.

45. Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the latest unemployment figures for Merseyside.

Mr. Alan Clark: In September 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were 16,547,000 male employees and female full-time employees in employment in Great Britain. The corresponding estimate for June 1979 (figures are not available for May) was 18,768,000.

Estimates of full-time male employees in employment are not separately available for the dates specified.

60. Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently unemployed in the Liverpool travel-to-work area.

94. Mr. Eastham asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently in employment in Great Britain; and what were the figures for May 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available estimates are presented in the following table:

*Size of the employed labour force

Mr. Alan Clark: The estimated size of the employed labour force in Great Britain in September 1985 is 23,724,000 (seasonally adjusted) compared with 23,038,000 in June 1983. The employed labour force comprises employees in employment, the self-employed and Her Majesty's forces; it includes employed participants in the Manpower Services Commission's adult training schemes together with those on the youth training scheme who have contracts of employment. For 1983, participants receiving work experience in the youth opportunities programme were included.

The new increase of 686,000 jobs since June 1983 has not been matched by our European competitors.

80. Mr. Craigen asked the Paymaster General what was the number of long-term unemployed in each of the past three years.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 10 October 1985, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, the number of claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for over one year was 1,351,857. 88. Mr. Knox asked the Paymaster General how many people were out of work in the Staffordshire, Moorlands parliamentary constituency at the most recent count; and what was the comparable figure for the same month in 1973.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 12 December 1985, the number of unemployed claimants in the Staffordshire, Moorlands constituency was 3,599. Statistics of unemployment for parliamentary constituencies are derived from the new ward-based system and are available only from June 1983.

97. Mr. Hardy asked the Paymaster General what was the total number of persons classed as being long-term unemployed in December 1978; and what was the number of such persons in 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 10 October 1985, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, the number of claimants unemployed for over 12 months in Great Britain was 1,292,777. It is difficult to make a comparison with October 1978 (not available for December 1978) because of changes in the way figures are collected. However, the number of registrants who had been unemployed for over 12 months in October 1978 was 333,078.

Mr. Snape asked the Paymaster General how many people were out of work in the West Bromwich, East parliamentary constituency at the most recent count; and what was the comparable figure for the same month in 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. On 12 December 1985, the number of unemployed claimants in the West Bromwich, East Parliamentary constituency was 6,005. Statistics of unemployment for parliamentary constituencies are derived from the new ward-based system and are available only from June 1983.

(2) how many people were out of work in the Portsmouth, South parliamentary constituency at the most recent count; and what was the comparable figure for the same month in 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following information is in the Library. On 12 December 1985, the number of unemployed claimants in the Portsmouth, North and Portsmouth, South parliamentary constituencies was 4,719 and 7,524 respectively. Statistics of unemployment for parliamentary constituencies are derived from the new ward-based system and are available only from June 1983.

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General how many people have been unemployed continuously for more than 12 months; and what percentage of the total number of unemployed this represents.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On 10 October 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom was 3,276,900, of whom 1,351,900, 41 per cent. of the total, had been unemployed for over one year, and 823,100 for over two years.

Jobcentre Advertisements (Minimum Wages)

15. Mr. Haynes asked the Paymaster General if he intends to introduce any further safeguards to ensure that jobs advertised in jobcentres pay at least the wages council minimum rates.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. The present arrangements are adequate.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

16. Mr. Madel asked the Paymaster General whether he is satisfied with the working of the enterprise allowance scheme; and if he will make a statement.

58. Mr. Madden asked the Paymaster General if he is satisfied with the operation of the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: I am very satisfied with the operation of the scheme. It has now helped over 121,000 unemployed people set up new businesses, and the evidence available from surveys on the survival rate of these businesses and the number of new jobs they create is most encouraging.

33. Mrs. McCurley asked the Paymaster General how many people have now benefited from the enterprise allowance scheme since its introduction.

Mr. Trippier: Up to 31 December 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, 120,915 people have joined the enterprise allowance scheme.

92. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Paymaster General how many new jobs have now been generated by businesses established under the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The total number of jobs generated by businesses established under the scheme since it began is not known. However, the latest survey evidence indicates that on average for every 100 businesses still trading two years after the allowance has stopped, 99 additional jobs have been created.

Truck Acts

17. Mr. Evennett asked the Paymaster General when he expects to introduce legislation to amend or repeal the Truck Acts.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: As announced in the Queen's Speech, the Government intend to introduce legislation in this parliamentary Session which will repeal the Truck Acts and associated legislation and will contain new measures concerning deductions from pay.

Employment and Training Schemes

18. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Paymaster General when he next expects to meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss employment and training schemes for which the commission has responsibility.

Mr. Trippier: I regularly meet the chairman of the MSC to discuss a range of matters for which the commission has responsibility, including the employment and training measures.

Tyne and Wear

19. Mr. Dixon asked the Paymaster General if he will list the number of jobs lost in the Tyne and Wear county council area in manufacturing, transport, docks, shipbuilding and shiprepairing and local authorities for the years 1979 to 1985, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The precise information requested is not available. The Department's statistics for the county monitor only net changes in employment between census dates.

The latest available figures from the September 1981 census of employment showed that 129,500 employees were employed in manufacturing industries in the county of Tyne and Wear compared with 162,400 in 1978 when the previous census was taken. Included in this reduction of 32,900 was a reduction of 6,300 in those employed in shipbuilding and repairing and marine engineering. The number of employees in transport services, with the exception of port and inland water transport, declined by 2,900 while the numbers in port and inland water transport (including docks) increased by 200.

The reported numbers employed by the Tyne and Wear county and district local authorities are as follows:

	Numbers
June 1979	71,258
June 1981	68,168
June 1982	66,445
June 1983	67,276
June 1984	67,057
June 1985	67,454

More up-to-date total employment estimates for the county will become available following the publication of the 1984 census of employment results later this year. Early estimates confined to employment in enterprise zones show a net increase of nearly 2,200 jobs in the Tyneside enterprise zone between designation in 1981 and September 1984.

Industrial Stoppages

20. Mr. Harvey asked the Paymaster General how many industrial stoppages there were in 1985; and how this compares with previous years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The latest information relates to the first 11 months of 1985. A total of 781 stoppages due to industrial disputes were provisionally recorded as being in progress. This is the lowest total for the first 11 months of a year since 1936.

Construction Industry

25. Mr. Evans asked the Paymaster General if there has been any increase in the employment of "lump" labour in the construction industry in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: This information is not available from the Department's statistics.

35. Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General how many people were employed in the United Kingdom construction industry in 1979 and at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Alan Clark: In June 1979 there were 1,248,000 employees in employment in the construction industry in the United Kingdom. In September 1985 (the lastest date for which figures are available) the number was provisionally estimated to be 957,900. The figures may be affected by seasonal influences.

Community Programme

26. Sir Anthony Meyer asked the Paymaster General if he will take steps to relax the rules governing the engagement of staff for the community programme in such a way as to enable their employment to be extended beyond 12 months.

Mr. Alan Clark: Employment on projects funded by the community programme is normally limited to a maximum of 12 months. However, exceptions to this rule may be allowed for managers, supervisors and other key workers with skills essential to the continued successful operation of a project and for whom no suitably qualified replacement is available from among unemployed people.

30. Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what are the objectives of his Department's community programme policy; how he is monitoring its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to part 3.7 of volume II of the White Paper "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89" (Cmnd. 9702) which sets out the objectives of my Department's employment measures, and the methods of monitoring effectiveness.

38. Mr. Corbyn asked the Paymaster General how many men and how many women are participating in the community programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: During the 12 months ending 29 November, the latest date for which the information is available, 160,108 males and 43,333 females joined the community programme. Monthly statistics about the number of jobs on the programme do not distinguish between male and female participants.

68. Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what was the net increase in places on the community programme over the past three months.

Mr. Alan Clark: The increase was 24,146 in the three months ended 29 November.

Self-employed Persons

29. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Paymaster General what is the current number of self-employed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: In September 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of self-employed in the United Kingdom was provisionally estimated to be 2,651,000.

Adult Training

32. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the adult training strategy.

51. Mr. Latham asked the Paymaster General whether he will make a further statement on the progress of the adult training initiative.

64. Mr. Baldry asked the Paymaster General if he will make a further statement on progress in Her Majesty's Government's initiatives to promote adult training.

Mr. Trippier: As I said in my reply to the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) on 12

November, at columns 139-40, we have made good progress in making our adult training programmes more relevant to current and future skill needs. I have asked the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission for proposals by the end of January to focus adult training programmes more sharply on the needs of small firms, and on promoting enterprise and self-employment and the advantages of open learning.

63. Mr. Clelland asked the Paymaster General when he will next meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss the adult training strategy.

Mr. Trippier: I have frequent meetings with the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission and matters relating to the adult training strategy are regularly on the agenda.

Health and Safety

34. Mr. McWilliam asked the Paymaster General how many accidents, serious and fatal, were reported by the Health and Safety Executive for the last year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures for the year ended 1978.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend's reply to the hon. Members for Kingston upon Hull, East (Mr. Prescott) earlier today.

Unemployment (Reduction)

39. Mr. Freud asked the Paymaster General what criteria he uses to measure the progress of his policy to reduce unemployment.

Mr. Alan Clark: Success in tackling unemployment depends on a strong economy that can generate wealth and new jobs. This is what our policies are designed to achieve and over 700,000 jobs have been created in the past two and a half years.

Guidance Leaflets

42. Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Paymaster General if he will simplify the guidance leaflets emanating from his Department.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. As announced in the White Paper, "Lifting the Burden", simpler and more readable leaflets are under consideration covering employment protection and health and safety matters. In addition, my Department will continue to issue a range of guidance and aim to simplify this as much as possible. Particular emphasis is being placed on meeting the needs of small firms.

Youth Training Scheme

43. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the preparations being made to introduce the new two-year youth training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: My ministerial colleagues and I are satisfied with the progress that has been made on the establishment of the new two-year youth training scheme. All the main funding and administrative elements of the new scheme have been decided, and negotiations with potential training providers are going well. Plans for publicising the new scheme are also well under way.

48. Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General if he will make a further statement on the funding arrangements for the two-year youth training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have approved the Manpower Services Commission's recommendations that the funding arrangements for the new two-year youth training scheme should feature not only basic grants, premium payments and annual management fees, but also permanent additional funding for specialist training for young disabled people and extra funds for equipment and adaptations to premises for disabled trainees. Agreement has also been reached about the future funding of information technology centres and on the transitional payments to current mode B1 providers.

50. Mr. Lawler asked the Paymaster General what were the destinations of those trainees who left the youth training scheme in June.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission's regular follow-up survey of young people leaving the youth training scheme shows that, of those who left in June 1985, 63 per cent. were in work, 3 per cent. were on a full-time course at a college/training centre, 3 per cent. were on another YTS scheme, 7 per cent. were doing something else and 24 per cent. were unemployed, some three months later. Results from the survey are placed in the Library.

56. Mr. Bruce asked the Paymaster General what percentage of youth training scheme trainees secured a job within six months of leaving the scheme for the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the precise form requested. However, the most recent results from the Manpower Services Commission's regular follow-up survey of young people leaving the youth training scheme show that, of those who left between 1 April 1985 and 31 July 1985, 61 per cent. were in work some three months later.

67. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on mode B youth training schemes.

Mr. Trippier: Mode B of the present youth training scheme provides funding, on a cost-recovery basis, for programmes for unemployed young people based mainly in training workshops and information technology centres and on community projects. Under the new two-year scheme, which will have a single system of funding and administration, there will be extra premium payments and transitional funding for the next two years to current mode B1 providers who remain in the scheme, so that they can continue to offer training programmes in areas where there is a shortage of employer-based provision and to young people with special needs.

69. Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General when he will next meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss the youth training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: I frequently discuss the progress and development of the youth training scheme with the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission.

70. Mr. Hunter asked the Paymaster General how many unfilled youth training scheme places there are in Hampshire.

Mr. Trippier: I regret the information is not available in the precise form requested. However, at the end of November 1985 some 8,863 places had been approved while there were 6,695 young people in training. It is not possible to give a precise figure of unfilled places because not all approved places will actually be available for occupation.

76. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Paymaster General how many youngsters will be able to participate in the youth training scheme each year after April 1986.

Mr. Trippier: We estimate that around 360,000 young people will enter the youth training scheme in 1986-87 and a similar number in 1987-88. It is too early to make forecasts for subsequent years.

MSC Training Schemes

44. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the financial disadvantages often experienced by participants in Manpower Services Commission schemes when they progress from part-time engagements to full-time.

Mr. Alan Clark: Participants on the community programme are able to move from part-time to full-time engagements. We have no evidence to suggest that those who choose to do so experience financial disadvantages.

47. Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General what arrangements are made for the inspection of Manpower Services Commission training courses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission monitors training courses to ensure that contractual obligations are met, to eliminate inefficiency and to identify and disseminate effective training practice. The pattern and frequency of monitoring visits are geared to the nature and performance of individual training courses. I am satisfied that the commission's monitoring strategy is appropriately targeted, and makes the most effective use of available resources.

Factory Inspectors

46. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to increase the number of factory inspectors in the north-west region.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Decisions on the number and distribution of inspectors are a matter for the Health and Safety Commission and Executive, subject to the limits set by the Government on total salary expenditure and manpower. Six new factory inspectors are to start work in the executive's Manchester, north-west and Merseyside area offices in the next three months.

Apprenticeships

49. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to increase the number of apprenticeships.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames) on 12 November 1985, at column 132.

Regional Aid

52. Mr. Beith asked the Paymaster General what research his Department has carried out concerning the relevance of travel-to-work areas as a measure of unemployment when related to regional aid.

Mr. Alan Clark: A discussion of the use of travel-to-work areas as building blocks for the assisted area map is contained in section V of "Regional Industrial Policy—Some Economic Issues", published by the Department of Trade and Industry in 1983.

Long-term Unemployed Persons

53. Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General whether he is planning additional programmes for the long-term unemployed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: We are concerned to ensure the most effective arrangements for helping long-term unemployed people back into the labour market, and therefore keep our range of current measures under constant review.

59. Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the progress of employment counselling services for the long-term unemployed.

Mr. Alan Clark: Since 1981 jobcentres have helped a proportion of long-term unemployed job seekers through a structured programme of individual counselling interviews. More recently, the Manpower Services Commission has set up a number of job clubs, which offer intensive coaching for the long-term unemployed in job finding techniques.

In addition, on 6 January, a new six-month pilot programme began in which as many as possible of the long-term unemployed in nine pilot areas will be offered counselling interviews. The results of the programme will be evaluated later this year.

Basildon

54. Mr. Amess asked the Paymaster General what are the numbers of people in Basildon in employment over the last three years; and how many new jobs have been created in each of those years.

Mr. Alan Clark: Employment statistics for local areas are available only for those dates when censuses of employment are taken. The latest available figures from the 1981 census of employment showed that 52,000 people were employed in Basildon compared with 46,000 in 1978 when the previous census was taken. It is not possible to give a figure for the number of jobs created. The number of net job gains shown by the censuses between 1978 and 1981 was 6,000. More up-to-date figures will become available following publication of the September 1984 census in the sping. Between censuses, employment estimates are based on small-scale sample inquiries which do not produce reliable results for areas smaller than regions.

Job Creation

57. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Paymaster General how many new jobs have been created during the last year.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information about job gains and job losses is not available from the Department's statistics, but an indication of the net changes can be seen by comparing levels of employment at different dates.

Between September 1984 and September 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available) the employed labour force in Great Britain increased by 220,000.

The employed labour force is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and Her Majesty's forces.

Unemployed Persons (Jobs Take-up)

65. Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General what further plans he has to encourage the unemployed to take available jobs.

Mr. Alan Clark: In addition to the existing jobcentre services, pilot schemes to help the long-term unemployed get back into employment began in nine areas on 6 January. These schemes provide an in-depth counselling interview, a new short course specifically designed for the needs of the long-term unemployed and a practical incentive to return to work in the form of a new job start allowance of £20 a week for those who take jobs with earnings less than £80 per week.

Also, the Manpower Services Commission is currently evaluating the effectiveness of job clubs, which provide facilities and encouragement to longer-term unemployed people to undertake intensive job hunting, and the recent initiative to contact longer-term unemployed people, to promote the range of jobcentre services available to them.

Jobcentres (Training Courses)

66. Mr. Stern asked the Paymaster General to what extent jobcentres will be authorised to offer the new short training courses for the long-term unemployed at premises other than their own.

Mr. Alan Clark: The new courses, known as restart courses, will operate in nine pilot areas from 13 January. They will be run by various training agencies judged locally to be able to mount courses of good quality. It is not envisaged that any will be run on jobcentre premises.

Labour Mobility

73. Mr. Holt asked the Paymaster General what new proposals are being considered to assist in the mobility of labour from areas of high unemployment to others where unfilled vacancies exist; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Manpower Services Commission will shortly be considering proposals for recasting its schemes to assist unemployed people to attend job interviews at some distance from their homes, and those moving home to take jobs in other areas for which local labour is not available. These revised arrangements, which are being tested in certain parts of the country at present, are designed to improve the cost-effectiveness and comprehensibility of the schemes.

The commission is also considering how its arrangements for helping unemployed people find out about job opportunities in other areas can be improved.

Wages Councils

74. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Paymaster General what recent representations he has received on wages councils; and if he will make a statement.

96. Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General how many representations he has received concerning wages councils.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have received about 100 representations on wages councils since my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State, announced on 17 July 1985 that we propose to introduce early legislation to reform the wages councils.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

75. Mrs. Roe asked the Paymaster General how many local education authorities are now participating in the technical and vocational education initiative.

Mr. Trippier: There are 73 authorities running technical and vocational education initiative programmes in Great Britain at present. A further 25 authorities have put in proposals which are currently under discussion.

Non-advanced Further Education

77. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Paymaster General what extra resources have been made available to improve the quality of work-related non-advanced further education.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) on 3 December 1985, at column 189.

90. Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Paymaster General what measures have been taken to improve the quality of work-related non-advanced further education.

Mr. Trippier: The resources for work-related non-advanced further education transferred from the local authority rate support grant (England and Wales) to the Manpower Services Commission (£110 million in 1986-87) will be used to improve the quality and relevance of work-related NAFE provision.

Detailed discussions in pursuit of these objectives are currently under way between local education authorities and local offices of the Manpower Services Commission.

Tourist Industry

84. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Paymaster General if the Departmental review of section 4 grants in the tourist industry has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The review of the operation of the section 4 scheme in England is expected to be completed shortly and I shall then be considering its findings in conjunction with the English Tourist Board.

Manufacturing

86. Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General how many workers were employed in manufacturing in 1979, 1983 and the latest available date.

Mr. Alan Clark: In November 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were 5,353,000 employees in employment, seasonally adjusted, in the manufacturing industries in Great Britain.

The corresponding estimates for June 1983 and June 1979 were 5,510,000 and 7,127,000, respectively.

Bootle Jobcentre

87. Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Paymaster General if he will visit the jobcentre in Bootle.

Mr. Alan Clark: My colleagues and I have no plans at present to do so.

Crown Immunity

89. Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received regarding Crown immunity with respect to health and safety provisions that come within his departmental responsibility.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: On 17 April 1985, my right hon. Friend the previous Secretary of State for Employment and I met the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South to discuss Crown immunity with respect to health and safety. The General, Municipal, Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union subsequently submitted a report. Ministers in this Department have received four other letters.

Job Clubs

91. Mr. Yeo asked the Paymaster General what are the Government's plans for the establishment of more job clubs.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Fallon) earlier today.

Wage Levels

93. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Paymaster General if he will publish a Green Paper on the relationship between wage levels and levels of employment.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. A review of the empirical evidence on this relationship was published by Her Majesty's Treasury in January 1985 ("The Relationship Between Employment and Wages", Her Majesty's Treasury, 1985).

Tourism

95. Mr. Butterfill asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to reduce bureaucracy and speed up the processing of applications for grants under section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act.

Mr. Trippier: The English Tourist Board is aware of my Department's wish that it should avoid unnecessary bureaucracy and delay in processing section 4 applications. Last year, it introduced simpler application forms and reduced some of the documentation required for smaller projects and also devolved responsibility for appraising such cases to the regional tourist boards, which has improved the time taken to process applications. The ETB is continuing to look at ways in which its procedures could be further improved and streamlined.

School Leavers

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General how many school leavers have been referred to benefit officers for failing to attend interviews for offers of youth training scheme places during the past year.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information is not available in the form asked. In the year ended 30 September 1985, the latest period for which information is available, the total number referred to the independent benefit adjudicating authorities for refusing a place on the youth training scheme was 1,520, of which 1,055 were disqualified.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General how many school leavers have been refused benefit as a result of being referred for failing to attend interviews or to accept offers of employment during the past year.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information is not available in the form asked. The total number of claimants referred to the independent adjudicating authorities for failing to attend interviews or failing to accept offers of employment in the nine months ended 30 September 1985 were 312 and 4,007, respectively, of which 193 and 1,164 were disqualified. Records do not distinguish between school-leavers and others.

National Marriage Guidance Council

Mr. Latham asked the Paymaster General what level of financial support was given by the Manpower Services Commission to voluntary projects of the National Marriage Guidance Council in the years 1984, 1985 and 1986, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The level of financial support given by the Manpower Services Commission to the National Marriage Guidance Council under the voluntary projects programme for each financial year is as follows:

Financial year	Budget
1983-84	53,460
1984-85	231,270
1985-86	173,040

EC Labour and Social Affairs Council

Mr. Foulkes asked the Paymaster General if he will list all draft directives currently under consideration by the European Commission Labour and Social Affairs Council, stating in each case the remaining Government objections.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A list of draft directives not disposed of by the Labour and Social Affairs Council is as follows:

Select Committee on European legislation scrutiny number	Draft directive title	Government position
10681/84	Parental leave and leave for family reasons.	United Kingdom reserve maintained in principle. Not considered to be appropriate area for Community legislation. (A debate on the draft directive took place on 27 November 1985.)
4138/83	Voluntary part-time work.	United Kingdom reserve maintained in principle. Not considered to be appropriate area for Community legislation.
6365/84	The supply of workers by temporary employment businesses and fixed duration contracts of employment.	United Kingdom reserve maintained in principle. Not considered to be appropriate area for Community legislation.
8256/83	Informing and consulting employees.	United Kingdom reserve maintained in principle. Not considered to be appropriate area for Community legislation.
6871/83	Implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women in occupational social security schemes.	Proposal welcomed in principle. The main United Kingdom difficulty is that actuarial considerations are not taken into account.
5825/1/84	Equal treatment as between men and women engaged in an activity, including agriculture, in a self-employed capacity, and on the protection of self-employed women during pregnancy and motherhood.	Opposed in principle. The principle of the United Kingdom equal opportunity legislation is that the law should not try to regulate private relationships where there is no intention to create a legal business relationship.
9193/84 7832/85	The protection of workers by the proscription of specified agents and/or work activities.	No remaining objections of principle. (A debate took place in the Standing Committee on European Legislation on 11 December 1985.)

4044/86	The protection of workers from the risks related to exposure to benzene at work.	This proposal has not yet been deposited in Parliament. An Explanatory Memorandum setting out Government policy will be issued shortly.

Rosyth, Plymouth and Fife (Training)

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General what opportunities his Department provides for training in (a) engineering, (b) electrical skills, (c) computer science and (d) ship repair in (i) Plymouth (ii) Rosyth and (iii) Fife.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 45]: The information is not available in the precise form requested. Information is not available for the skill categories requested for the youth training scheme and the majority of adult training programmes and is only available for the job training scheme by training division area.

The table shows the numbers we expect to train in 1985-86 under the relevant categories of the Manpower Services Commission's job training scheme in the training division areas which include Plymouth, Rosyth and Fife. In total, in these areas we plan to train some 5,600 people through our locally delivered adult training schemes and some 14,900 young people under the youth training scheme in 1985-86.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Benefits

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received advocating withdrawal of benefits from school leavers who refuse all types of employment, or places on the youth training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We are not aware of any recent representations advocating the withdrawal of entitlement to both benefits in these circumstances.

Hospital Laundry

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many hospitals laundering requirements have been put out to competitive tender; in how many hospitals laundering is currently undertaken by a commercial company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: This information is not collected centrally in the form requested but I understand that up to the end of September 1985 a total of 58 laundry tendering exercises had been completed and 18 of these had resulted in contracts being awarded to commercial companies.

Disability Aids

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action his Department takes to promote the use of British designed and manufactured aids to disability, and in particular the ORLAU walking aid system.

Mr. Newton: The Department has supported the ORLAU research unit at Shrewsbury for more than 10 years. The swivel walker is listed in the MHM 50 Booklet for routine supply. The parawalker can now be supplied at seven special centres and approaching 150 patients have been fitted with these walking aids on the National Health Service. It is hoped to add the parawalker to the MHM 50 list in the near future.

We are arranging an independent evaluation of the ORLAU and Louisiana walking aids.

NHS (Pharmaceutical Supplies)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to break any current contracts with pharmaceutical suppliers to the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: My Department has very few contracts with pharmaceutical manufacturers for the supply of National Health Service medicines. I have no plans to break any of these. Health authorities make their own purchasing arrangements.

"Reform of Social Security"

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will clarify how, under the Government's proposals for the maternity grant in the "Reform of Social Security", savings exceeding £500 will be accounted for.

Mr. Newton: The arrangements will be similar to those currently in force for supplementary benefit single payments for maternity and other needs. If the savings exceed £500 by more than the set amount of the grant, no payment will be made. If the excess over £500 is less than the amount of a full grant, the grant will be reduced by the amount of the excess.

Clinical Psychologists

Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the planned number of clinical psychologists for each region in 1994 according to the latest stategic plans;

(2) what is the present number of clinical psychologists in post for each region according to the latest strategic plans;

(3) what is the estimated shortfall of clinical psychologists in each region allowing for wastage and likely postgraduate training output according to the latest strategic plans.

Mr. Whitney: The regional strategic plans show manpower changes in terms of broad staff groups and, overall, do not provide information at the level of detail requested. Following are figures derived from the routine annual manpower census for England.

*Clinical Psychologists in post at 30 September 1984

National Marriage Guidance Council

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what grants were paid by his Department in 1984 and 1985 to the National Marriage Guidance Council; and why no grant is projected for 1986.

Mr. Whitney: The following grants were made towards the cost of the council's marital sexual therapy service:

Financial year	£
1985-86	25,000

These concluded a final three-year departmental grant towards the service and were made on condition that the council contained any expenditure after 1985-86 within its other income.

Tranquillisers

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give grant aid to professional or educational bodies for the purpose of establishing training courses for general practitioners on the problems of long-term use of tranquillisers.

Mr. Whitney: Consideration of prescribing practice of all drugs including the long term use of minor tranquillisers is part of undergraduate and postgraduate medical training.

Comprehensive advice on the prescribing of minor tranquillisers is given in the British National Formulary, which is issued free, bi-annually to all general practitioners. Guidelines on good clinical practice in the treatment of drug misuse, which have been issued to all doctors, include advice on the treatment of people with problems arising from long term use of minor tranquillisers. Advice through other medical channels warns of the addictive potential of these drugs. The basic information necessary to enable help to be given to this group has thus been made available to all doctors. There is increasing awareness among general practitioners about the problems.

The annual number of prescriptions for this group of drugs has been falling since 1979.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which organisations, dealing with combating tranquilliser addiction, have applied for funding from his Department in the last 12 months; and how many of these applications were successful.

Mr. Whitney: No such applications have been received in the last 12 months. However, since 1983 the Department has funded from the drugs initiative the following organisations which cater specifically for the needs of people with problems arising from long term use of minor tranquillisers:

Voluntary organisation	Description of project	Cost £
TRANX	Self-help group—tranquilliser misuse—Harrow	89,183
Tranx Release (Northampton)	Advisory and self-help service—tranquilliser misuse	29,892
West Cumbria MIND (Copeland)	Self-help group and other services for tranquilliser misusers	89,494
Newcastle Association for Mental Health	Tranquilliser support project	96,213

In addition, funds have been made available to a large number of health authorities and voluntary organisations in respect of projects which include tranquilliser misusers amongst their clientele.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether any special procedures are used by the Committee on Safety of Medicines to monitor the safety of drugs in the benzodiazepine class;

(2) what procedures are used by the Committee on Safety of Medicines to follow up complaints from individual members and the public on the use of tranquillisers.

Mr. Hayhoe: There are no special procedures which apply only to the safety of benzodiazepines. The safety of all licensed medicines is kept under constant surveillance by the Committee on Safety of Medicines. The committee's principal source of information about safety is yellow card reports by doctors of suspected adverse reactions to medicines. In February 1981, in its fact sheet "Current Problems", the committee made a special request to doctors for reports of adverse reactions to benzodiazepines. On receipt each report is evaluated for the committee by its medical secretariat.

If a member of the public has a complaint on tranquillisers which is concerned with safety he should bring the matter to the attention of his doctor so that he can consider whether he should send a report to the Committee on Safety of Medicines. Subsequent action will depend on the nature of the complaint. If the hon. Member has a specific problem in mind I should be grateful if he would write to me about it.

X-rays

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people developed cancers each year as a result of X-rays in the course of investigations and radiological treatment in National Health Service hospitals; and how many of these are staff.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when his Department last issued advice to health authorities about procedures to reduce radiation doses involved in X-ray investigations.

Mr. Hayhoe: The most recent guidance was circular HC(85)31 issued in December 1985.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the oldest X-ray equipment still in use in National Health Service hospitals.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the experts considering the future of breast cancer screening have been asked to consider the adverse effects of X-ray treatment as well as the advantages.

Mr. Hayhoe: The expert working group on breast cancer screening is considering all the advantages and disadvantages of screening by mammography, including any adverse effects from X-rays.

Hip Operations

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the modal average interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital for a total hip replacement or other arthroplasty of the hip in England for the last year for which figures are available; and what were the longest and shortest waits, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have the available information as soon as possible.

Board and Lodging Payments

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if full instructions have now been given to local officers of his Department about the means of treating cases connected with board and lodging regulations in the light of recent court cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Amber Valley (Mr. Oppenheim) on 14 January at columns 553-4.

Mr. David Galloway

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the necessary papers concerning Mr. David Galloway's appeal against the decision of the adjudication officer at the Chorlton office of his Department have now been sent to the Social Security Appeal Tribunal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The decision against which Mr. Galloway appealed was reviewed in his favour on 13 January by the adjudication officer and full arrears of benefit were paid on that day. As a result of the revision of the decision, the appeal has been superseded.

NHS (General Managers)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many general managers so far appointed in the NHS at (i) regional, (ii) district and (iii) unit level, were in their previous job (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) business men, and (d) other occupations, and if he will give a breakdown of the last category.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 702]: I understand health authorities have made the following appointments so far:—

DEFENCE

Helicopters (Procurement)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence why his national armaments director agreed at a recent meeting with the national armaments directors of France, Germany and Italy that certain helicopter requirements should, in future, be met solely from aircraft designed and built in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: When they met in London on 29 November, the armament directors of Britain, France, Germany and Italy were invited to review progress towards the achievement of the goals set out in the declaration of principles signed in 1978 by the Defence Ministers of the four nations; and to make recommendations as to how they should be pursued in future.

They concluded that good progress had been made in a number of important areas, notably with EH101, with the launch of feasibility studies on the NATO helicopter for the 1990s (NH90), and in the field of collaboration on helicopter engines. They recommended that Ministers should commission a single European helicopter programme (in place of the PAH/HAC3G and A129 Mk 2) in order to maximise both the operational benefits of standardisation and the industrial benefits of a longer production run.

The armament directors further recommend that the needs of the forces of the four nations for helicopters in the three classes referred to should be met "solely" by helicopters designed and built in Europe. I understand that what they had in mind was that it would be a natural expectation that nations participating in the joint development of these helicopters would, other things being equal, purchase the resulting machines for use by their armed forces.

However, if applied in a wider context, the use of the word "solely" could be interpreted as going beyond the intentions of the 1978 declaration of principles to which, as the Prime Minister made clear on 15 January 1985, at column 1093, we still adhere.

Combat Helmets

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for the purchase of resin bonded fibre combat helmets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: First issues of the new mk 6 combat helmet, which is constructed in resin-bonded fibre, were made in 1985 and will continue over the next seven years until all relevant areas of the services are equipped with it.

Mr. Peter Levene

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the role of Mr. Peter Levene in his Department.

Mr. Younger: In accordance with undertakings given by my predecessor, I shall shortly be reviewing the special arrangements made at the time of Mr. Levene's appointment whereby his access to papers relating to United Scientific Holdings plc was restricted. That apart, there are no plans to review Mr. Levene's role.

British Aerospace

Mr. Portillo asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions between 1 October 1985 and 9 January 1986 the then Secretary of State for Defence met (a) Sir Austin Pearce, chairman of British Aerospace and (b) Sir Raymond Lygo, chief executive of British Aerospace.

Mr. Younger: Between 1 October 1985 and 9 January 1986 Sir Austin Pearce called twice, and Sir Raymond Lygo on seven occasions, on my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence.

FH70 Ammunition

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the 1985 order by his Department of FH70 ammunition has been delivered to date; and from which source.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Over three quarters of the ammunition planned for delivery in 1985 was delivered in 1985. In accordance with our international obligations, the majority of this order has been placed with Germany, with the remainder in the United Kingdom.

Woolwich Arsenal

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to be able to announce a decision about the size, position, cost and starting date for a new headquarters office building for quality assurance staff at Woolwich Arsenal;

(2) when he expects to be able to announce a decision about the future of the royal laboratory pavilions at Woolwich Arsenal;

(3) when the review of land usage at Woolwich Arsenal began; how many different options have been considered; and when final recommendations are expected.

Mr. Lee: Land usage at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, is under intensive review. I am now considering recommendations based on studies into the long-term accommodation requirements of the directorate general of defence quality assurance which embrace the proposal for a new headquarters building and the future of the land at the Royal Arsenal, including the future of the royal laboratory pavilions.

ENVIRONMENT

Property (Use Classes)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in view of the report published on 2 December by a sub-group of the property advisory group on the operation of the use classes, if he will make a statement on the integration of use classes 2 and 3.

Mr. Tracey: We shall wish to consider the comments which we have invited from interested persons and bodies before reaching any conclusions on the sub-group's detailed proposals for amending the use classes order.

Right to Buy

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to when Mr. P. Sheffield and Miss R. Lewis can expect to receive approval for the purchase of their council home at 46 Sunray avenue from Southwark council.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that the London borough of Southwark issued legal documents on 17 December to the solicitors acting for the purchasers and proposed a completion date of 3 February.

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the causes for delay in the purchase by Mr. and Mrs. W. Plant of their council home at 8, Bradlord house, West Dulwich; and when he now expects Southwark council to complete the transaction.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that the London borough of Southwark wrote to the purchasers' solicitors with all the necessary conveyancing documents on 11 July 1985 and is still awaiting the solicitors' reply. If there are any outstanding difficulties, perhaps my hon. Friend will write to me.

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the reasons for further delay by Southwark council in processing the application of Mr. G. Armour of 129B Copleston road to buy his council home; and when he now expects the transaction to be completed.

Mr. John Patten: Mr. Armour's application was among a number delayed at completion stage at Southwark council's procedure of requiring member level approval to be given to the sale of a property before legal documentation could be issued. Following discussions with my Department, these procedures were abandoned in October 1985. I expect this will lead generally to a substantial reduction in the delays previously experienced by purchasers at completion stage.

It appears, however, that further delays have occurred in Mr. Armour's case. I understand that Mr. Armour will be able to complete his purchase on 20 January, but I am seeking a full explanation from Southwark council and will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information he has as to the reasons for the delay by Southwark council in finalising the sale of 41 Kennoldes, Croxted road to Mr. and Mrs Moakes;

(2) what action he proposes to take in the light of the delays being experienced by tenants exercising their right to buy from the London borough of Southwark; and what information he has as to when Mr. D. Herbert of 3 Kennoldes, Croxted road can expect to complete the purchase of his home;

(3) what information he has as to when Mr. and Mrs. J. Baldwin of 9 Hillsborough road may expect to receive the legal documents from Southwark council in respect of their application to purchase their council home.

Mr. John Patten: These cases were held up because of an unfortunate delay on the part of Southwark council in producing a standard form of transfer for sales of leasehold property, following the extension of the right to buy in 1984 to properties in which the landlord's interest is leasehold.

I understand that Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin completed their purchase on 29 July 1985; Mr. and Mrs. Moakes on 23 September 1985; and Mr. Herbert on 23 December 1985.

Southwark Council (Works)

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information he has regarding the failure by the town clerk's department of Southwark council to respond to the legal points raised by solicitors Messrs. Coulson and Coulson in letters addressed to it on 7 October and 8 December 1983, 5 March 1984 and 18 February 1985, regarding the notice of intended works sent to Mr. W. K. Rivers of 10, Countisbury house; and what action he intends to take in the light of this;

(2) if he will investigate the reasons for Southwark council's failure to have its written summary of the costs incurred during major works of repairs to Countisbury house certified by a qualified accountant, as required by schedule 19, paragraph 7(3) of the Housing Act 1980 and by Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Rivers of 10 Countisbury house on 7 October 1983;

(3) what information he has as to the failure of Southwark council to advise Mr. and Mrs. L. Bickel of 11 Northcroft Gardens of their statutory rights to buy the garage on their land when they exercised their right to buy; and if he will investigate the reasons why the borough valuer was instructed not to include the garage in the offer notice.

Mr. John Patten: Details of these cases are being sought from the London borough of Southwark, and I shall write to my hon. Friend when I have the council's reply.

Water (Pollution)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if there are any areas in the Thames, Southern, South-West, Wessex, Northumbrian and Welsh Water authority areas where levels of lead in drinking water exceed limits stipulated in European Community Directive (80/778/EC) relating to the quality of water intended for human consumption.

Mr. John Patten: I am not aware of any areas in the Thames, Southern, South-West and Wessex water authority areas where lead levels exceed the limit in the EC directive relating to the quality of water intended for human consumption. There is one supply in the Northumbrian water authority area serving 2,000 people and this will meet the directive standard by 1988. Responsibility for this matter in Wales lies with my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will specify the levels of aluminium, nitrate and nitrite in drinking water which would in his judgment represent a threat to public health; and whether public water supply in the United Kingdom exceeds these levels.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow) on 23 July 1985, at column 455-56, in respect of nitrate levels. I have received advice from the chief medical officer that no public water supply for which I have responsibility contains aluminium or nitrite which represents a threat to public health. In the circumstances, I have not specified levels which would represent such a threat.

Water Supplies

Sir Richard Body asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list the successful applications for a derogation from the maximum nitrate concentration in drinking water set by directive 80/778 of the European Economic Community.

Mr. John Patten: Nitrate derogations have been given for the following supply areas, subject to certain conditions:

Sir Richard Body asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has with organisations representing the consumer before granting a derogation from EEC directive 80/778 relating to water supplies.

Mr. John Patten: Local authorities whose area contains a supply for which a derogation is requested are notified of the application and have the opportunity to comment to the Department. Comments received by the Department are taken into account before a decision is reached.

Home Improvements

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government intend to publish a White Paper on home improvement in the current parliamentary Session.

Sir George Young: It has not yet been decided in what form and when we shall announce our conclusions, following consultation on the home improvement Green Paper (Cmnd. 9513).

Coastal Footpath (Barnstaple and Bideford)

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the conversion programme of the old railway line between Barnstaple and Bideford into part of the coastal footpath, together with the provision of separate facilities for cyclists.

Sir George Young: Work on reclaiming the former railway line, with the assistance of derelict land grant, began last November. I understand that Devon county council, which is responsible for the design and development of the project, expects to open the first section from Instow to Yelland by April 1986 and the remainder by spring 1987.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if there are any proposed staff costs in his Department in the financial year 1986-87, arising out of duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Yes, although it is too soon to quantify those costs. They will be contained within the Department's manpower targets for 1986-87.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Hampshire county council about 1987's rate support grant; and what further discussions are planned.

Mrs. Rumbold: My hon. Friend met the leader of Hampshire county council and three fellow councillors on 16 January to hear their reactions to the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement. No further discussions are planned at present.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he has received any representations from local authorities or individuals about the interim budget issued by the London Residuary Body; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the final budget of the London Residuary Body will be published;

(3) if he or his Department have had any discussions with the London Residuary Body over its interim budget.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer these questions shortly.

GLC (Grants)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the new Covent Garden consultancy's rail head for which the Greater London council applied on 15 October 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to grant aid to the Polytechnic of Central London for a study of decentralisation for which the Greater London council applied on 25 October 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to funding for Wyke House hostel, Weymouth, for which the Greater London council applied on 19 August 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to the upgrading of computers for the welfare benefits project for which the Greater London council applied on 29 October 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Applications must be considered carefully and on their individual merits. All applications are dealt with as quickly as possible, subject to the need to give priority to parliamentary business.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to a homelessness initiative in the Abercrombie house hostel for which the Greater London council applied on 23 October 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Consent has been given to this application.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to a loan to the Circle 33 housing association for which the Greater London council applied on 1 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Further consideration will be given to this application when the council responds to the Department's request for further information.

TRANSPORT

Local Government Reform

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Transport if there are any proposed staff costs in his Department in the financial year 1986-87 arising out of duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985.

Mr. Ridley: I expect costs of the order of those incurred this year given in reply to the hon. Member on 16 December 1985, at column 47, by the then Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker). They will be contained within my Department's manpower and running cost targets.

Foreign Lorry Drivers (Road Safety)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the danger of non-English speaking lorry drivers (a) at unmanned level-crossings and (b) where vehicles carry dangerous loads.

Mr. David Mitchell: None, but if the hon. Member has a particular problem or incident in mind, I shall be happy to look into it.

PRIME MINISTER

Science Courses (Universities)

Q39. Mr. Madel asked the Prime Minister whether, in her capacity of being in overall charge of science, she is consulted by the University of Grants Committee when it is considering changes in the organisation and funding of science courses in universities; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: If the University Grants Committee needed to consult Ministers about such matters it would consult my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Prime Minister of Israel

Q79. Mr. Latham asked the Prime Minister whether she is now in a position to give details of the agenda of her discussions with the Prime Minister of the state of Israel.

The Prime Minister: I expect our discussions to concentrate on efforts to make progress towards a negotiated peace in the middle east and also to cover other regional and bilateral issues.

Engagements

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 21 January.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 21 January.

Mr. Stern asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 21 January.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 21 January.

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 21 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what response she has made to President Alfonsin's proposals on the future of the Falklands.

The Prime Minister: President Alfonsin has made no proposals to me. He has suggested publicly that the United Kingdom must vacate the islands. The answer to that is no. But as my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs explained to the House on 18 December, we shall continue to encourage the Argentine Government to match our readiness to improve relations between us.

Plain English Unit

Mr. Norris asked the Prime Minister if she will indicate the Government's intentions with regard to the work of the plain English unit of the Management and Personnel Office; and if she will make a statement as to her appraisal of the work of the unit.

The Prime Minister: I have asked the Management and Personnel Office to continue with the work of the central forms unit and to report again in 1987 on Departments' efforts to improve Government forms. Since 1982 Departments have abolished some 15,700 forms altogether and redesigned a further 21,300. Last year alone 35,000 forms were reviewed. The central forms unit has played an important role in this achievement.

Bradford City Football Club

Mr. Madden asked the Prime Minister when Her Majesty's Government intend to provide the financial assistance for the rebuilding of Bradford city football club's ground which was promised at the time of the fire; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government are considering Bradford's case for financial assistance.

Family Relationship (Tests)

Mr. Madden asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about co-ordination between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Home Office on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the acceptability of blood tests and genetic testing as offering conclusive evidence of family relationship.

The Prime Minister: The two Departments are working closely together on an experimental scheme to assess the acceptability and feasibility of the recently developed DNA testing technique in relation to entry clearance applications. The arrangements for conventional blood testing are well established.

Westland plc

Mr. Mikardo asked the Prime Minister whether, in view of the conflicting accounts of certain incidents in the Westland affair given by her and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the one hand and the former Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine), on the other, she will seek to determine the truth by using a polygraph of the type Her Majesty's Government are proposing to use at Government communication headquarters, Cheltenham.

The Prime Minister: No.

Ministers (Broadcasts)

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if it was with her authority that an official from her press office contacted the British Broadcasting Corporation and asked it not to broadcast an interview which had been recorded by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for use on Sunday 22 December; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to him on 20 January.

10 Downing Street (Foreign Visitors)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 16 January, Official Report, column 628, if she will publish a list of all prominent nationals invited to Downing street social occasions held for foreign visitors in each of the past five years.

The Prime Minister: Guest lists for major social occasions for foreign visitors are made public at the time.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Alexander Archibald

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to secure the release of Alexander Archibald, a constituent of the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Leith, presently held in a Thai jail.

Mr. Eggar: None. Mr. Archibald has been sentenced under Thai law to a cumulative period of three years and nine months' imprisonment for a number of offences. He is expected to be discharged from prison on 28 December 1987.

African National Congress

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conditions have to be fulfilled before he will allow his officials to meet members of the African National Congress.

Mrs. Chalker: The Commonwealth accord called for a suspension of violence in South Africa. Clearly the African National Congress support for such a move would help to promote dialogue within South Africa and with those outside, including ourselves, who seek a peaceful political solution to South Africa's problems.

South Atlantic Islands (Sovereignty)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many records for the year 1955 relating to sovereignty of the South Sandwich Islands, the South Orkneys, South Georgia and the Falkland Islands were not made available in the Public Record Office in December 1985-January 1986; and if he will name the files.

Mr. Eggar: With the approval of the Lord Chancellor, and in accordance with established practice, certain records, some of which concern sovereignty, relating to the Falkland Islands and their former dependencies, have been withheld.

EC Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all measures and changes in procedure agreed by the recent European Economic Community intergovernmental conference, which require the unanimous consent of all member states and parliaments and those which cannot be implemented in practice without the unanimous consent of all member states.

Mrs. Chalker: All the changes to the EC treaties agreed in the intergovernmental conference are subject to the unanimous consent of member states and their Parliaments. The conclusions of the European Council on 2-3 December 1984 have already been placed in the Library of the House. Work is now in hand on a single consolidated text, which will be made available to the House as soon as we have it in final form.

Chile

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to Chile following General Pinochet's refusal to accept the terms of the national accord on the return to full democracy.

Mr. Eggar: As I told the House on 20 November, at column 256, we support the national agreement for the transition to full democracy as a basis for the orderly restoration of democracy in Chile.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to Chile and what action he intends to take following the recently published report by the Chilean Human Rights Commission, detailing the number of political arrests and deaths which have occurred in 1985.

Mr. Eggar: The 1985 report of the Chilean Human Rights Commission will not be published until early February. We shall carefully study this and other forthcoming reports on human rights in Chile, notably that of the United Nations special rapporteur which will be presented at the UN Commission on Human Rights meeting starting on 3 February.

Guatemala

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to resume discussions with Guatemala over the re-establishment of consular and diplomatic relations; what conditions the United Kingdom will set; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: It is not normal international practice to impose preconditions on the establishment of consular or diplomatic relations. We hope that the election of a democratic Government in Guatemala will facilitate a resumption of official relations, for which we have always been ready. No date for further discussions about this has been arranged.

UNESCO

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications he has had with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation following the United Kingdom's announcement of its withdrawal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Since the announcement of our decision not to rescind our notice of withdrawal from UNESCO we have received no communications from the secretariat. We have initiated exchanges with the secretariat about the maintenance of observer status for the United Kingdom with the organisation. We have also begun discussion of the financial aspects of our withdrawal, particularly in relation to our wish to continue to support certain intergovernmental scientific activities conducted under UNESCO auspices. Since our domestic legislation giving privileges and immunities to UNESCO staff lapsed automatically on withdrawal, we have informed the secretariat that we shall consequently be witholding from UNESCO the benefits of the convention on the privileges and immunities of the specialised agencies of the United Nations.

El Salvador (Officer Training)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of El Salvador concerning the training of their officers in the United Kingdom; what steps he will take to seek to ensure that the officers have had no part in human rights violations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: There have been no substantive discussions recently with the Salvadorean Government about this. We have made it clear that candidates for training should be both professionally and personally suitable.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sumrie plc

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he is now in a position to announce the action he is likely to take as a result of the inquiry under section 447 of the Companies Act into Sumrie plc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No, but I hope to be able to do so shortly.

Research (Extra-territoriality)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has held with the United States Academy of Sciences and the British Computer Society concerning extra-territoriality in research questions.

Mr. Channon: Officials in the Department of Trade and Industry met representatives of the United States National Academy of Sciences on 16 and 17 January, and there was some discussion of these questions. There have been no recent formal discussions specifically on these questions with the British Computer Society.

Lloyd's (Departmental Investigations)

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the results of his Department's inquiries into the Unimax Minet and Howden affairs at Lloyd's.

Mr. Howard: I shall consider the question of publication when the reports are received from the inspectors.

Patent Office

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what changes in expenditure and staffing are expected as a consequence of the Patent Office becoming a statutory non-departmental body;

(2) what is the proposed relationship to his Department and source of funding of the Patent office when it becomes a statutory non-departmental body;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 454, what aspects of the traditional Civil Service framework of the Patent Office currently inhibit its responsiveness to the needs of innovation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Patent Office's demands for manpower and other resources are at present considered in the context of the Department of Trade and Industry as a whole and in competition with other valid claims on the Department's limited resources. The Patent Office has, therefore, to keep its operations to the minimum necessary to meet its statutory obligations.

As a non-departmental body, the office will be obliged to be self-supporting from fees and charges which will be its regular source of funding and which will continue to be determined in relation to costs. My right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State, intends to retain the power to set targets and appoint a management board which will give general direction and guidance to the comptroller on the running of the office. Within this framework, however, the office will be free to respond to the needs of its customers. Apart from the Secretary of State's general control, it will be independent of my Department and its staff will not be civil servants. There may be some small increase in Patent Office staff to carry out functions now performed centrally in my Department.

Post Office

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the external financing limit for 1985-86 for the Post Office, and the increase for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The negative external financing limit for the Post Office for 1985-86 is −£70 million and for 1986-87 will be −£93 million. Further details are given in paragraphs 58-67 and tables 5.4 and 5.5 of the public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702-II).

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he made any assessment of the impact of an increase in the external financing limited for the Post Office on prices and service levels.

Mr. Pattie: In fixing the Post Office's external financing limit my right hon. and learned Friend takes into account a number of factors including the Post Office's plans for improving the efficiency and effectiveness of its operations and its assumption about the general level of its tariffs.

Financial Conglomerates

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals the Government have for regulating financial conglomerates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The growth of financial conglomerates poses particular problems for regulators. But these new financial supermarkets provide benefits for their customers and for investors. It is for the regulators to find ways of ensuring that these new entities are operating prudently, without erecting barriers which would prevent them from operating efficiently and competitively. Regulation must be clear enough to guide but not cramp structural change in the industry.

The needs of the different regulators are not identical. Investor protection, policy holder protection and depositor protection each call for different rules and different regulatory arrangements. The answer to the financial conglomerates is not necessarily the creation of an extra regulator specifically for them. That would mean duplication and inefficiency. The answer lies in facilitating co-operation between regulators. That involves three things — clear regulatory boundaries, shared information about the different aspects of the financial conglomerate in which one or more regulator has an interest and mechanisms for co-ordinating regulatory action with a view to resolving, conflicts of regulatory interest where possible.

Both the Financial Services Bill and the proposed new Banking Bill will lay down the boundaries of the two regulatory systems and provide powers to enable these boundaries to be swiftly adjusted to meet the needs arising from the creation of new financial products.

The Building Societies Bill and the Financial Services Bill contain powers to enable information to be disclosed to other regulators. The Government intend to enlarge the scope of the powers in the Financial Services Bill to enable information obtained under the Banking, Companies and Insurance Companies Acts to be disclosed to other regulators in appropriate circumstances.

Co-operation between regulators will be achieved by extra-statutory arrangements to nominate one of the regulators with an interest in a conglomerate to act as lead regulator. It will be for the regulators concerned to agree which of them should assume this role for each conglomerate. Essentially this role will be to ensure that all relevant information is obtained and shared, including information about potential difficulties, and to co-ordinate action by individual regulators. Each regulator will continue to have his own statutory duties and responsibilities. The task of the lead regulator is to promote an agreed solution which adequately takes account of the interersts of all the regulators.

The Department of Trade and Industry has established interdepartmental machinery to promote and monitor the new arrangements.

British Overseas Trade Board (Chairman)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it has yet been decided who should replace Lord Jellicoe when his term of office as Chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board expires in March of the current year.

Mr. Brittan: It is my intention to appoint Sir James Cleminson as chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board with effect from 16 July 1986. Meanwhile Lord Jellicoe has accepted an extension of his current appointment as chairman until 15 July. I am most grateful to Lord Jellicoe for this, and for his distinguished service in the post over the last three years.

House of Fraser

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will seek the permission of Mr. R. W. Rowland, chief executive of Lonrho, to publish in the Official Report the letter to him from Mr. Rowland of December 1985, regarding the takeover of the House of Fraser; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report his reply to the letter he received in December 1985 from Mr. R. W. Rowland, chief executive of Lonrho, regarding the takeover of the House of Fraser; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 18]: The text of the Secretary of State's reply of 15 January 1986 to Mr. Rowland is as follows:

"Thank you for your letter to me of 16 December, and for your subsequent letter of 18 December to the Prime Minister to which she has asked me to reply in view of my responsibility for competition legislation.

On the point you raised in your first letter, as Alex Fletcher clearly explained to you when he met you at the beginning of November 1984, the extension to the reference period was granted in the normal way, in response to a request from the MMC who were faced with several exceptionally lengthy submissions from the parties involved. As is illustrated by the fact that three other extensions to MMC reporting periods were announced on the same day as that to the Lonrho House of Fraser merger reference, such extensions are by no means a rare occurrence, and indeed I am not aware that there have been any occasions when a request by the MMC has been turned down.

As for the allegations you make in your letter to the Prime Minister about her involvement, I must emphasise these decisions were taken by the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and that the Prime Minister played no part whatsoever in that decision."

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Higher Education

98. Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what measures have been taken to make higher education more relevant to the needs of industry.

Mr. Walden: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Hayward) on 3 December 1985, at column 157.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is the percentage change in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1984-85, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in home student fees, for redundancy and for early retirement, changes to take account of minor capital works from the recurrent grant, changes in the level of local authority rates and additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes;

(2) what is the percentage change in real terms, measured by the gross domestic product deflator, in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1984-85, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, changes to take account of minor capital works from the recurrent grant and changes in the level of local authority rates (a) including and (b) excluding additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes.

Mr. Walden: The percentage changes in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee in its basic recurrent and equipment grants between 1980-81 and 1984-85, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in the level of home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, provision for capital in recurrent expenditure, local authority rates and additions made for information technology and new blood programmes, is given in column (a). Columns (b) and (c) give the comparable percentage figures in real terms measured by the GDP deflator (b) including and (c) excluding additions made for information technology and new blood posts. The percentage changes shown will be in part the consequence of the withdrawal of the overseas student subsidy and to the extent that these losses have been made up by the increased fee income will not accurately reflect the changes in the universities' financial position.

Student Numbers

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the number of students in (a) universities, (b) maintained sector advanced education and (c) non-advanced further education, for each of the last 10 years; what proportion were full-time and part-time; and what were the percentage changes in each category in each year and over the whole period.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the change in the number of (a) polytechnic students, (b) university students and (c) advanced further education students since 1979; and what proportion they represent within the post-18 student population as a whole, all expressed as full-time equivalents.

University Applicants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many advanced level secondary school pupils applied for a place at Oxford and Cambridge universities in each year since 1974; and how many were finally accepted.

Mr. Walden: The number of United Kingdom candidates applying and obtaining a place at Oxford and Cambridge universities in each year since 1980 was as follows. The numbers include a small number of students from further education colleges as well as school pupils. The numbers of acceptances include a few condition acceptances at Oxford, a small percentage of whom fail to meet the required conditions.

Figures prior to 1980 are not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Universities (Teaching Staff)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total cost to the Government of the employment of academic teaching staff in the universities, including and excluding national insurance contributions.

Mr. Walden: This information is not available. Universities' general expenditure in the academic year 1983-84 (the latest year for which information is available) included £583 million for the salaries of clinical and non-clinical academic staff, including employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions. Separate information for expenditure on national insurance contributions is not available, but it is expected to have been 4 to 5 per cent. of total salary costs for these staff.

A precise share of this cannot be attributed to Government funding, but Exchequer grants and fees paid from public funds will have covered approximately 70 per cent. of universities' total recurrent income.

Professional Engineers

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the annual production of professional engineers in member states of the European Economic Community, the United States of America and Japan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: International comparisons of numbers of engineers achieving chartered or equivalent status annually are not available. Estimates of the number of higher education engineering qualifications awarded each year in the United Kingdom together with figures for the other countries referred to are given in the following table.

Further Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the percentage of 16 and 17-year-olds who remained in education in schools and colleges in September 1984 for England and for each local education authority; and how this compares with each of the previous five years, according to the following categories (a) full-time education in schools, (b) sixth-form colleges, (c) tertiary colleges, (d) further-education colleges and (e) private institutions.

Mr. Walden: Full information in the format requested could be produced only at disproportionate cost. The tables show the percentage of the population aged 16 and 17 in full-time education in each local education authority in England. It shows separately those in maintained schools and further education establishments for the academic years 1979-80 and 1984-85.

European Youth Ministers

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the outcome of the European Youth Ministers' meeting in December.

Mr. Dunn: This Council of Europe Conference, with the theme "Participation", was held at the invitation of the French Government in Strasbourg from 16 to 19 December. The United Kingdom delegation, which I led, included the current chairperson of the British Youth Council, and advisers from the Department's youth service unit and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Schools.

Ministers and delegations from all member countries attended, with representatives and observers present from some other countries, the European Commission and many international organisations, including a number of non-governmental organisations representing young people in Europe. Discussions in formal sessions concerned the situation facing young people in Europe; the scope for increasing participation by young people in member countries of the Council of Europe; and future co-operation at European level on youth matters. The conclusions of the conference have now been published by the Council of Europe and I am sending a copy to the hon. Member and placing further copies in the Library.

Visually Handicapped Students

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what studies have been made of the needs of partially sighted students, including low vision aids and audio visual aids and of the use of large print.

Mr. Dunn: A number of studies have been made on the needs of partially sighted students; I am sending the right hon. Member a copy of a bibliography published by the Department. It is not possible to identify specifically those which refer to low vision aids, audio visual aids or the use of large print.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what financial assistance is available to schools, higher and further education and training establishments for provision of low vision aids and larger print publications to enable visually handicapped students to read standard text books and literature.

Mr. Dunn: The provision of low vision aids and larger print publications to enable visually handicapped students in schools, higher and further education and training establishments to read standard text books and literature is a matter primarily for local education authorities and the bodies responsible for individual institutions. Such expenditure would be met from the normal sources of finance for local government, voluntary colleges and universities. Specific provision is also made under the scheme for education support grants in 1985-86 for microelectronic equipment designed or adapted for use by children with special educational needs; and in 1986-87 for similar equipment for further education students.

University Museums (Funding)

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the present arrangements for funding university museums, including the Fitzwilliam museum in Cambridge; and if he intends to review urgently the method of their funding.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has received no recent representations on the funding of university museums. The responsibility for the funding of university museums rests with the university concerned, but is one of the factors the University Grants Committee takes into account in determining the distribution of recurrent grant. As announced on 11 April 1984, at columns 261-262, special arrangements have been made for an amount equivalent to the present Greater Manchester council's contribution to the Manchester museum and the Whitworth art gallery to be channelled through the UGC and the University of Manchester following the abolition of the Greater Manchester council.

Research Councils

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to review the work of the research councils and their funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend already receives advice annually on the work of the research councils and their funding from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils.

School Curriculum

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to respond to the report of the Library and Information Services Council "School Libraries: The Foundations of the Curriculum".

Mr. Chris Patten: There are no plans for a formal response to this report, but there have been a number of recent developments which are relevant to its concerns.

In March 1985 the Government published the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9649), which recognise the importance of school libraries. As "Better Schools" says, the Government believe that the function and use of school libraries and media resources should be an essential feature of the curricular policy of every local education authority and school. Schools which think through the role of the library in the curriculum are better placed to take full advantage of this important resource and so to extend the range and depth of their pupil's learning.

A report by Her Majesty's inspectorate of a survey of library provision in some secondary schools in six local education authorities, published last June, highlighted the need for a change in attitudes to school libraries. The senior chief inspector sent copies of the report to all chief education officers in England, inviting them to comment on its relevance for their schools. Comments were also sought from the Library Association and the School Library Association. Responses to the survey are under consideration.

Arrangements have been agreed with the Office of Arts and Libraries for joint visiting by Her Majesty's inspectors and library advisers from time to time. The first such visits have already taken place. Her Majesty's inspectorate has also indicated its willingness to consider appointing chartered librarians as occasional inspectors if exercises mounted in future need this expertise.

The Library and Information Services Council's report also addressed a number of recommendations to local authorities, training establishments, staffs of schools, professional bodies and others. Those recommendations are for consideration by the bodies concerned. A concerted effort is needed, within the resources available, to improve the contribution which school libraries make to the quality of education in our schools.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Enterprise Zones

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the operation of enterprise zones in the Province.

Mr. Needham: There are two enterprise zones in Northern Ireland, the Belfast enterprise zone and the Londonderry enterprise zone.

Belfast enterprise zone:

1. The Belfast zone was designated on 21 October 1981. It consists of two sub-zones:—
   (i) an inner city sub-zone of 300 acres dominated by large former textile mills; and
   (ii) 200 acres of mostly reclaimed land at the north foreshore owned by the Belfast city council and the Belfast harbour commissioners.
2. At the end of four years the zone has attracted 150 new firms, bringing 1,512 new jobs; a further 41 firms have expanded and generated 241 new jobs—giving 1,753 new jobs to the zone. Over the four years the zone has attracted £25 million of investment.
3. There continues to be a high level of interest in the advantages of the zone from the private sector. Full utilisation of the 200 acres in the north foreshore sub-zone is in prospect. Development schemes in the inner city sub-zone already under way or in planning will cater for the demands for development sites in the area.

Londonderry enterprise zone:

4. Londonderry enterprise zone was designated on 13 September 1983. It also is a split one with:
   (a) 167 acres on the west bank of the river Foyle at Springtown, Northland and Pennyburn industrial estates; and
   (b) 103 acres at Campsie on the east bank.
5. To date 39 new businesses have been established, which together with expansion of existing companies provide 290 new jobs in the zone. The zone has attracted some £1 million of investment, bringing 250,000 sq. ft. of vacant factory space into use for commercial and industrial purposes.

6. One of the most significant developments has been the acquisition of a very large vacant factory by a local company. To date, 11 of the new companies to the zone are located at these premises, occupying some 70,000 sq. ft.

Car Parks

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been achieved in the privatisation of car parks run by the Department of the Environment (NI).

Mr. Needham: At present, 29 of the Department's charged car parks are operated under contract by private enterprise. The possibility of extending this number is under consideration.

Intergovernmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to keep the House informed of the activities of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Tom King: I have placed the joint statements issued after each of the three meetings of the Intergovernmental Conference in the Library. I intend to make this a general practice in future.

Police Stations (Damage)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the repair of the Royal Ulster Constabulary stations damaged by terrorist bombardment.

Mr. Tom King: The Provisional IRA's bombing campaign on police stations and the intimidation of building contractors involved in security works will not diminish the Royal Ulster Constabulary's commitment to discharging its essential tasks. The Government and the Police Authority for Northern Ireland are firmly resolved that those police stations which need to be replaced will be rebuilt as a matter of top priority.

For security reasons I do not wish to detail the steps which the Government have taken, and will be taking, in conjunction with the Police Authority to ensure that the momentum of the police building programme is maintained. However, I can say that the Royal Engineers will play an important role in this: already they have provided invaluable assistance at a number of locations.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Thames Valley Police

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on police manning levels in the Thames Valley force.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Deportation

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the annual cost of removal of illegal entrants;

(2) what is the average cost of enforcing a deportation order.

Mr. Waddington: In the financial year 1984-85 the total cost of travel arrangements for all those removed from the United Kingdom at public expense was just over £850,000. I regret that it is not possible to divide this figure so as to show separately the costs of travel arrangements for those removed as illegal entrants, as the subject of deportation orders, and as passengers refused leave to enter. Arrangements have already been made to enable this information to be available for future periods. Figures for costs, other than travel costs, could not be obtained without disproportionate expense.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been deported during each of the last 10 years on each of the grounds of national security, good international relations or for other such reasons; and in each case what was their nationality;

(2) how many persons deported on grounds of national security, good international relations of for other such reasons have sought in the last 10 years to have their deportation orders revoked; and what was the outcome in each case.

Mr. Hurd: In 1977 two United States citizens were deported on grounds of national security. Between 1976 and 1983 there were no other deportations on the grounds specified in the question. The figures for 1984 and 1985 are as follows:

	1984	1985
Algeria	2	—
Bahrain	—	8
Iran	2	—
Libya	15	4
Morocco	1	—
Sudan	1	—
Syria	—	4
Yugoslavia	—	1
	21	17

The grounds for deportation were as follows:

	1984	1985
National security	6	14
Relations with another country	7	—
Other reasons of a political nature	8	3

In one case application has been made for revocation of an order; it was refused.

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the proportions of visitors admitted on check out and ordinary conditions during 1985 or the most recent available 12-month period.

Mr. Waddington: In the 12 months ending June 1985, about 5 per cent. of those admitted as visitors (other than European Community nationals) were admitted on checkout conditions and the other 95 per cent. on non-checkout conditions.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers travelling through Heathrow airport in the most recent 12-month period have been referred for medical examination; and how many passengers have been refused entry on medical grounds.

Mr. Waddington: Under the immigration rules, persons subject to immigration control who are coming to the country for more than six months are normally referred for medical examination. Other persons may be referred for examination at the discretion of the immigration officer.

In 1985 at Heathrow airport, 33,312 passengers were referred by the immigration service for medical examination, of whom 66 were refused leave to enter on medical grounds.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer he gave to the hon. Member for Stretford on 18 December 1985, Official Report, column 174, if the Secretary of State has specified conditions and restrictions to be observed in a control area designated for the embarkation or disembarkation of passengers at any port under paragraphs 26 and 27 of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971; if any of these refer to passengers being accompanied by friends, relatives or representatives; and, if appropriate, when these conditions and restrictions were imposed.

Mr. Waddington: The Secretary of State has from time to time given written notice of the conditions and restrictions to be observed in control areas of a port under paragraphs 26 and 27 of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971. It has not been felt necessary to refer in such notices to passengers wishing to be accompanied by friends, relatives or representatives, as the powers of examination of a passenger under paragraph 2 of schedule 2 do not grant to a third party a right to be present during an examination.

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought under the provisions of the Video Recordings Act 1984; and with what result.

Mr. Mellor: The Act came into force during 1985 and information on prosecutions during 1985 is not yet available.

Prisons (Workplaces)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of workplaces in prisons in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: Totals of workplaces available in prisons for the last 10 years are not held centrally. For prison service industries this information is available for the past four years only, although the numbers employed in industries is available for the past 10 years. The figures relating to prison service industries areas follows:

	No. of Workplaces	No. Employed
1975-76	—	14,400
1976-77	—	14,600
1977-78	—	14,200
1978-79	—	13,600
1979-80	—	12,900
1980-81	—	12,200
1981-82	15,505	12,250
1982-83	15,026	11,450
1983-84	14,600	10,418
1984-85	14,480	9,802

Prisoners (AIDS)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons in prison currently have acquired immune deficiency sysdrome.

Mr. Mellor: We have received no report of a current case of diagnosed AIDS in the prison population of England and Wales.

Women (Attacks)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from chief constables on special responses made to attacks on women; cal(2) if he will call for reports from chief constables on the steps taken to respond to rape;

(3) what information he has as to the number of police officers in each force area who have been trained in sexual investigation techniques;

(4) if he will call for reports from all chief constables outside the metropolis as to which forces have rape victim examination suites on the same lines as the one in Brentford.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Five hundred and fifty-six officers of the Metropolitan police had undergone a course in sexual offences investigation techniques by the end of 1985. Special training in the handling of rape cases, especially by women officers, is customary in other forces, but no figures are available centrally of the numbers who have been trained. The general question of the police's response to cases of rape and domestic violence, including the treatment of victims, and the provision of special examination suites, is the subject of a recent report on violence against women published by the Women's National Commission. The report contains a large number of recommendations for building on the work which has already been done in this area, and the Department will be consulting with the Association of Chief Police Officers on the scope for further action in response to the report.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from chief constables on the steps taken to prevent attacks on women.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As a result of the Prime Minister's recent seminar on crime prevention the Home Office, in consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers, will consider urgently the production of an advisory publicity package for the public, and particularly for women, on practical steps they can undertake to reduce the risk of attack and how to respond in the event of attack.

Police Records

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Merseyside as to information kept about persons not suspected or convicted of involvement in criminal matters, and as to the form in which this information is kept and as to how many such individuals are presently recorded on the system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards police forces keeping records on persons not suspected or convicted of involvement in criminal matters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The collection and keeping of such information are matters for individual chief officers of police, but any information kept on computers by the police is subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984.

Undercover Operations

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the instructions given to PC John Fordham as to the extent to which he was to conceal his identity when involved in an undercover operation at the home of Mr. Kenneth Noye; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the general instructions given to officers in surveillance units as to the extent to which they are to disclose their identity if challenged when involved in undercover operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The comissioner considers that the disclosure of operational instructions given to officers engaged in such duties would be to place them at unjustifiable risk and impair their operational effectiveness. All officers undertaking such operations are, however, subject to the same legal requirements as police officers generally. The instructions given to PC John Fordham conformed to these principles.

Ms. Angela Lloyd

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis into the circumstances of the police raid at the house of Ms. Angela Lloyd in St. Paul's Tower, Beaumont road, Leyton, in early December and as to when a search warrant was obtained to authorise this entry.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The commissioner informs me that a warrant was obtained on 29 November for the purpose of entering Ms. Lloyd's flat to search for stolen property. As a result of the search, carried out on 3 December, one person was arrested and Ms. Lloyd charged with impeding his arrest.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the resources devoted by each police force to crime prevention.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested for each force is not readily available. It is for individual chief officers of police to decide on the disposition of their resources. They are encouraged by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary to formulate strategies for the prevention of crime which make best use of the resources at their disposal.

Exclusion Orders

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been excluded on the personal direction of himself or his predecessors from the United Kingdom during each of the last 10 years; in each case, on what grounds; and what was their nationality;

(2) how many persons excluded on grounds of national security, good international relations or for other such reasons have sought in the last 10 years to have their exclusion order revoked; and what was the outcome in each case.

Mr. Hurd: Separate statistics of persons excluded on the personal directions of the Secretary of State have been collected only since 1984. Their nationality was as follows:

Bulgaria	1	1
Canada	1	—
Cuba	1	3
Czechoslovakia	1	—
GDR	—	2
Greece	1	—
Hungary	3	3
India	1	—
Iraq	—	1
Iran	1	1
Lebanon	—	3
Libya	4	6
Netherlands	—	1
Pakistan	1	—
Poland	2	2
Switzerland	—	1
Syria	—	4
Uganda	—	1
USA	3	—
USSR	6	9
Nationality doubtful	1	2

In 1984 and 1985 the main categories of people excluded were those excluded on security grounds and those who there was reason to believe were involved in terrorist activities. In 1984 another significant category was officials of international Communist Front organisations.

In one case the exclusion directions were subsequently withdrawn. In one other case an application for their withdrawal was refused.

Refugees

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received during the last five years to incorporate the convention and protocol relating the status of refugees into United Kingdom law.

Mr. Waddington: The question of incorporation has been raised with us by refugee organisations on several occasions over the last five years, but comprehensive information about these approaches is not available.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many experiments were conducted on each species of animal designated as protected under the Cruelty to Animals Act in each of the last five years for which figures are available; how many applications were made to experiment with each such species in each year, and how many applications were refused.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the number of experiments on living animals subject to the provisions of the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 which were started in the years 1980 to 1984 is given, by species of animal, in table 14 of the "Statistics of Experiments on Living Animals, Great Britain, 1984" (Cmnd. 9574). Applications for licences and certificates are not made for specific experiments as such and information is not available as to the numbers of applications for authority to carry out experiments on particular species, nor as to the numbers refused.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to prohibit the passaging of tumours between experimental animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The maintenance and passage of tumours for scientific purposes is not subject to any form of control under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876; but under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill now in another place these procedures will require the consent of my right hon. Friend. The passaging of tumours, where justified, will be permitted under the authority of an appropriate personal and project licence, and subject to such conditions as my right hon. Friend may impose. All personal licences will include a condition requiring the immediate, humane killing of any animal found to be suffering severe pain or severe distress which cannot be alleviated.

Police (Automatic Weapons)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the police forces in England and Wales which have been given permission to acquire automatic weapons.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is not available centrally. Police forces in England and Wales do not need Home Office permission to acquire firearms. The purchase of such equipment is a matter for chief officers and their police authorities.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to public funds in each year since its inception of the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The association was formed in 1948. A full-time general secretary was appointed in 1968 to do the work previously done by two chief constables in their own time, but the costs of the secretariat have been met from public funds only since 1 April 1973. Following is the annual expenditure:

1973-74	20,608
1974-75	29,476
1975-76	38,091
1976-77	41,259
1977-78	47,989
1978-79	57,374
1979-80	96,923
1980-81	108,524
1981-82	133,105
1982-83	142,344
1983-84	148,519
1984-85	151,400
*1985-86	77,566

* First two quarters only.

Commission for Racial Equality (Letters)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will discuss with the chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality its policy on replying to letters received in languages other than English.

Mr. Waddington: No. This is entirely a matter for the commission.

Mr. Alan W. Norton

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in the past year in the case of Alan W. Norton; what action he has taken following these representations; which Jersey officials were consulted on what action should be taken; what previous involvement these officials had in the case; whether the trial judge was consulted on all requests for parole; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Mr right hon. Friend has received representations in the past year from the hon. Member about Mr. Norton's conviction and his possible release on licence. These representations were carefully considered.

The observations of the former Bailiff of Jersey (who had acted as prosecution counsel in the case) were obtained on points of detail raised about Mr. Norton's conviction. I subsequently wrote to the hon. Member to say that I could see no grounds for any action on the part of the Home Secretary.

I also explained that the trial judge, the Lord Chief Justice and the Bailiff had been consulted in September 1984 about Mr. Norton's possible release on licence. The Parole Board did not recommend Mr. Norton's release but recommended—and my right hon. Friend has agreed—that his case should be referred to the local review committee in May 1990.

Channel Islands

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what responses he has received from the states of Guernsey and Jersey to Her Majesty's Government's request for a contribution to the cost of defence and foreign representation.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The states of Guernsey have offered to assume responsibility for the Alderney breakwater, to make a voluntary contribution towards the annual cost of maintaining the Royal naval paort headquarters in Guernsey, to pay over to Her Majesty's Government fees charged for the issue of passports in Guernsey and to pay reasonable identifiable expenses incurred by Her Majesty's Government specifically for the island in the field of international representation.

We understand that the recommendations of the committee which the States of Jersey established to consider the Government's request will be debated later this month.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are any proposed staff costs in his Department in the financial year 1986-87, arising out of duties associated with the implementation of the Local Government Act 1985.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Yes; it is too soon for estimates of costs, but they will be within the Department's manpower and financial targets.

Immigration

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to transfer interviews, where appropriate, under the immigration rules, in relation to visitors from the Indian sub-continent from London Heathrow to Leeds/Bradford airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Interviews are already transferred where appropriate to Leeds/Bradford airport. In the third quarter of 1985, 122 cases were transferred there from Heathrow terminal 3. Many of these involved passengers from the Indian subcontinent.

National Marriage Guidance Council

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what grants were paid by his Department to the National Marriage Guidance Council in 1984 and 1985; and what is the projected grant for 1986.

Mr. Mellor: Grants to the National Marriage Guidance Council have been £827,460 in 1984-85 and £864,570 in 1985-86.

The grant for 1986-87 will be decided in the light of the review of grants to marriage guidance organisations which will shortly be completed. I shall write to my hon. Friend when it has been settled.

Tottenham Disturbances

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to (a) the number of people from whom the police have taken possession of their shoes and clothing since the 6 October disturbances in Tottenham, (b) when it is intended to return these items to their owners and (c) if compensation for loss, dry cleaning and repairs will be paid.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the course of their inquiries into the murder and other serious offences which occurred during the Tottenham riot on 6 October the Metropolitan police have seized clothing and footwear from 183 persons for forensic examination. Articles are being returned as soon as they are excluded from the inquiries and are being retained only when required as exhibits in criminal proceedings. The police are prepared to consider claims for compensation where property is lost or damaged as a result of police action.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of those convicted for robbery or mugging in Portsmouth in each of the past 10 years have been (a) given a custodial sentence, (b) given a suspended sentence, (c) fined and (d) given a community service order;

(2) how many people were prosecuted for offences related to robbery or muggings committed in Portsmouth in each of the last 10 years;

(3) how many of the robberies or muggings committed in Portsmouth in each of the last 10 years were committed by people in the 14 to 25 years age group.

Mr. Mellor: The available information, which may be incomplete, is given in the table.

In the absence of a caution or a prosecution the age of an offender is not known.

To produce corresponding figures for earlier years would involve disproportionate cost.

Persons proceeded against for offences of robbery at Portsmouth Petty Sessional Division or Crown Court.

Number of persons

	All Ages						Aged 14-25
	Proceeded against	Found guilty	Fined	CSO	Fully suspended sentence	Immediate custody	Found guilty
1979	19	15	—	—	—	14	11
1980	15	13	—	—	2	11	8
1981	17	15	—	1	1	8	11
1982	23	16	—	—	1	14	11
1983	13	3	—	2	—	1	1
1984	14	7	—	—	—	5	2

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been injured in robberies and muggings in Portsmouth in each of the last 10 years; how many people have been detained in hospital; and how many have been disabled;

(2) how many robberies and muggings were recorded in Portsmouth in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The term mugging has no legal definition; most offences of the type frequently referred to as "mugging" are recorded as offences of robbery. The information readily available to me relates to offences of robbery recorded by the police in police force areas, statistics of which are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (table 2.6 of the issue for 1984, Cmnd. 9621), and in "Criminal Statistics Supplementary Tables" (volume 3, table S3.1 of the issue for 1984). No information is available to me on numbers of persons injured hospitalised or disabled as a result of robberies or "muggings".

Cigarettes (Illegal Sale)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions for illegal sale of cigarettes were initiated in 1985 in England.

Mr. Mellor: Records readily available to me, which may be incomplete, show 45 prosecutions in England and Wales in 1984 for the offence of selling tobacco to a juvenile. This information is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables, 1984" (table S1.1(A) under classification 144). Corresponding information for 1985 is not yet available.

Television Licence

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the television licence would cost at current prices if it had remained at the real level at the time of the Post Office Act 1969; how many applications he or the licence records office receives in a year for a refund and how many were granted in 1985; why the administrative costs preclude a refund system similar to that for vehicle excise duty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The television licence fees in 1969 were £6 (monochrome) and £11 (colour), the real equivalents of which would now be about £33 and £60. The current fees of £18 and £58 cover the three-year period from 28 March 1985. Comprehensive records about refunds and refund applications are not kept. It is estimated that about 13,000 refunds a year are made on the ground that a licence is no longer needed within 28 days of its issue (or its due date of issue if it is a renewal). We have no present plans to introduce refund arrangements similar to those which have applied for a number of years to vehicle excise duty, in the light not only of the administrative costs involved, but of the loss of licence revenue to the BBC.

Benzodiazepine Drugs

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider the re-scheduling of benzodiazepine drugs in accordance with the United Nations convention on psychotropic substances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: In 1984, 33 benzodiazepine drugs were scheduled under the United Nations Convention on Psychotropic Substances 1971, which the Government intend to ratify within the next few weeks. The changes needed in our misuse of drugs legislation to bring these drugs within our domestic controls are contained in regulations which are currently before Parliament and are intended to take effect from 1 April this year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Access

Sir John Page asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will seek discussions with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, the Westminster city council and the Greater London council about the implementation of the sessional order relating to access to the House with regard to the new bus lanes leading to Parliament square.

Mr. Biffen: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport on 14 January, at column 559. In the circumstances I do not believe that any useful purpose would be served by the discussions which my hon. Friend suggests.

Select Committees

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many committee temporary assistants are employed by each of the Select Committees; how many have been appointed since the new committees were established; what is the cost each year; and how many have had their appointments extended beyond the initial two years.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 693]: The Treasury and Civil Service Committee employs two temporary assistants; the Education, Science and Arts, Environment and Transport Committees each employ one.

A total of 13 such assistants have been appointed since their Committees were established. Of these, six have had their appointments extended beyond the initial two years.

The expenditure in terms of salaries paid to specialist assistants to Select Committees in each of the financial years since the Committees were set up is as follows:

Financial year	£
1980-81	14,118
1981-82	65,004
1982-83	74,293
1983-84	57,204

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Salaries

Mr. Dykes asked the Lord Privy Seal what is the latest information he has on comparable parliamentary salaries exclusive of allowances, in the United Kingdom, France, Germany and the United States of America.

Mr. Biffen: The latest available figures on parliamentary salaries which have been compiled on a comparable basis are given in the "Twentieth Report of the Review Body on Top Salaries" (May 1983). The figures for the countries referred to in the hon. Gentleman's question are as follows:

UNITED KINGDOM
House of Commons

Basic salary of £14,510. Maximum salary of £15,362 for those who draw the London allowance of £852 per annum, which is taxable. Whole of salary taxable.

FRANCE
National Assembly

335,200 Fr (£27,702), of which nine twentieths (150,840 Fr=£12,466) is regarded as an expense allowance free of tax.

GERMANY
Bundestag

DM 90,000 (£20,979), all taxable.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
Senate

US $60,662·50 (£35,684), all taxable. In 1977 a limit on outside earnings equivalent to 15 per cent. of the Member's salary was imposed but this was increased to 30 per cent. in December 1982. Compared with Senators, Members of the House of Representatives do not add substantially to their income by means of outside earnings.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
House of Representatives

Same as Senator from December 1982. However, Members of the House of Representatives will receive US $69,800 (£41,059) — the first time since 1796 that Senators and Congressmen have received different salaries.

Throughout this table the figures in pounds given in brackets are converted from local currencies at the rates of exchange prevailing in October 1982.

Salaries

Mr. Dykes asked the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed as representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will give figures and grades, titles and rank for those officers of the House of Commons whose salaries are (a) higher and (b) lower than those of hon. Members.

Mr. Beith: The number and grades of staff employed by the House of Commons Commission, with an annual basic rate or on a salary scale which includes certain points exceeding £17,702, are given in the chart. All scales include £1,365, or a proportion of this figure, per annum inner London weighting allowance except that no such allowance is payable to those indicated*. The numbers of staff shown include some staff in grades with a salary scale exceeding £17,702 per annum who may individually be receiving an annual salary below that amount.

The remaining grades of staff currently in receipt of an annual salary of less than £17,702 are included in the list of all staff given in Statement C to the "Seventh Annual Report of the House of Commons Commission 1984-85", a copy of which is held in the Library. The salaries of certain grades of staff at various levels are in the course of revision following a recently completed grading review conducted by the Commission's Staff Inspector.

The salaries of all staff employed by the Commission are linked to those of Civil Service grades.

However, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is participating in an ethnic survey of staff in Government Departments in London, the south-east and East Anglia which will be completed by the end of 1986.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Race Relations

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the chartered accountancy profession about the implications for the cost-effectiveness and competitiveness of the profession of its co-operation with the investigation being conducted by the Commission for Racial Equality under sections 48 and 49 of the Race Relations Act 1976; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: None.

Airbus

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent discussions he has had with United States trade officials concerning restraints on the sale, import or use of the European Airbus by airlines flying within or to the United States of America.

Mr. Brittan: In the past few months, charges have been made in some quarters in the United States that European Governments have politically intervened to promote Airbus sales in competition with US manufactured aircraft. Doubts have also been expressed on whether Government launch aid towards development of the A320 is in accordance with our international obligations.

My right hon. and learned Friend has already informed the US Administration that Her Majesty's Government do not accept that it has in any way acted contrary to its international obligations in these matters. The Government will continue to resist such charges on behalf of British Aerospace and our other aerospace companies.

Westland plc

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he or his private office saw a draft of the letter to him dated 17 January from the chief executive of British Aerospace regarding the Westland affair before a copy of the letter was formally received by him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brittan: Following the exchange in the House between my hon. Friend, the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall) and my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 16 January at column 1207, it was clear to both my Department and BAe that there was a possibility of a misunderstanding having arisen at the meeting which I held with Sir Raymond Lygo on 8 January.

Following contacts between my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel and my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Malone), a discussion took place on the evening of 16 January between Sir Raymond Lygo and one of his colleagues, and representatives of my Department. My hon. Friends the Members for Arundel and for Aberdeen, South took part in these discussions.

As a result of those discussions Sir Raymond indicated his intention to write substantially in the terms of his letter of 17 January. When this was reported to me I indicated in turn that, were I to receive such a letter, it would be my intention to reply in the terms of my letter to Sir Raymond of 17 January.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the number from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers within his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Butcher: This Department does not at present hold records of the ethnic origins of its staff employed in the London area; a survey is to be conducted later this year.

Company Returns and Accounts

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has taken any action against Mr. Michael Hepker or against Provincial Properties Wales, its officers or directors for alleged non-filing of annual returns and accounts.

Mr. Howard: Summonses were issued on 11 December against the company and its directors, including Mr. Hepker. These summonses are returnable at Cardiff magistrates' court on 28 January.

Mr. Michael Hepker and Meldoak

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he intends to take any action concerning Mr. Michael Hepker and Meldoak in the light of the correspondence received from the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch.

Mr. Howard: I cannot say until my right hon. and learned Friend has studied the papers that he has just received from the hon. Member.

Johnson Matthey Bankers

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he intends to take any action concerning Mr. Michael Hepker and borrowings from Johnson Matthey Bankers by Ravensbury Investments, Radcliffe and Provincial Properties Wales in the light of the correspondence received from the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch.

Mr. Howard: No. This is one of the matters already being investigated by the police.

GEC—Plessey (Takeover)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will now refer the proposed take over of Plesseys by the General Electric Company to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 15]: The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 20 January 1986 that he had decided, in accordance with the recommendation of the Director General of Fair Trading, to refer the proposed acquisition of Plessey Co. plc by GEC plc to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission for investigation. He considered that the proposal raised issues of competition which justified investigation by the Commission.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crime Statistics

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Attorney-General if he will give for each of the following categories of crime, namely, murder, attempted murder or conspiracy to commit murder, wounding with intent to do serious bodily harm, possession of firearms or explosives, other major firearms offences and membership of an illegal organisation, the number of cases reported to and investigated by the Director of Public Prosecutions, the number of persons charged and the number of persons convicted who were serving members of the security forces at the time of the alleged offence.

The Attorney-General: In respect of cases received by the Director of Public Prosecutions Northern Ireland in 1985 relating to persons who were serving members of the security forces at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, records maintained by the Director of Public Prosecutions Northern Ireland show the position to be as follows:

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Attorney-General how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve, were charged with offences and convicted of offences, respectively, in 1985, giving details of custodial sentences imposed, and separately for charges and convictions concerning: murder, attempted murder, membership of illegal organisations, conspiracy to cause explosions, withholding information concerning terrorist activity, possession of explosives, possession of explosives to cause bodily harm, possession of firearms, possession of firearms with intent to cause bodily harm and other offences classified as scheduled offences.

The Attorney-General: In respect of cases received by the Director of Public Prosecutions Northern Ireland in 1985 relating to persons who were full-time members of the Ulster Defence Regiment at the time of the commission of the alleged offence or part-time members who were on duty at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, records maintained by the Director of Public Prosecutions Northern Ireland show the position to be as follows. Directions were issued to prosecute 27 such members of the UDR. Trials have taken place in respect of four of these persons. Of these four one has been acquitted and three have been convicted. All three convicted persons were fined.

In respect of the offences specifically referred to the position is as follows:

* The person who is to be prosecuted for murder is also being prosecuted in the same proceedings for three other offences, namely possession of a firearm with intent to endanger life, collecting information likely to be useful to terrorists and armed robbery.

Mr. Michael Hepker

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Attorney-General what papers the Department of Public Prosecutions has received in relation to Mr. Michael Hepker and the Moneysave/Supasave case; and if he intends to take any action.

The Attorney-General: The greater part of this matter is under investigation by the Inland Revenue. The liquidator of the companies is in contact with the Director of Public Prosecutions in respect of certain other aspects and has provided the Director with papers. It is too early to say what action, if any, the director will take.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Attorney-General if he intends to take any action concerning Mr. Hepker and Meldoak.

The Attorney-General: This matter is under investigation by the south Wales police who have recently submitted a preliminary report to the director, which is under consideration.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Attorney-General if he intends to take any action concerning Mr. Michael Hepker and borrowing from Johnson Matthey Bank by Ravensbury Investments, Radcliffe and Provincial Properties Wales Ltd.

The Attorney-General: The transaction mentioned in the hon. Member's question have been referred to the City of London police who are looking at all complaints relating to JMB. It is too early to say what action, if any, the Director of Public Prosecutions will take regarding this particular aspect of the matter.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Duties (Rail Travel)

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister what is her policy towards using British Rail for official duties; and if she will state the number of occasions since May 1979 on which she has travelled by British Rail in undertaking her official duties.

The Prime Minister: I regret that for reasons of practicality and security it has not proved possible for me to travel by British Rail on official business. I hope to do so if a suitable opportunity arises.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if she will state the number of those from an ethnic minority background who are employed in her private office; and what are the positions they occupy.

The Prime Minister: Records are not yet kept as staff in 10 Downing street have not been asked to disclose their ethnic origins. However, the office is participating in an ethnic survey of staff in Government Departments in London, south-east and East Anglia which will be completed by the end of 1986.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a breakdown by age, sex and social class of student enrolments in the Open University since 1971.

Mr. Walden: The Open University collects information on occupation but not social class and a cross analysis by age, sex and occupation is not readily available. The available information is shown in the following tables. Information in respect of occupation prior to 1983 has been published by the Open University in their "Digest of Statistics 1971-1982", a copy of which is in the Library.

Home Students (Fees)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the average level of fees in higher and further education courses for home students for each of the last five years at (a) outturn prices, (b) 1984-85 prices and (c) indexed; and if he will isolate arts and science courses according to the same criteria.

3. The reduction in the first degree and diploma fee from £900 in 1981-82 to £480 in 1982-83 was accompanied by a corresponding increase in the provision of grant to institutions.

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing, for each year since 1962 (a) the value of student grants inside and outside London, (b) the real value when compared with the rise in retail prices and (c) the real value when compared with the rise in rents/accommodation costs, (d) the real value when compared with the rise in average earnings, (e) the global value of student grants as a proportion of the gross domestic product and (f) the real value when compared with the increase in book prices, indexed, using 1962-63 as a base.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

School Governing Bodies (Budgeting)

Mr. Batiste asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the devolution of greater budgeting responsibility to school governing bodies.

Mr. Dunn: The Government believe that, to increase the scope for cost-conscious and sound financial management in both LEAs and schools, the governing body should have significant responsibility for a school's expenditure. The Education Bill to be introduced this Session will consequently include proposals for an appropriate measure of financial delegation from LEAs to school governing bodies.

Museum Attendances

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1985 reported by the Natural History museum, comprising its outstations and the Geological museum, with the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1984.

Mr. Walden: I understand that 3,354,351 people visited the British Museum (Natural History) in 1985. This figure includes the Zoological Museum at Tring, Hertfordshire and the Geological Museum. This represents an 11 per cent. increase over the equivalent figure for 1984.

First Degree Students

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the numbers of first degree students in British universities in 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86; and what numbers he anticipates for 1986-87.

Mr. Walden: The total numbers of full-time and sandwich undergraduate level students in British universities in 1983-84 and 1984-85 were 244,200 and 241,700 respectively. The provisional estimate for 1985-86 to the nearest thousand is 240,000. Numbers to be admitted in 1986-87 is a matter for the universities to decide but it is not expected that the total numbers will be very different from those in 1985-86.

Civil Science Budget

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the proposed civil science budget for 1986-87.

Mr. Walden: The science budget, from which the research councils receive their grants in aid, will be £614 million in 1986-87, an increase in cash of £15 million over previously published plans for that year. In addition it is estimated that approximately £600 million will be spent on scientific research in universities from University Grants Committee funds; this figure is based on an estimate of the distribution of universities' resources among different functions.

Member's Correspondence

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Woking, dated 5 September, 16 November and 30 November 1985, respectively, about which the hon. Member wrote to him on 5 January 1986.

Mr. Walden: I hope to reply later this week to the letters dated 5 September and 30 November. The Department has no record of receiving a letter dated 16 November from my hon. Friend.

Teacher Training

Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students entered initial teacher training in 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: About 16,700 students entered initial teacher training courses in 1985 — the same number as in 1984, and rather more than in 1983. It is clear that many people still perceive teaching to be an attractive and rewarding career, despite the current dispute. Recruitment exceeded targets for primary training courses and was satisfactory for most secondary subjects.

It is disappointing that there have once more been difficulties in achieving the recruitment targets in those secondary subjects where there has always been strong competition from other employers for the skills of a relatively small group of suitably-qualified people. In these subject areas we need to encourage more people to consider time spent in teacher training as a worthwhile alternative to immediate salaried employment. That is why, after consultation with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, I am today launching a bursary scheme which will pay £1,200 a year tax free in addition to the normal grant to students entering one or two year initial training courses in mathematics, physics or CDT.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EC (Budget)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to take any steps to counter the European Commission's implementation of the Community budget in the form approved by the European Parliament; if he intends to pay the United Kingdom's share for February on the basis of the budget approved by the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 109]: The European Parliament adopted on 18 December a Community budget for 1986 which includes a larger total for non-obligatory expenditure than the Council had agreed, and other disputed elements.

In the view of seven member states, including the United Kingdom, the Parliament's action was not compatible with the EEC Treaty, and the Council decided accordingly on 20 December, by seven votes to three, to bring an action against the European Parliament before the European Court. The French, German, Dutch and Luxembourg Governments have decided to bring separate actions against the Parliament.

The United Kingdom Government has likewise decided to bring a separate action against the European Parliament in which the Court will be asked to rule either that the disputed elements in the budget are invalid, and in particular the 629 mecu (some £385 million) of expenditure which the Parliament added in mid-December to the Council's second reading draft budget of 27 November, or in the alternative, that no legal budget has been established. The United Kingdom will shortly deposit an application with the European Court in Luxembourg.

The Government will also be applying shortly to the European Court for an interim measures order suspending implementation by the Commission of the disputed elements in the budget pending substantive judgment by the Court.

Since in the Government's view the United Kingdom is legally obliged to make monthly VAT contributions to the budget of only some 190 million ecus (some £120 million), any contributions in excess of that figure cannot be paid as a direct charge on the Consolidated Fund under Section 2(3) of the European Communities Act 1972. The Government propose, as in the 1982 budget dispute, to contribute in full to the budget but to make clear that our contribution, to the extent that it is in excess of 190 million ecus, is paid on a "without prejudice" basis pending judgment by the European Court. The authority of Parliament for this element in our contributions, which amounts to some 10 mecu (some £6 million) a month, is being sought in a Special Supplementary Estimate for the current financial year which is today being presented to the House.

The Government's intention in adopting this approach is to minimise the risks of prejudicing the United Kingdom's case before the European Court, including our application for an interim measures order, and likewise the risks of incurring liability for penal interest rate charges.

Educational Institutions (Charitable Status)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in the Official Report the cost to the Treasury of the charitable status of private and assisted-independent educational institutions for the last five years for which data are available.

Mr. Moore: I regret that the information is not available.

Education (Covenanting)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost to the Exchequer of covenanting for educational purposes in the first five financial years for which data is available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I assume the hon. Member has in mind the cost of tax repayments on covenant payments to charities with an educational purpose. However, it is not possible to distinguish educational charities from other charities.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost of cutting employers' national insurance contributions by 1 per cent.

Mr. Moore: We estimate that a cut of 1 per cent. in employers' national insurance contribution rates would reduce contribution revenue by £1,630 million (Great Britain) in respect of 1986-87.

Footballers (Transfer Fees)

Mr. Hancock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax was received from transfer fees in respect of footballers in each of the last three years.

Mr. Moore: I regret that this information is not available.

Sporting Events (Taxation)

Mr. Hancock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was received in taxes from (a) football, (b) rugby union, (c) rugby league, (d) cricket and (e) athletic events in each of the last three years.

Mr. Moore: I regret that this information is not available.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the number of those from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers in his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Brooke: Three clerical officers and two specialist typists with ethnic minority backgrounds are employed in ministerial private offices in the Treasury.

WALES

Education Statistics

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to the numbers of children in (a) public sector schools and (b) assisted and independent schools up to school-leaving age, and after school-leaving age, and the proportion they represent within their respective school populations as a whole.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The figures for 1984-85, the latest year for which figures are available are as follows:

	Under School Leaving Age	Over School Leaving Age
Maintained Schools:
Number of Pupils	468,899	23,182
As percentage of total maintained school population	95·3	4·7
Independent Schools:
Number of Pupils	9,601	1,528
As percentage of total independent school population	86·3	13·7

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the teacher-to-pupil ratio now in schools in Wales compared with 1978-79.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 20 January 1986 at column 21.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each county in Wales, the expenditure per pupil in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The figures, at outturn prices, for the latest available financial year, are as follows:

Pupil unit costs at maintained primary and secondary schools: 1983-84

	Net cost per pupil (£s)
	Primary Schools	Secondary Schools
Clwyd	727	996

West Glamorgan	807	1,140

Advance Factories Programme

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the advance factories programme in Wales and the benefit it produces.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The Government's advance factory programme supports the other measures of regional policy by providing speculative premises in areas where the private sector has shown itself unwilling to supply them. It continues to yield substantial benefits by providing space for new job opportunities. During 1985 the Welsh development agency, Mid Wales Development and the Cwmbran development corporation allocated a total of 457 advance factories, comprising more than 2 million sq ft of floor space, to companies which are expecting to create nearly 6,000 jobs.

New House Building

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many new housing units he anticipates will be built in Wales in 1986-87 by (a) local housing authorities and (b) registered housing associations; and if he will publish comparable figures for 1984-85 and estimates for 1985-86.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Provisional figures for the numbers of new dwellings completed in Wales in 1984-85 by local authorities and registered housing associations are 2,141 and 281 respectively. Comparable estimates for 1985-86 are 1,000 and 500. No reliable estimates are available for 1986-87.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table indicating his latest estimate of the eventual out-turn for 1985-86 of capital expenditure on new housing units by each of the district councils in Wales; and if he will give comparable figures for each of the past three years and his budgeted figures for 1986-87.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The following table shows capital expenditure on new build in 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85 for each district council in Wales.

As authorities are free to determine their own priorities for housing investment there is no estimate available for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Local authorities own forecast of such expenditure in 1985-86 is however included in the table.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing the latest estimated expenditure by the Housing Corporation in each county of Wales for the present financial year 1985-86.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information can be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales, on what date he issued general guidelines to the Housing Corporation in Wales; and whether such guidelines included any direction as to the distribution of housing investment by the corporation between the various districts in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: No such guidelines have been issued however, the corporation's development programme is submitted annually for my approval.

National Museum of Wales

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1985 reported by the National Museum of Wales, comprising its outstations, with the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1984.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: A total of 765,189 people visited the National Museum of Wales during 1985, an increase of 0·63 per cent. on the attendance figures for 1984.

Health Services (Resources)

Mr. Raffan asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has reached decisions about the allocation of resources for hospital and community health services in Wales in 1986-87.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In 1986-87, I shall allocate £719·9 million, which will amount to additional resources of £46·5 million over provision in 1985-86.

For revenue spending this represents additional sums totalling £44·4 million, a cash increase of 7·1 per cent. over 1985-86 provision, of which £9·5 million will be required for centrally funded developments. The balance of £34·9 million is being made available to district health authorities. In 1986-87, district health authorities will again be expected to make efficiency savings, the first 0·5 per cent. of which will as in previous years be for reinvestment in the long stay sector; and these together with the cash increase now announced should enable authorities to meet pay and price increases, maintain proper standards of patient care and continue improvements in facilities.

Capital resources for hospital and community health services will increase by £2·1 million net of receipts to £46·2 million. As a consequence of the declining requirements of the centrally funded residual all-Wales programme, the funds available to health authorities will increase to £21·4 million. Authorities will also, as before, retain the benefit of receipts from the sale of surplus land and buildings.

The revenue and capital resources available to individual authorities in 1986-87, will be as shown in the following table. These allocations do not take into account further sums which will be made available following decisions on centrally funded developments for the coming year. These will be announced shortly.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

India

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of total United Kingdom official aid to India will be accounted for by assistance with the purchase by the Indian Government of Westland helicopters in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: It is not possible to give firm figures until the contract and the aid agreement have been signed.

EMPLOYMENT

Manpower Services Commission

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Paymaster General what are the projected future numbers of participants (a) in total and (b) by region in the various training and employment measures run by the Manpower Services Commission by each individual scheme and by all schemes.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following tables show the numbers of participants or places planned for 1986-87 on the various training and employment measures run by the Manpower Services Commission. I regret that a regional breakdown is not available for all schemes at this time because plans are presently being prepared. However, where regional figures are available these are shown.

* Targets are for June 1986. A further 1,240 places currently not allocated to regions and are also available for linked experiments.

Self-regulation Agreements

Mr. Madden asked the Paymaster General what is his policy towards the conclusion of agreements between the Health and Safety Executive and certain companies permitting self-regulation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The possibility of making arrangements, in the appropriate cases, for health and safety assurance was put forward for discussion by the Health and Safety Commission in its "Plan of Work" for 1985-86 and onwards. The Commission intends to consider the responses it has received to its plan later in the year.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General when details of the registered self-employed seeking work will be published.

Mr. Alan Clark: According to the labour force survey, in the spring of 1984 there were about 100,000 people in Great Britain without jobs seeking work who had been self employed in their previous job held within the previous three years, and who were included in the unemployment count.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the number of unemployed in the Gravesham constituency expressed as a percentage of the working population of each ward.

Mr. Alan Clark: Unemployment rates are not calculated for areas smaller than travel-to-work areas.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. William Powell asked the Paymaster General how many youth training scheme places have been (a) filled and (b) remain unfilled in Northamptonshire and in Corby at the latest convenient date; and how these figures compare with the equivalent date in 1984-85.

Mr. Trippier: I regret the information is not available in the precise form requested. However, at the end of December 1985 some 3,725 places had been approved in Northamptonshire, and some 376 in Corby local authority district, while there were 2,524 young people in training in Northamptonshire and 219 in Corby local authority district.

These figures compare with 3,955 approved places and 2,397 young people in training in Northamptonshire and 502 approved places and 236 young people in training in Corby local authority district at the end of December 1984.

It is not possible to give a precise figure of vacant places because not all approved places will actually be available for occupation.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General how many applicants there were in 1985 in Leeds metropolitan district council for (a) youth training scheme mode A schemes and (b) youth training scheme mode B schemes; and if he will show the applicants in relation to mode A, and mode B schemes by ethnic background.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is not available: training providers are not required under the youth training scheme to keep records relating to applicants.

Enterprise Allowance

Mr. William Powell asked the Paymaster General how many persons in (a) Northamptonshire and (b) Corby are in receipt of the enterprise allowance at the latest convenient date; and how this compares with the equivalent date in 1984-85.

Mr. Trippier: In the Northamptonshire area, which includes Corby, 421 people were receiving the enterprise allowance on 14 January 1986. This compares with 325 people on 15 January 1985. No separate figures are available for Corby.

Job Vacancies

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General if he proposes to seek powers to impose a duty upon local authority careers services departments to assist every firm which notifies a job vacancy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. This is a matter which is best decided by each local education authority in the light of the Employment and Training Act 1973 and the guidance which the Department issues under that Act.

Industrial Injuries (Statistics)

Mr. John asked the Paymaster General if he will set out in a list the top five industries having the highest incidence of serious or fatal injuries.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following lists show the five industry groups with the highest incidence rates of reported injuries to employees, in 1984 from accidents arising in connection with work. The groups are listed in alphabetical order.

For reported fatal injuries	For reported major injuries
Agriculture	Bricks, pottery, glass, cement etc.
Construction	Construction
Metal manufacture	Metal manufacture
Mining and Quarrying	Mining and Quarrying
Railways	Timber, furniture etc.

The industry groups are those for which reports of accidents are made to the Health and Safety Executive and agencies of the Health and Safety Commission under the Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1980.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General if he will state the number from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers in his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We do not yet keep ethnic records but there are certainly four clerical staff from ethnic minority backgrounds in the offices of myself and my colleagues out of a total staff of 33.

SCOTLAND

Lothian and Borders Police

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the Lothian and Borders police as to information kept about persons not suspected or convicted of involvement in criminal matters and as to the form in which this information is kept; how many such individuals are presently recorded on the system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I understand from the chief constable that, apart from particulars required for administrative or statutory purposes, for example, under the Firearms Act 1968 and the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976, no information is kept by the Lothian and Borders police about persons who have no actual or suspected criminal associations and that current force orders are specific on this point.

Children's Activity Holidays

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the safety of children's holiday activity-related courses in the light of the Consumers Association report, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I welcome the initiative by agencies providing activity holidays to produce guidelines to safeguard children. My officials are involved with the inter-departmental group which is presently considering whether existing legislation provides adequate protection.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1985 reported by the national museums and galleries in Scotland, broken down to the individual institutions but comprising their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1984.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information is as follows:

	1985	Percentage change Since 1984
National galleries of Scotland (NGS)	538,137	+14·7
National museums of Scotland (NMS)	709,509	*−17·2

The NGS comprise the National gallery of Scotland, the Scottish national gallery of modern art and the Scottish national portrait gallery (SNPG). The NMS are the Royal museum of Scotland (formerly known as the Royal Scottish museum (RSM) and the national museum of antiquities of Scotland (NMAS)), the Scottish agricultural museum, the Scottish united services museum, the museum of flight and the Shambellie museum of costume.

Attendances to the Findlay building, Queen street, which houses both the SNPG and part of the RMS, have been credited in full to both institutions. This represents a change of practice from previous years, of which account has been taken in calculating the percentage changes from 1984.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the complaints over youth training scheme criteria and funding raised by the volunteer centre for community action for Glasgow about which the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill has given him notice.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I have asked the office for Scotland of the Manpower Services Commission to clarify why the Glasgow volunteer centre has said it finds it impossible to join the new two-year youth training scheme.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the premises and persons for which he has responsibility in Scotland in respect of which Crown immunity is claimed.

Mr. John MacKay: This question can be answered only at disproportionate cost concerning premises and persons for which my right hon. and learned Friend has direct responsibility. Crown immunity, as an immunity from a requirement to comply with statutory provisions, applies mainly to the Food and Drugs (Scotland) Act 1956, Control of Pollution Act 1974, the Rents Acts and the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Acts in respect of the Secretary of State and his agents, directly executing responsibility in the National Health Service, such as health boards.

ENERGY

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will state the number of those from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers of his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Peter Walker: Staff in the private offices of Ministers of my Department include some of other than white European ethnic origin. Staff in the London area, where all such private offices are located, will be invited to take part later this year in the phased survey of ethnic origins of civil servants which was announced by the Government in January 1985. Their ethnic origins, therefore, are not yet recorded.

THE ARTS

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1985 reported by the national museums and galleries in England, broken down to the individual institutions but comprising their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1984.

Mr. Luce: For the nine national museums and galleries for which I am responsible, the information requested is as follows:

	Estimated attendance in 1985	Percentage change from 1984
British Museum	4,142,092	+19·5
Imperial War Museum	1,291,435	−5·4
National Gallery	3,156,725	+7·5
National Maritime Museum	600,000	*
National Portrait Gallery	516,148	−11·2
Science Museum	4,607,852	+2·2
Tate Gallery	996,565	−21·3
Victoria and Albert Museum	2,067,202	−0·6
Wallace Collection	178,770	+0·7

* No quantifiable change.

The figure quoted for the national maritime museum, which charges for admission, is an approximate estimate based partly on the number of admission tickets sold, some of which cover more than one entrant or visit. Other museums record visitors by a variety of methods, and in most cases the figures are regarded as being accurate to within about 5 per cent. only. This limits the interpretation of apparent annual changes in attendance, which may also be affected by other factors at individual museums and galleries.

Works of Art

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will list the items for which the issuing of export licences was withheld on the recommendation of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art during the half year ended 31 December 1985, specifying in each case the valuation and whether an item was eventually exported or retained, with particulars in the latter event of the acquiring institution; whether he will list any items for which licences have been withheld but the final disposal of which is not yet decided, specifying in each case (a) the valuation and (b) the relevant time limit; and whether a press notice will be issued from the Office of Arts and Libraries covering the information given in his reply.

Mr. Luce: The items for which export licences were withheld for a period on the advice of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art are as follows. The valuation has been omitted in six cases where the owner wished it to remain confidential. Details of the items listed were given in press notices issued at the time of the Minister's decision.

A collection of architectural drawings of Althorp House by Henry Holland and others	17,730	Licence suspended for three months until 31 March 1986.

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will specify the allocations made to public institutions in the United Kingdom during the half year ended 31 December 1985 of individual works of art and museum objects pre-eminent for national, scientific, historic or artistic interest which have been accepted in satisfaction of capital transfer tax, together with information, where applicable, as to conditions or wishes expressed in the matter of allocation by testators or executors; whether he will list the works of art and museum objects which are still awaiting allocation, with the respective dates of their acceptance in satisfaction of capital transfer tax; and whether a press notice will be issued from the Office of Arts and Libraries covering the information given in his reply.

Mr. Luce: The information is:

1. Items allocated since 1 June 1985 and to whom allocated.

Mount Edgcumbe (chattels)*—Plymouth City and Cornwall County Councils

Bust of Lord Somers by Le Marchand—National Trust

Seneca Epistles—British Library

* This offer carried a condition that the objects remain in situ

2. There are no items accepted in lieu of tax by Ministers with heritage responsibilities awaiting allocation.

3. A press notice will be issued on 22 January to publicise this information.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Census Forms

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many annual agricultural census forms were filled in and returned by farmers in 1960, 1970, 1980 and for the last year for which the figure is available.

Mrs. Fenner: Comparable figures of the precise numbers of annual forms completed are no longer available for earlier years. The best guide to the trend is provided by the numbers of agricultural holdings in the scope of the annual census, as follows:

	England & Wales (thousands of holdings)
1960	350·9
1970	233·4
1980	185·2
1985	183·7

Creameries (Cheese Production)

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board to discuss its policies on allocating milk to creameries which produce cheese.

Mr. Gummer: I am in regular contact with the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board on this and other matters.

Wet Weather Payments

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the farmers who are entitled to wet weather payments have made claims; and whether he anticipates that there will be surplus moneys left over from the funds allocated.

Mr. Gummer: Claims for exceptional weather aid in England have been received from well over 90 per cent. of farmers thought to be eligible to apply.

I do not anticipate that expenditure will differ significantly from the funds allocated.

Farm Workers

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of farm workers hold the national proficiency tests council certificate.

Mrs. Fenner: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested by the hon. Member. However, since 1975 over 18,500 category-based craft certificates have been awarded by the National Proficiency Tests Council, although not all holders of such certificates will currently be employed in agriculture.

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of employed farm workers on each of the following dates (a) 1 January 1966, (b) 1 January 1976 and (c) 1 January 1986 or the last convenient date prior thereto.

Mrs. Fenner: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. Numbers of regular workers, both family and hired, and of seasonal or casual workers recorded at June in 1966, 1976 and 1985 are given in the table:

Numbers of agricultural workers at June—United Kingdom

	Number
1966	522,227
1976	382,767
1985*	324,978

* provisional

Note: Figures for 1976 and 1985 include salaried managers in Great Britain.

Cereals

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the size of the cereal harvest for 1985; and where in order of precedence this ranks for yearly cereal production.

Mr. Gummer: United Kingdom production of cereals in 1985 is currently estimated at 22·3 million tonnes. This would represent the second largest quantity harvested in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the anticipated cereal surplus for 1985; and what was the carry over of surplus cereals at 31 December 1985.

Mr. Gummer: The quantity of cereals from the 1985 harvest that will be surplus to requirements depends on demand in the home and export markets and cannot be quantified at this stage. On 31 December 1985, stocks on farms are estimated at 8·5 million tonnes, from which of course normal commercial requirements for the rest of the crop year will be drawn. Stocks carried over into the 1985-86 crop year are estimated at 1·3 million tonnes in commercial stores and 4·2 million tonnes in intervention stores.

Council of Agriculture Ministers

Mr. Soames asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' meeting held in Brussels on 20 and 21 January; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The main decisions taken by the Council concerned beef and cattle imports during 1986.

The Council decided on the division between Member States of the 50,000 tonnes of frozen beef which the Community has undertaken, in the context of international trade negotiations, to import annually free of levy. At 13,680 tonnes, the United Kingdom's share remains larger than that of any other member state. It represents a small reduction, of less than 2 per cent. (240 tonnes), on the 1985 figure compared with the reduction of some 10 per cent. (1,340 tonnes) originally proposed by the Commission.

The Council also decided on the 1986 level of imports on preferential terms of calves for fattening and beef for processing. Given current high levels of production and stocks of beef in the Community, these imports were set at 175,000 head and 25,000 tonnes respectively compared with 190,000 head and 50,000 tonnes in 1985. At my request, the Commission undertook to safeguard the position of meat processors by making beef available for processing from intervention stocks on terms reflecting the Council's decision on imports.

In recognition of the effect on overseas suppliers of the reduction in imports of processing beef the Council agreed, subject to the opinion of the European Parliament, to open a special levy-free import quota for 6,000 tonnes of high quality beef during 1986. The Council also decided that 300,000 tonnes of feed wheat in intervention stocks in the United Kingdom should be transferred at Community expense to Italy to assist livestock farmers affected by drought. This will help to reduce our large stocks of feed wheat.

The Council again discussed the Commission's proposals for changes in the arrangements for starch and for the provision of sugar at reduced prices for use in industrial products. The Chairman stated his intention of trying to reach final decisions on these proposals at the next meeting of the Council.

TRANSPORT

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Transport, in view of the number of near misses and the growth in air traffic in recent years, if he remains satisfied with the present procedures for air traffic control in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Yes, I am satisfied with the standard of air traffic control services provided by the National Air Traffic Services. Despite the growth in air traffic, annual statistics show that in 1984-85 the number of risk bearing airmisses for commercial aircraft fell, continuing a downward trend shown by a three year moving average of this category of airmiss. The data for non-commercial aircraft shows no significant change.

Channel Fixed Link

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report the text of his letter to Mr. B. P. Shaw, president of the General Council of British Shipping, about the Channel fixed link, dated 9 December 1985.

Mr. Ridley: I am happy to do so. The text of my letter to Sir Brian Shaw is as follows:

Thank you for your letter of 1 November about the Channel Fixed Link. It is very helpful to know the shipping industry's general approach to the Link. As you are no doubt aware, four proposals from promoters were accepted on 31 October and these are now being assessed in detail by a joint Anglo/French team of officials.

I can assure you that a cardinal aim of the assessment process will be to ensure that the requirement in the Invitation to Promoters, that no proposal should involve any public subsidy or commercial guarantees from the Government, is fully met.

The British and French Governments have a clear interest in ensuring, before any go-ahead is given, that any project they select is not liable to fail, for whatever reason, and is financially robust. As part of the assessment, therefore, we are examining critically the promoters' forecast costs and construction timetable, their assumptions on traffic, tariffs and revenues of all kinds, and their financing proposals.

Any failure of the project would thus represent a failure of the Government's assessment too. I recognise, of course, that one can never be entirely certain that financial difficulties will not arise in a project of this complexity. However, I can assure you that, even if such unforeseen problems were to arise, there would be no question of Government support. In such an event it would be for those with a financial interest to organise a restructuring package. But this would have nothing to do with the tariffs finally charged. Any company, whether restructured or not, can be expected to charge optimum prices—ie those which give the best financial return — whether or not this under or over-remunerates the capital employed. If the company has had to undergo restructuring because the project has over-ran, this will not affect the tariffs charged, which will be at the same level as if the project had been constructed to plan. If, however, the company has had to restructure because the promoters failed to forecast market conditions, then it might well be in the operator's interest to adopt a policy of lower tariffs. But the lower tariffs would be a consequence of market conditions, not of the restructuring.

So far as competition is concerned, it will be very important to be able to deal with the possibility of predatory pricing—ie pricing temporarily below the long-run economic price level in order to eliminate competition. The Guidelines therefore make it clear that any Fixed Link will be subject to existing national and Community legislation on monopolies, abuse of a dominant position and anti-competitive practices generally. There are, as you are well aware, certain complications in applying national competition laws to international transport undertakings: this aspect is receiving attention, but it does not affect the general position. These laws do not of course mean that the Government will protect any particular transport operation if the need for it, as expressed through market demand, no longer exists. Nevertheless it is far from inevitable that ferry operations will be drastically affected in relation to the existing level of operations, by a Fixed Link. The 1982 Anglo/French Study Group concluded that there could be room both for the ferries and for a Fixed Link, and we are looking thoroughly at these issues again.

I can also assure you that the impact of a Fixed Link on the role of the ferries in our defence planning will be fully taken into account before a decision is reached. The promoters themselves were required in their proposals to assess the impact of their projects on employment and the economy. However, as an extension of our own appraisal of traffic forecasts for the Link, we shall assess the effect of each proposal on the level of ferry operations and thence the consequences for our defence capability.

I am not in a position at this stage to say how much of our assessment will be published. We have agreed with the French Government that, during the assessment period, the proposals will remain confidential, apart from what the promoters themselves decide to make available. But as you can imagine, Ministers fully expect to answer to Parliament in due course for all the likely consequences of whatever decision the Government takes.

Our aim is to reach and announce a decision in January. If the Government decides to go ahead with a Fixed Link, we would hope to introduce legislation which, as you say, would be hybrid in the spring of 1986. The arrangements for such legislation allow those directly affected to petition a special committee. There will of course also be full Parliamentary debate of the chosen proposal. Work is already well underway on the necessary Treaty with the French Government and on the concession Agreement to be signed with any successful promoter. The Government expects that legislation might complete its passage in the spring of 1987 and the Treaty be ratified and construction begin shortly thereafter. I am happy that this letter should, if you so wish, be circulated to your members and made public.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the numbers from ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers in his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Ridley: No. My Department is, however, currently taking part in the central programme of ethnic surveys of civil servants. The programme is proceeding on a region-by-region basis, with the London and south-east region, where all my Department's private offices are located, due to be covered later this year. By agreement with the Civil Service unions, the information gathered on ethnic origins is subject to strict rules of confidentiality in relation to individuals.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Border Areas Measures

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the operation of the border areas measures within the context of the European regional development fund.

Dr. Boyson: The first border areas special measure, Regulation 2619/80, made available some £4·5 million in 1980-85 towards the development of tourism, communications, small firms and craft industries in the seven district council areas on the border with the Republic of Ireland (Armagh, Derry, Dungannon, Fermanagh, Newry and Mourne, Omagh and Strabane). Approximately 75 per cent. of the funds available were allocated for the provision of tourism infrastructure, 10 per cent. for the promotion and development of craft industries, and the balance for improvements in communications, mainly roads by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland.

The new special measure of December 1985, Regulation 3637/85, provides a further £9·5 million and is intended to extend and reinforce the first measure. The geographical scope has been extended to cover all of Northern Ireland with the exception of the Belfast urban area, thus including 25 of the 26 district council areas, and the range of aids available to small firms will be significantly expanded to include investment aid, promotion of innovation and the setting up of development agencies. A special programme for the implementation of this new measure will shortly be drawn up and submitted to the European Commission for approval.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the latest available figures which indicate unemployment in each parliamentary constituency and each electoral ward in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: The numbers of unemployed claimants in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland at 12 December 1985 are as follows. Since there are over 500 electoral wards in Northern Ireland I shall write to the hon. Member giving December unemployment figures for each electoral ward.

Parliamentary constituency	Male	Female	Total
Belfast East	3,176	1,412	4,588
Belfast North	6,237	2,060	8,297

Northern Ireland totals	88,605	32,865	121,470

Discrimination

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of individual discrimination have been found by the Fair Employment Agency in the current year to date; and how many of these were against (a) Catholics and (b) Protestants.

Dr. Boyson: Four during the period 1 April 1985 to 5 January 1986; in each case Protestants were discriminated against.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost of the Royal Ulster Constabulary in the most recent calendar year, giving figures separately for (a) salary and benefits, (b) transport and communications, (c) new construction, (d) other costs, (e) total gross expenditure and (f) total net expenditure after deduction of receipts.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available in the form requested but Royal Ulster Constabulary expenditure for the financial year 1984-85 is shown in the statement of account for the year ended 31 March 1985 presented by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Ulster Museum

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1985 reported by the Ulster museum, comprising its outstations, with the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1984.

Mr. Scott: In 1985 a total of 290,000 people visited the Ulster museum and the Armagh county museum; an increase of about 13 per cent. on the attendance figure for 1984.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Manchester Prison (Duty Solicitors)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report on the duty solicitor scheme at Manchester prison will be published; and whether he intends subsequently to initiate discussions with interested bodies in the light of its findings concerning the development of advice and legal services to prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: We intend to publish the report when further consideration has been given to the policy implications.

My right hon. Friend has no present plans to initiate discussions with interested bodies.

Drug Offences

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of sentenced prisoners, including fine defaulters, received into prison in 1984 had committed offences involving drugs;

(2) what proportion of sentenced prisoners, excluding fine defaulters, received into prison in 1984 had committed offences involving drugs.

Mr. Mellor: The available information relates to persons received under sentence for drug offences and was published in tables 3.2, 4.1 and 5.1 of "Prison Statistics England and Wales 1984" (Cmnd. 9622). In 1984, 3 per cent. of all those received under sentence including fine defaulters and 3·5 per cent. of those excluding fine defaulters had been sentenced for drugs offences.

Fire Safety

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the course of his review of the fire Precautions Act 1971, he has considered the evidence of the Westminster city council; and if he will use his powers to designate clearly defined hostel type accommodation as a further class of premises requiring fire certification.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The council's views, given in response to the consultation exercise on the review of the Fire Precautions Act will be carefully considered, together with other comments. Pending the outcome of the review, my right hon. Friend does not propose to designate further classes of premises.

Prison Population

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the highest prison population recorded in 1985; and if he will detail the different types of prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: In 1985, the highest figure recorded in the weekly summary returns of the population held in prison department establishments in England and Wales was 48,130 on 2 August. The composition of the population is reported at the end of each month and on 31 July, when the population was 48,100 it comprised 8,220 untried prisoners, 1,560 convicted unsentenced prisoners, 38,120 sentenced and 210 non-criminal prisoners.

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the prison population to the latest date available compared with that of five and 10 years, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: On 17 January 1986, the total prison population was 45,153. Figures for comparable dates in 1975 and 1980 are not recorded. However, on 31 January 1976 the total prison population was 40,647 and on 31

January 1981 it was 40,047. The latter figure was affected by the national industrial action by prison officers which had only just been concluded.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the re-use of animals for experimentation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill contains a provision to continue the present prohibition on the re-use of an animal which has undergone procedures involving the use of an anaesthetic from which it has been allowed to recover. The possibility of an amendment to the Bill to allow a limited relaxation of this prohibition has been discussed during the passage of the Bill in another place but no such amendment has been made. Consultations on this matter are continuing.

Prisons (Construction)

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current programme of new prison construction or major rebuilding works; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The current building programme includes 16 new prisons, of which three have now been completed, five are under construction, and the remaining eight are at various stages of planning and design. Together, these new establishments will provide some 7,800 new places by the early 1990s. As a result of the recent public expenditure decisions, design work will also begin in 1986-87 on two further new prisons. In addition, we are undertaking an extensive programme of modernisation and redevelopment of the existing prison estate, with major capital work in progress or planned at about 100 establishments including almost all of the Victorian local prisons. This part of the programme includes a number of place producing schemes which will provide overall a further 5,400 new places by the same date.

Exeter Prison

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted persons and remand prisoners are in residence at Exeter prison; and what is the number that the prison is designed to hold.

Mr. Mellor: On 17 January 1986 the population and certified normal accommodation of Her Majesty's prison, remand centre and youth custody centre, Exeter, were as follows:

	Prison	Remand centre	Youth custody centre
Certified normal accommodation	252	48	45
Untried	81	35	—
Convicted	245	15	39
Civil	3	1	—
Total	329	51	39

Hong Kong

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision he intends seeking to allow Hong Kong citizens, other than ethnic Chinese people, to emmigrate to the United Kingdom between now and 1997.

Mr. Waddington: None, but British nationals in Hong Kong, whatever their ethnic origin, will continue to be eligible to settle in this country if they satisfy the relevant requirements of the rules.

Prison Industries

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the future of prison industries.

Mr. Mellor: I have as yet nothing to add to the reply given to a question by the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 21 November 1985, at col. 272.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been injured in robberies and muggings in the Cardiff, West constituency in each of the last 10 years; how many people have been detained in hospital; and how many have been disabled;

(2) how many robberies and muggings were recorded in the Cardiff, West constituency in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The term "mugging" has no legal definition; most offences of the type frequently referred to as 'mugging' are recorded as offences of robbery. The information readily available to me relates to offences of robbery recorded by the police in police force areas, statistics of which are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (table 2.6 of the issue for 1984, Cmnd. 9621) and in "Criminal Statistics Supplementary Tables" (volume 3, table 3.1 of the issue for 1984). No information is available to me on numbers of persons injured, hospitalised or disabled as a result of robberies or muggings.

Police (Cardiff)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of South Glamorgan on the numbers of (a) police establishment and (b) police in post in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1985 in (x) Cardiff and (y) the police stations covering the Cardiff, West constituency.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The authorised establishments and strengths on 31 December 1979 and 31 December 1985 of Cardiff central and Cardiff greater divisions, which are the two territorial divisions covering Cardiff in the south Wales constabulary, were as follows:

	On 31 December	Authorised Establishment	Strength
'C' (Cardiff Central) Division	1979	409	409
	1985	411	396
'D' (Cardiff Greater) Division	1979	306	306
	1985	325	318

I understand that finance will be available in 1986-87 to enable the south Wales constabulary to fill its existing force vacancies, and arrangements are in hand for it to do so as soon as possible.

Chief officers of police keep the allocation and use of force manpower under constant review to meet current objectives and priorities and local needs. Establishment figures showing a more detailed distribution for particular areas of the force would therefore be misleading and would not adequately reflect the numbers of police officers actually deployed there at any one time, which will include officers from central divisions, such as the traffic divisions.

Robberies and Burglaries

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many robberies and how many burglaries took place in J division Metropolitan police in 1980 and in 1985, respectively; and what was the percentage change in each case.

Mr. Mellor: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information requested for 1985 is not expected to be available until March. The figures for 1980 and 1984 are given in the following table.

Offences of robbery and burglary recorded by the police in Metropolitan Police "J" Division

	1980	1984	Per cent.
	Number		change
Robbery	299	500	+67
Burglary	7,081	9,093	+28

Commission for Racial Equality (Investigation)

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the total number of investigations implemented by the Commission for Racial Equality under section 48 of the Race Relations Act 1976; and how many of that number were required by him to be undertaken.

Mr. Waddington: The commission has initiated 49 such investigations. All were undertaken on the initiative of the commission.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he was consulted by the Commission for Racial Equality about the terms of reference of its investigation under sections 48 and 49 of the Race Relations Act 1976 into recruitment into chartered accountancy and, in particular, about the criteria as to the number of partners and size used to select the firms involved; what information he has as to the total number of firms involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The commission is not required to consult my right hon. Friend about the terms of reference of formal investigations which it undertakes. It did not do so on this occasion. I understand from the commission that 49 firms are to be asked to complete a full questionnaire, and that 230 firms are to be asked to complete a very much shorter one.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost to (a) public funds and (b) industry of complying with the requests of the Commission for Racial Equality in relation to its formal investigation under section 49(3) of the Race Relations Act 1976 into recruitment into chartered accountancy.

Mr. Waddington: The commission estimates that its own costs arising from the conduct of this investigation are likely to be about £20,000. It is not possible to estimate the external costs, but the commission is conscious of the need to avoid unnecessary expenditure by firms and other bodies involved in its inquiries and intends to keep its requests for information to the minimum necessary for the purposes of the investigation.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he required the Commission for Racial Equality to commence a formal investigation into recruitment into chartered accountancy under sections 48 and 49 of the Race Relations Act 1976; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: This formal investigation was undertaken on the initiative of the commission.

Sunday Trading

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of the restrictions on Sunday trading in Portugal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I am awaiting the relevant information and will reply as soon as possible.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of the restrictions on Sunday trading in Spain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that shops in Spain are now free to choose their own opening hours and days. They may therefore open on Sundays, though not many do so.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of the restrictions on Sunday trading in Belgium; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that Sunday trading is permitted in Belgium. Belgian law stipulates that shops must close for one day a week, and that day is negotiated between management and staff. Many small food shops and home equipment stores open on Sunday.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of restrictions on Sunday trading in Denmark; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that Sunday trading in Denmark is generally restricted to certain goods. The Consumer Association is in favour of more liberal trading hours, and some illegal trading takes place.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of restrictions on Sunday trading in France; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that in France there are no legal restrictions on shop opening hours; the Code du Travail stipulates that shop employees must have one day off per week and this should usually be Sunday. In some sectors — for example, food — another day is given instead of Sunday. Some chain stores in urban areas have begun to open on Sundays in recent years.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of restrictions on Sunday trading in Germany; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that Sunday trading in the Federal Republic of Germany is limited to certain goods. There is a degree of public demand for longer or more flexible opening hours, and also resistance from trade unions and retail trade organisations.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of restrictions on Sunday trading in the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: There are no restrictions on shop opening hours in the Republic of Ireland except for a very few outdated and unenforced local restrictions. I understand that there is no move by any interested party to impose restrictions and that there is general satisfaction with the present situation.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of restrictions on Sunday trading in Italy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that Sunday trading in Italy is largely prohibited. There is public demand for a liberalisation of trading hours.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of the restrictions on Sunday trading in the Netherlands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that Sunday trading is restricted in the Netherlands to four Sundays a year, but that there are demands from shoppers and traders alike for shop opening hours in general to be extended, which are being actively considered by the Government.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of those from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers within his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Hurd: While no formal records are available at present, informal inquiries indicate that there are three members of staff from an ethnic minority background amongst the 26 staff in the offices of Home Office Ministers. All three are employed on clerical duties.

ENVIRONMENT

Enterprise Zones

13. Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the operation of the enterprise zones designated so far, and the effect of the zones upon neighbouring businesses.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Enterprise zones are successful in restoring economic activity to previously declining areas. By September 1984 over 2,000 businesses employing 48,000 people were located in the zones. This compared with 28,000 people when the zones were designated.

It is difficult to estimate the effect of the zones on neighbouring businesses. There is evidence, both that zones stimulate activity in neighbouring areas, and that they can have an adverse effect.

Public Sector Housing

17. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his plans to introduce private capital into areas of housing currently within the public sector.

Mr. John Patten: The private sector must have an expanding role, not only to provide the funds needed for investment, but to offer tenants more diversified and sensitive forms of management. I am exploring a number of ways of bringing about such an expansion, some of which involve the urban housing renewal unit in my Department.

Housing (Survey)

19. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will launch a national survey into the state of British housing.

Mr. John Patten: The next English house condition survey will be undertaken this autumn. The state of the housing stock in Wales and Scotland is a matter for the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland respectively.

New Towns

20. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of Peterlee, Aycliffe and Washington new towns.

Mr. Tracey: I cannot at this stage add to the announcement made on 21 March 1985 by my right hon. Friend the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Jenkin). The consultations on successor arrangements requested by my right hon. Friend are currently taking place, and it would be premature to make any statement before the development corporations have reported to me.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has invited a delegation led by the hon. Member to meet my noble Friend the Minister of State after that date.

London Docklands Development Corporation

21. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the working of the statutory code of practice relating to consultation between the London Docklands Development Corporation and local borough councils.

Sir George Young: Yes.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment for what specific purpose the London Docklands Development Corporation has issued a compulsory purchase order for land adjacent to the Silvertown viaduct in the London borough of Newham.

Sir George Young: This matter is currently the subject of public local inquiry and it would be inappropriate for Ministers to comment.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number of separate businesses and persons employed in them presently occupying the industrial area adjacent to Silvertown viaduct, recently the subject of a compulsory purchase order by the London Docklands Development Corporation, together with the number of businesses and employees already relocated by that corporation from that area.

Sir George Young: There are 36 businesses occupying this land and the corporation is currently undertaking an employment survey to discover the number of employees in the area. No businesses have yet been relocated.

Private Housing Development (South-East)

22. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on future private housing development in the south-east.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I shall shortly be publishing a consultation paper of a letter of regional guidance which I propose to send to the chairman of the London and South East Regional Planning Conference — SERPLAN — which deals with the levels of housing provision in the region in the 1990s.

Rates

23. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to publish his review of the rating system.

24. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish his review of the rating system.

25. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy to reform the rating system.

40. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish his consultation document on the future of the rating system.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson).

27. Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation period he will allow on his report on the review of the rating system.

Mr. Waldegrave: I must ask the hon. Member to await the publication of the consultative document.

32. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the average increase in rates in 1986.

Mrs. Rumbold: This year the average increase in general rate poundages is 7·3 per cent. If authorities plan sensibly, the average increase next year need be no higher, and it could be lower.

52. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he proposes to undertake on the future of the rating system.

Mrs. Rumbold: We shall be publishing a Green Paper very shortly and consulting widely on the proposals in it.

Multiple Occupation House (Standards)

26. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to give greater powers to control standards in houses of multiple occupation.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce further legislation on houses in multiple occupation this session. The consolidated Housing Act 1985 and the proposed circular on HMOs will assist local authorities in the use of their wide-ranging powers. My right hon. Friend will wish to see the outcome of the Department's research on HMOs before considering whether further measures are necessary.

European Community Trade Mark Office

28. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the involvement of the Property Services Agency in finding suitable potential sites for the European Community Trade Mark Office.

Sir George Young: The PSA is assisting my right hon. Friend in his Department's search for suitable sites which might be available for locating the Community Trade Mark Office in the United Kingdom.

London Residuary Body

29. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has discussed the London Residuary Body's 1986-87 interim budget with the chairman of the London Residuary Body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: This is one of the matters which my right hon. Friend discusses with the chairman from time to time.

Rate Support Grant

30. Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the city of Birmingham over next year's rate support grant settlement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I met the leader of the city council when I visited Birmingham on 20 November 1985, and have also corresponded extensively with him.

42. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the applications for rate support grant contained provision for training in racial awareness; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: No specific provision is made in rate support grant settlements for training in racial awareness. It is open to local authorities to decide on their own policies and priorities in spending the resources available to them. I have no information on the number of authorities involved in such training or their expenditure on it.

47. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on his rate support grant settlement for 1986-87.

54. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authorities following his rate support grant announcement on 18 December.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the Hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) earlier today.

Empty Property

31. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review his policy towards the selling by local authorities of empty houses and flats to people not on waiting lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: It is for local authorities to decide their own policies on the sale of empty dwellings, within the terms of the general consents issued by my right hon. Friend. The consents are being reviewed, but I have no present intention of placing new restrictions on authorities' powers to sell empty dwellings.

53. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities levy rates on empty domestic property.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not collected by my Department. However, according to the Rating and Valuation Association's publication "General Rate Poundages and Products 1985-86", 148 authorities in England and Wales currently levy rates on empty domestic properties.

Tobacco Industry (Sport Sponsorship)

33. Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to propose any alterations to the current voluntary code exercised by the tobacco industry over the sponsorship of sport.

Mr. Tracey: Yes.

Council House Sales

34. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants since May 1979.

Mr. John Patten: The latest estimate is that from April 1979 to September 1985, 667,000 dwellings were sold to sitting tenants by local authorities and new towns in England.

National Parks

35. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish arrangements for formal links between national parks representatives and local farmers.

Mr. Waldegrave: I do not believe that more formal arrangements than at present exist are necessary. The notification arrangements introduced under the Ministry of Agriculture's farm capital grants scheme have encouraged good working relationships between national park authorities and local farmers, and additional links are provided by the farming and wildlife advisory groups.

Housing Capital Investment

36. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the total expenditure of local authorities on housing capital investment in 1985; and how this compares with housing capital investment in 1978.

Mr. John Patten: Gross capital expenditure on housing by local authorities in England in 1985-86 is estimated to be £2,530 million, compared with £2,249 million in 1978-79.

Sulphur and Nitrogen Oxide Emissions

37. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the United Kingdom will now join those nations which have agreed a time scale to reduce sulphur and nitrogen oxide emissions by 30 per cent.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The Government aim to reduce sulphur dioxide emissions by 30 per cent. on the 1980 base by the late 1990s and believe it would be wrong to commit the United Kingdom to potentially high levels of investment by joining those countries committed to achieving this reduction by 1993. It also aims to reduce nitrogen oxide emissions by 30 per cent. on the same basis and to the same time scale although there is no international agreement to reduce these emissions.

Team Games (Policy)

38. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on sport involving team games among under 16-year-olds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Responsibility for school sport is primarily a matter for the local education authorities and individual schools. However, I am keen to encourage greater participation by children, at school and elsewhere, in sport and recreation generally, including team sports. I am aware of concerns expressed by some organisations and individuals about standards of team sports in schools. I have asked for further evidence to support those concerns. When that is available, I shall consider whether discussions with other Ministers are appropriate.

Derelict Land Grants

39. Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to make the availability of derelict land grants more widely known.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My Department has recently issued a circular to local authorities setting out the Government's priorities for reclamation in the public sector and on privately owned land. I have also published an attractive brochure urging everyone to make the best possible use of the grants available.

Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library.

Home Ownership

41. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures he proposes to extend opportunities for home ownership.

Sir George Young: Proposals were announced in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, South-East (Mr. Lightbown) on 28 November 1985, at column 618, for legislation to encourage sales under the right to buy, especially of flats, and to promote the privatisation of council estates. A Bill is about to be introduced.

Partnerships and Programme Authorities

43. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to increase resources to partnership and inner urban authorities.

Sir George Young: I shall announce partnership and programme allocations for 1986-87 shortly.

49. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the amount of total Government financial support, including rate support grant and urban programme, to partnership and programme authorities in 1978-79 and 1984-85, in constant price terms.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested is given in the table and is explained in the notes to the table. Meaningful comparisons between figures for the two years are not possible. In particular, the arrangements for paying rate support grant changed in 1981-82, when the needs, resources and domestic elements were replaced by block grant, and domestic rate relief grant. Prior to 1981-82, in non-metropolitan areas, the needs element was paid only to counties and the resources element only to districts. In metropolitan areas and London, no payments were made to precepting authorities. Since 1981-82 block grant has been paid direct to authorities in both tiers. Also, since 1982-83, as part of the arrangements for unified housing benefit, the DHSS has paid grant to authorities for rent and rate relief previously paid to individuals.

* In 1978-79 no payments of rate support grant were made direct to metropolitan county councils or the GLC. Payments in respect of county and GLC expenditure are therefore included in these figures.

† These figures include payments of the then resources element of RSG in respect of county services. They exclude payments of the then needs element of RSG in respect of district services which was paid to counties.

Notes:

1. Identifiable Government financial support to these local authorities includes rate support grant, housing subsidies, housing benefit and specific revenue and capital grants (which include urban programme grants). Except as indicated in 2. below, the total figures in the table are made up of these items. The 1978-79 figures have been expressed in 1984-85 prices by using the GDP deflator.

2. Capital grants are not yet available for 1984-85. They have therefore been excluded from the totals for both years but have been shown separately for 1978-79.

3. The 1978-79 figures included for rate support grant comprise the needs, resources and domestic elements and are final entitlements. Those for 1984-85 comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant and are the latest entitlement based on unaudited outturn.

4. The 1978-79 figures for Leicester for rent rebates and housing subsidy are not available. The 1979-80 figures (at 1984-85 prices) have been used as estimates for them.

5. The figures only include grants and subsidies paid to the local districts/boroughs and do not include grants paid to the upper tier authorities within whose areas these authorities are situated, nor any payments to persons, companies or other organisations within the areas administered by them.

Regional Sports Councils (Local Planning Inquiries)

44. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to seek to restrict the powers of regional sports councils to intervene in inquiries relating to local planning aspects by indicating the possibility of a substantial grant to the appellant before a final decision on the appeal has been made: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: No. Regional councils for sport and recreation have no specific powers or rights in planning enquiries; they are able to make representations to an inspector or to the Secretary of State, like any other interested party to an appeal.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

45. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been paid out to owners of sites of special scientific interest since the introduction of the Wildlife and Countryside Act.

Mrs. Rumbold: Since the introduction of the Wildlife and Countryside Act, the Nature Conservancy Council has paid the following amounts to owners and occupiers of sites of special scientific interest:

Year	£
1982-83	243,000
1983-84	361,000
1984-85	1,145,000
Total	£1,749,000

Urban Regeneration

46. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will report progress on his policy of encouraging private investment in urban regeneration.

Sir George Young: I refer my hon. Friend to my speech in the House on 20 December 1985, at columns 714-18.

Housing Standards (Northern Region)

48. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses were below fitness standards in the northern region for the last year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: Local authorities provided estimates of unfit dwellings at 1 April 1985, in their housing investment programme returns. Including allowance for any missing returns, the estimated number in the north region was 23,100. Local authorities' estimates are not necessarily comparable, as their criteria may differ, and for England as a whole the figures are not consistent with estimates from the 1981 English "House Condition Survey".

Local Authority Staff

50. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on agreements made with trade unions regarding salary and compensation arrangements for metropolitan county council staff going to work for metropolitan district councils.

Mr. Tracey: Agreements between trade unions and local authorities as employers are not matters for the Government. Regulations prescribing the detailed arrangements for compensation, including compensation for financial detriment, will be made shortly.

55. Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the numbers of local government employees in the United Kingdom in each of the years 1960, 1970, 1980 and 1985, respectively.

Mrs. Rumbold: The available information relating to Great Britain is as follows:

*General services and police
Thousands at June of each year

	Full-time	Part-time	Total
1960	1,328	381	1,709
1970	1,642	745	2,387
1980	1,883	977	2,860

* Excludes police civilians and cadets, traffic wardens, staff of magistrates courts, probation service staff, and agency staff, figures for which are not available for the earlier years.

Figures over this period are not strictly comparable because of the changes in functions of local authorities. In particular between 1969 and 1970 about 20,000 employees were transferred to passenger transport executives, and a further 90,000 employees were transferred to PTE's, regional water authorities, and the National Health Service in 1974.

Local Income Tax

51. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies his Department has carried out into the suitability of a local income tax.

Mrs. Rumbold: I must ask the hon. Member to wait for the Green Paper which we will be publishing very shortly.

GLC Research Library

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations and letters he has received supporting the continuation of the Greater London council research library and its Acompline database; if he will publish a list of those making representations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Since the passage of the Local Government Act, about 25 such representations have been received in my Department from hon. Members, members of the public, and professional associations. The future of the research library is a matter for the London boroughs and other successors.

Corby (Grants)

Mr. William Powell asked the secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report all allocations made to the Corby district under the urban programme since 1979-80.

Sir George Young: The information requested is as follows:

	Total urban programme new approvals £
1979-80	10,500
1980-81	114,680
1981-82	95,895
1982-83	178,183
1983-84	152,580
1984-85	60,040
1985-86	221,279
	833,157

Notes:

1. Totals include allocations made to Northamptonshire county council for projects in Corby.
2. Totals include approvals for holiday projects.
3. Totals exclude allocations in respect of commitments on ongoing projects.

Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total of derelict land grants made to Corby development area in each year since 1979-80 and in 1985-86 to date.

Sir George Young: The total of derelict land grants paid to Corby district council in each of the years requested is as follows:

DLG paid to Corby DC

	£m
1979-80	Nil
1980-81	Nil
1981-82	1·26
1982-83	1·51
1983-84	4·31
1984-85	2·21
1985-86*	2·09
Total	11·38

* To date.

The Corby development area covers parts of East Northants district council and Kettering district council. No derelict land grant has been paid in these areas to those district councils.

Grace and Favour Residences

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the number of grace and favour residences for which he is responsible, their location, and the total cost of repairs, maintenance and modernisation in each of the last five years.

Mr. Tracey: My Department is responsible for the maintenance of 141 occupied grace and favour residences in Buckingham palace mews, Windsor castle and associated parks, Kensington palace, St. James's palace, Hampton Court palace and Hyde park. Information on expenditure on maintenance and modernisation of such residences is not kept separately and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers in his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My Department is currently taking part in the central programme of ethnic surveys of civil servants. The programme is proceeding on a region-by-region basis, with the London and south-east region, where all my Department's private offices are located, due to be covered later this year. By agreement with the Civil Service unions the information gathered on ethnic origins is subject to strict rules of confidentiality in relation to individuals.

Merseyside Residuary Body

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to appoint a chairman to the Merseyside Residuary Body.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has appointed the deputy chairman of the Merseyside Residuary Body, Mr. Norman Brodrick, to the Chairmanship in succession to Mr. Leslie Pocock, CBE.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Brook Hospital, Woolwich

Mr. Cartwright: asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he decided that there should be public consultation on the South-East Thames regional health authority's proposal to remove the neuro-sciences unit from the Brook hospital, Woolwich; what form the consultation will take; and who will be responsible for undertaking it.

Mr. Whitney: It has always been the intention that full public consultation would take place on this proposal. We asked the regional health authority in August 1985 to ensure that consultation took place before the regional health authority sought the Department's approval in principle for a new unit. The regional health authority has agreed that details of the major options considered will be set out in the consultation document. It is for the Greenwich health authority and South-East Thames regional health authority to decide whether to undertake a joint consultation exercise.

Asthma (Registers)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards the establishment by hospitals of local asthmatic registers and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We would welcome any arrangement that contributes to the care that consultants can provide for patients suffering from asthma. We understand that some consultants keep registers of patients at risk, but it is up to individual clinicians to decide what local arrangements to adopt.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the consequences to treatment of patients in mixed university/National Health Service service units, of discrepancies in pay between National Health Service and university clinical staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: It is our objective to maintain the welcome contribution to patient care made by clinical academic staff with honorary contracts in the National Health Service. Their pay is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

RAWP Formula

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the National Health Service management board to have completed its review of the operation of the resource allocation working party formula.

Mr. Hayhoe: My right hon. Frind has asked the National Health Service management board to report to him by the end of 1986.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services under the proposals for the social fund, what will be the basis for deciding whether a payment should be a grant or a loan.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, under the proposals for the social fund, how a decision will be made as to whether a payment is made by a loan or a grant.

Mr. Newton: In reaching their decisions, social fund officers will follow guidance and directions issued by the Secretary of State. These will be published in due course. The main circumstances in which grants and loans will be made are set out in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691).

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what transitional arrangements are proposed under the Government's White Paper, "Reform of Social Security", for the phasing out of additional payments and the phasing in of the disability premium.

Mr. Newton: As paragraph 1.45 of the White Paper makes clear, transitional protection will ensure that, at the point of introduction, income support will make up claimants weekly cash income to at least the same level as supplementary benefit did before the change. It will take the form of an addition to benefit which will remain in payment until the amount of income support is equal to or exceeds the amount of supplementary benefit, including additional requirements, to which a claimant was entitled at the point of change.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, under the Government's proposals in "The Reform of Social Security", if the surrender value of life insurance policies and savings from mobility allowance will be disregarded for the purposes of assessing capital limits.

Mr. Newton: Decisions have not yet been taken on the specific points raised by the right hon. Member which, along with other detailed matters in the current regulations, will be considered in the light of the proposals for income support, including the proposed easement of the general capital rule by comparison with that applying to the current supplementary benefit scheme.

Organ Donor Cards

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much was spent in each of the years from 1980 to 1985 on encouraging members of the public to carry organ donor cards.

Mr. Whitney: Departmental expenditure on encouraging members of the public to carry organ donor cards was as follows:

1980	39,752
1981-82	65,081
1982-83	21,995
1983-84	802,705
1984-85	351,951

The Department is also indebted to health authorities and voluntary organisations which carry out complementary campaigns to supplement departmental publicity; details of such expenditure are not known centrally.

Reye's Syndrome

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what research is at present being undertaken to investigate the possible connection between the use of aspirin by children and the disease Reye's syndrome.

Mr. Whitney: The Department is not currently funding any studies specifically into Reye's syndrome. However, I understand that the public health laboratory service communicable disease surveillance centre, London, has been undertaking surveillance of Reye's syndrome. This includes a risk factor study which has investigated all pre-admission medications including aspirin.

Child Abuse

Mr. Batiste asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what information he has as to how many children below the age of 11 years have suffered serious injuries whilst unsupervised by a responsible adult, in each of the last five years;

(2) what records are kept by his Department of serious injuries suffered by children whilst unsupervised by a responsible adult.

Mr. Whitney: The Department does not maintain records of or collect statistics about injuries suffered by children whilst unsupervised by a responsible adult.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people qualify for supplementary benefit additions for (a) domestic help, (b) heating, (c) disabled persons heating, (d) diet, (e) laundry, (f) special clothing, (g) attendance costs, (h) bathing needs and (i) blindness; and how many people qualify for (i) all of these, (ii) seven to eight of these, (iii) four to six of these, (iv) two to three of these and (v) one of these.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average value of additional supplementary benefit allowances claimed by any one person; and what is the maximum claimed and by how many people.

Mr. Newton: At December 1983, the latest date for which information is available, the average amount for those receiving one or more additions was £3·46. This figure does not take account of the effect of the available scale margin in relevant cases, so the average amount of additional benefit actually received would be somewhat lower than this. It is regretted that information is not available about the maximum amount.

Cancer

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients have been treated for malignant neoplasm and carcinoma of the cervix in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many of these patients were in the following age groups in each of those years (a) under 24 years, (b) 24 to 40 years and (c) over 40 years.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Cervical Cancer

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will inaugurate an educational campaign to warn teenage girls about the causes and risks of cervical cancer.

Mr. Hayhoe: There are no plans to mount an educational campaign aimed specifically at teenage girls. Providing information about cervical cancer forms part of the Health Education Council's activities related to cancer prevention in general.

Contraceptives (Minors)

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will include in the revised departmental guidelines for the prescription of contraceptives to minors specific advice on the action to be taken by the doctor if the minor is believed to be the victim of incestuous sexual abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I note my hon. Friend's suggestion. However, we hope shortly to publish a consultative document on the procedures to be used in handling cases of child abuse, including sexual abuse. This will contain guidance on the role of doctors and other health professionals.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. John asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many employees in agriculture receive family income supplement; and what percentage this is of the total employed work force in agriculture.

Mr. Major: At June 1985, the latest date for which information is available, there were about 8,000 families in receipt of family income supplement where the head was employed in agriculture. This represents about 2·5 per cent. of the total employed work force in agriculture.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the estimates of total births, births to mothers of non-United Kingdom or Irish origin and births to mothers of New Commonwealth and Pakistan origin, both in numerical and percentage terms for each of the last 20 years.

Mr. Whitney: The following table shows the information collected at the registration of births to women born outside the British Isles and in the New Commonwealth and Pakistan respectively. The figures include births to women of British origin and descent who were born outside the British Isles. On the other hand, they exclude births to women of overseas origin who were themselves born in the United Kingdom. There is additional information for 1983 and 1984 from the Labour Force Survey. Taken in conjunction with the information from birth registration, this suggests that the total number of births to mothers of New Commonwealth and Pakistan origin may currently be about 60,000 a year, or about 8·5 per cent. of all births occurring in Great Britain.

Occupational Asthma

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council's report on occupational asthma is to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council's report was published yesterday. It recommends widening the terms of prescription for occupational asthma to cover seven new sensitising agents, namely: antibiotics; cimetidine; wood dust; ispaghula; castor bean dust; ipecacuanha and azodicarbonamide. It also makes two minor recommendations to clarify the existing law. The Government accept the council's recommendations and regulations will be laid to bring them into operation by September 1986.

Claimants

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many claimants were the responsibility of the Harlesden office of his Department as at May 1979, December 1984 and the latest available date; and how many staff there were in the office for the same period;

(2) how many claimants were the responsibility of the Neasden office of his Department as at May 1979, December 1984 and the latest available date; and how many staff there were in the office for the same periods;

(3) how many claimants were the responsibility of the Cricklewood office of his Department as at May 1979, December 1984 and the latest available date; and how many staff there were in the office for the same period.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 695-6]: The information requested for December 1984 and December 1985 is shown in the table. Information is no longer held for May 1979.

	December 1984			December 1985
	Harlesden	Neasden	Cricklewood	Harlesden	Neasden	Cricklewood
Number of supplementary benefit claimants	10,722	10,819	8,326	11,536	12,237	8,999
Number of short-term benefit claimants	1,478	1,892	960	1,766	1,988	1,067
Total staff in post	133·5	149·5	100·5	135	146·5	95·5

Short-term benefits include sickness benefit, invalidity benefit, maternity allowance and combined sickness/supplementary benefit. Other benefits are administered centrally.

Maternity Allowance

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide an estimate of the public expenditure saving as a result of the changes proposed to the maternity benefits including the abolition of the maternity grant, (a) in total and (b) for each benefit.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 699]: As regards maternity allowance, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 16 January at column 698: I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply when the information is available. The net effect on public expenditure of replacing the maternity grant and supplementary benefit single payments for maternity expenses with payments from the social fund will depend on how much would otherwise have been spent on single payments in 1987-88—for which precise estimates are not available—and on the likely cost and number of social fund payments for maternity needs, on which I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) on 20 December at column 436.

DEFENCE

Ulster Defence Regiment

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about changes in the composition, training and operational practice of the Ulster Defence Regiment.

Mr. Stanley: There are no plans to change the structure or operational role of the Ulster Defence Regiment, which has played such a vital part in supporting the Royal Ulster Constabulary in combatng terrorism. Details of a number of improvements in the training of the UDR were given in my reply to the hon. Member for Kingston-upon-Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 19 December 1985, at c. 245-6.

Shorts Tucano (Inaugural Flight)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of Defence what information he has as to when and where the Shorts Tucano will make its inaugural flight with its new engine.

Mr. Lamont: A prototype Shorts Tucano with a Garrett engine is expected to fly next month in Brazil.

Iraq

Mrs Clwyd asked the Secretary of Defence how many members of Her Majesty's Government's armed forces are currently serving in Iraq.

Mr. Stanley: Apart from the attachés and their staff at Her Majesty's embassy in Baghdad (who total four in number) there are no British service men in Iraq.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of Defence if he will state the number from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers in his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Lee: I shall answer shortly.

Advertising

Mr. Spicer asked the Secretary of State for Defence what advertising agents have been appointed by his Department, or by the Central Office of Information on behalf of his Department, to handle campaigns involving the communication of information on subjects for which his Department is responsible to Parliament over each of the last 10 years, respectively; what was the subject of each campaign; and how much was spent on each campaign.

Mr. Lee: [pursuant to his reply, 10 December 1985, c. 593]: The only advertising campaigns conducted on behalf of the Ministry of Defence have been those run for recruiting purposes (both service and civilian). Twelve companies have been engaged on such campaigns. The following table provides the costs over the last five financial years for which figures are available:

Year	Total £ million
1980-81	5.576
1981-82	3.611
1982-83	2.763
1983-84	4.473
1984-85	6.001

Figures are in full cost terms and include VAT where applicable. Separate campaigns for the individual services are included in these totals.

SCOTLAND

Wrongful Conviction (Compensation)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement with regard to the payment of compensation to persons who have been wrongly convicted of criminal offences.

Mr. Rifkind: There is no statutory provision for the payment of compensation from public funds to persons whose convictions are quashed on appeal, or to those granted free pardons by exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy. For many years, however, it has been the practice for the Secretary of State, in exceptional circumstances, to authorise ex gratia payments from public funds to persons who have been detained in custody as a result of a wrongful conviction.

I remain prepared to pay compensation to all such persons where this is required by our international obligations. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (article 14.6) provides:

"When a person has by a final decision been convicted of a criminal offence and when subsequently his conviction has been reversed, or he has been pardoned, on the ground that a new or newly discovered fact shows conclusively that there has been a miscarriage of justice, the person who has suffered punishment as a result of such conviction shall be compensated according to law, unless it is proved that the non-disclosure of the unknown fact in time is wholly or partly attributable to him."

I am, moreover, prepared to pay compensation to people who do not fall within the terms of the proceeding paragraph, but who have spent a period in custody following a wrongful conviction or charge, where I am satisfied that this has resulted from serious default on the part of a member of a police force or of some other public authority; and there may be exceptional circumstances that justify compensation in cases outside these categories. I will not, however, be prepared to pay compensation simply because at the trial or on appeal the prosecution was unable to sustain the burden of proof beyond reasonable doubt in relation to the specific charge that was brought.

It has been the practice since 1957 for the amount of compensation to be fixed on the advice and recommendation of an independent assessor who, in considering claims, applies principles analogous to those on which claims for damages arising from civil wrongs are settled. Although successive Secretaries of State have always accepted the assessor's advice, they have not been bound to do so. In future, however, I shall regard any recommendation as to amount made by the assessor in accordance with those principles as binding upon me.

Civil Defence

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if any of the civil defence plans submitted by local authorities to his Department include completed sections on each of the 12 subjects specified in schedule 2 to the Cvil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983;

(2) which local authorities have submitted civil defence plans to his Department; and if he will place copies in the Library.

Mr. John MacKay: Plans, including material on the subjects specified in schedule 2 to the 1983 regulations for Scotland, have been received so far from Borders, Central, Dumfries and Galloway, Fife, Highland and Tayside regional councils and are being assessed. It would not be appropriate for me to place them in the Library as they are documents belonging to and prepared by local authorities.

Woodend Hospital, Aberdeen (Incident)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will investigate the circumstances in which a prisoner from Peterhead prison held a student nurse as a hostage for 90 minutes at Woodend hospital, Aberdeen, on Saturday 18 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The incident on 18 January is the subject of investigation by the police. I cannot comment on the events which occurred while these matters are under investigation and, therefore, sub-judice.

9 Seamore Street/209 Maryhill Road, Maryhill

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill's letter of 8 January concerning 9 Seamore street/209 Maryhill road and the urgency of a decision on the declaration of a housing action area.

Mr. Ancram: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

School Meals

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the results of the annual census of school meals in Scotland held in January 1985; how these compare with the corresponding 1984 results; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is as follows:

School meals	1985		1984
	Number	As percentage of pupils present	Number	As percentage of pupils present
Pupils present on census day	752,073	—	756,735	—
Pupils taking school meals—
On payment	182,255	24·2	182,455	24·1
Free	136,669	18·2	129,335	17·1
Total	318,924	42·4	311,790	41·2
Pupils bringing own food	75,951	10·1	77,266	10·2

A detailed statement of the returns from education authorities from which these national figures are derived is being placed in the Library.

The following table shows, as percentages of pupils attending their respective sectors, those primary and secondary pupils taking meals or bringing their own food.

	Primary 1985 percentage	1984 percentage	Secondary 1985 percentage	1984 percentage
Pupils taking school meals	47·5	46·6	38·2	35·9
Pupils bringing own food	15·5	14·9	4·5	5·4

All authorities continue to provide the fixed traditional two-course meals, but there has been an increase in the demand for cafeteria style snacks. Twelve and a half per cent. of all pupils present on the day of census had a snack meal, accounting for nearly 30 per cent. of all meals served. The figures are as follows:

	1985 Paid	1985 Free	1985 Total	1985 Percentage of pupils present	1984 Paid	1984 Free	1984 Total	1984 Percentage of pupils present
Pupils taking fixed meals	112,849	111,715	224,564	29·9	120,304	108,426	228,730	30·2
Pupils taking cafeteria meals	69,406	24,954	94,360	12·5	62,151	20,909	83,060	11·0

Free School Transport

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide details of the number of pupils for whom education authorities in Scotland provide free school transport.

Mr. Rifkind: The information taken from the survey of school transport undertaken in September 1985 is as follows:

	Pupils Attending Primary Schools	Pupils Attending Secondary Schools	Pupils Attending Special Schools or Classes	Total Pupils
Free transport provided under section 50 of the Education (Scotland) Act 1980	38,715	103,598	9,304	151,617

I have arranged for a copy of the return from each authority to be placed in the Library.

WALES

Planning Appeals

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of planning appeals was upheld by him in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is as follows:

Calendar Year	Appeals allowed expressed as percentage of appeals decided
1976	29
1977	35
1978	31
1979	31
1980	32
1981	32
1982	29
1983	36
1984	36
1985	42

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The number of staff engaged on press and public relations work and the budgets for audio-visual, exhibitions and publicity work in my Department in each of the past five years were as follows:

Financial Year	Staff	Budget* £
1980-81	29·5	159,400
1981-82	29	173,200
1982-83	29	175,000
1983-84	28	235,400
1984-85	28·5	248,000

* Staff and staff-related costs are not readily identifiable, and are not included.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Judges (Interests)

Mr. Cohen asked the Attorney-General what guidance is given to judges about the implications of the existence of material interests of their own, or of relatives, as to whether they should sit in judgment on particular cases.

The Attorney-General: Judges are under an obligation to declare any interest of which they are aware and, where the interest is substantial, to disqualify themselves from sitting. Failure by a judge to disclose a substantial interest, or to disqualify himself, is a matter which can be raised and decided on an appeal. In doubtful cases the judge should explain to both parties what his arguable interest might be and is often wise to ask each party whether they have any objection to his continuing in the circumstances to adjudicate. Should any party then object and the judge continue to adjudicate, the Court of Appeal would then have to decide whether in the light of the principle stated above the judge acted correctly. These are principles of law and not guidance.

Supergrass Trials

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Attorney-General how many people currently await trial on the evidence of converted terrorists; what proportion of these persons have been refused bail; and what is the average period of remand for which persons detained without bail have been held to date after being charged on the evidence of a converted terrorist, irrespective of whether that person has been brought to trial.

The Attorney-General: Four persons currently await trail on the evidence of a convicted terrorist. Of these bail has been refused in the High Court in Northern Ireland to three persons, each of whom stands charged with murder. In addition a number of other persons, in respect of whom the director has not yet received an investigation file, is on remand having been charged with serious terrorist offences on the evidence of an accomplice who will shortly be committed for trial. Information on average periods spend on remand by those who have been charged on the evidence of a convicted terrorist is not separately available and could be obtained only by a special exercise at disproportionate cost.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Attorney-General how many cases in the last calendar year and the year to date involving persons injured by plastic bullets in Northern Ireland have been considered by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland; and what action was taken in each case.

The Attorney-General: Figures for cases considered between 1 January 1985 and 15 January 1986 by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland involving persons killed or injured by alleged use of baton rounds are as follows:

	Number
Cases	9
Persons injured	15
Persons killed	1
Prosecutions directed	1
No prosecution directed	7

In one case, a final direction pends the outcome of other proceedings.

Northern Ireland (Criminal Trials)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Attorney-General in how many criminal cases in Northern Ireland courts accomplices of an accused have turned Queen's evidence; in how many cases this evidence has been uncorroborated; and what has been the result of such cases in the latest calendar year and year to date.

The Attorney-General: The law and practice in Northern Ireland, as in England and Wales, has always permitted the use of the evidence of accomplices in criminal trials. It is not something which has happened only in the context of the prosecution of terrorists or only in the situation which currently obtains in Northern Ireland. However, I take the present question to be directed at cases where such evidence has been used in recent years and specifically at trials for offences which are scheduled offences under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. In respect, therefore, of trials on indictment for scheduled offences where evidence was given by an accomplice, the position for the years 1982 to date is as follows:

Year	Number of trials	Persons acquitted	Persons convicted or pleading guilty
1983	4	13	55
1984	3	46	26

In 1984, the convictions of 14 of the persons tried in 1983 were quashed on appeal to the Court of Appeal.

It must be borne in mind that the persons numbered above as having been convicted or as pleading guilty were not necessarily convicted on the evidence of an accomplice. For example, in one trial in 1985 the trial judge rejected the evidence of the accomplice but convicted five of the accused on other evidence which was before the court.

There is no comprehensive record of, and it is not now feasible to identify without disproportionate cost, all the evidence which was before the court in relation to individual charges or whether such evidence was capable of constituting corroboration.

ENERGY

Nuclear Power Industry

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will describe the types of information published by his Department in respect of accidents, incidents and untoward occurrences, including those without any radiological consequences, at licensed nuclear sites and at other nuclear sites; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will describe the types of information published by (a) the Central Electricity Generating Board, (b) British Nuclear Fuels plc and (c) the Atomic Energy Authority in respect of accidents, incidents and untoward occurrences, including those without any radiological consequences, at licensed nuclear sites and at other nuclear sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The CEGB publishes accident statistics in its annual report; they are also recorded in the annual report of the Electricity Council's chief safety officer and the quarterly safety reviews issued by the Electricity Council. The UKAEA sets out details of any radiological incidents and non-radiological accidents occurring at authority establishments in the authority's "Annual Report on Radiological Protection and Occupational Health" which is made available on request. British Nuclear Fuels plc publishes an annual report on occupational safety, which includes incidents reportable to the Health and Safety Executive in accordance with schedule 1 of the Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, and details of deaths and major injuries. The industry also reports to the NII on those incidents which fall within the criteria announced in the House of Commons on 26 July 1982 by the then Under-Secretary of State for Energy; they are later summarised in reports published by the Health and Safety Executive. There are no separate Department of Energy publications.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Peter Walker: The total number of staff employed by my Department's information division in January in each of the past five years and their costs are:

	Staff in post	Annual Cost £
1981	31½	606,207
1982	27½	565,328
1983	27½	615,988
1984	26½	614,373
1985	27½	685,847

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

University Funding

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the percentage change in real terms, measured by the gross domestic product deflator, in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1984-85, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in the level of home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, provisions for changes in arrangements for capital in recurrent expenditure, local authority rates and additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 21 January at columns 149-52.

Universities (Clinical Staff)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards financing the salaries of clinical staff in universities over the next three years.

Mr. Walden: The financing of the salaries of clinical staff in universities is under consideration following the representations my right hon. Friend has received from the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals.

Teacher Training

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students taking teacher training courses in physics, mathematics, craft, design or technology have responded to the financial inducement offered of £1,200 to students taking these courses.

Mr. Chris Patten: The bursary scheme for students entering one or two year initial training courses in mathematics, physics or craft, design and technology was launched this week. It is too early to assess the possible impact of the scheme on recruitment to the relevant training courses.

AIDS

Mr. Rathbone asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science in his Department's educational material for schools about drug misuse, what mention there is of the danger of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Dunn: The Department recently issued guidance on AIDS in draft form to the local education authorities, and it is intended that, following consultation, this should be formally published in the near future.

The Education Departments' booklet "Drug Misuse and the Young" does not mention AIDS specifically, but in the section dealing with the physical dangers of drug taking it draws attention to the risk of unsterile injecting practices in general.

Lunchtime Supervision

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has in respect of local authorities which have indicated that they do not intend to take up education support grants in respect of lunchtime supervision under the provisions of the Education (Amendment) Bill.

Mr. Chris Patten: No authority has written to inform the Department that it has no intention of taking up education support grant for midday supervision. A few have indicated formally or informally that they do not expect to submit bids for 1985-86 and press reports suggest that others will not settle details until the present teachers' disruption ceases.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has advised local education authorities or education committee chairmen to exclude teachers from contracts for lunchtime supervision under the Education (Amendment) Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: No such advice has been issued to LEAs or education committee chairmen. We have made it clear that it is entirely for LEAs to decide who should be employed.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Sir Keith Joseph: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Communications (Code of Conduct)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the London borough of Merton's code of conduct on communications with the media as it applies to all teaching and non-teaching staff employed by that authority; if he has received any representations on the implications of this code; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I understand that the code is an internal document which offers guidance to employees of the borough on dealing with the media. My right hon. Friend has received no representations about this code.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidance his Department offers to local education authorities on the optimum size for secondary schools without sixth forms.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the right hon. Member to paragraph 275 of the White Paper "Better Schools", copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Fluoridated Milk

Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many education authorities supply fluoridated milk to schoolchildren.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not collected centrally.

Students (Travel Awards)

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why his Department has increased the travel award for students studying from the parental home.

Sir Keith Joseph: The travel element contained within the maintenance grant of mandatory award holders has been increased for all students.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Australia (Bicentenary)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made with plans to mark the Australian bicentenary in 1988.

Mr. Eggar: The British-Australia Bicentennial Committee, under the chairmanship of Sir Peter Gadsden, is co-ordinating Britain's participation in this event. It is the Government's intention to invite Parliament to vote some £1 million to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for use on the bicentenary. It is envisaged that £850,000 of this should be used in 1987-88 to provide a specially commissioned sail training ship as Britain's official gift to Australia and the balance to cover other bicentenary events and administrative expenses. Appropriate estimates will be laid before Parliament in due course.

British Embassy, Washington

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what grounds his Department has opposed the re-naming of the avenue in Washington containing the British embassy in honour of Nelson and Winnie Mandela.

Mrs. Chalker: We are aware of this idea; it is entirely a matter for the relevant United States authorities. We have not objected and will not do so.

Right of Abode

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the current waiting time for the right of abode in the United Kingdom from time of application for British overseas subjects, broken down by each country of application.

Mr. Eggar: As at 31 December 1985, applicants in Bangladesh, Pakistan and India with a prime facie claim to the right of abode in this country were waiting three months or less from application to first interview. Waiting times to decision vary from case to case.

Mr. Raoul Wallenberg

Mr. White asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library as much information as is in his possession about Mr. Raoul Wallenberg; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of a document produced by the Swedish Government last year which brought together the main evidence then available. The Swedes also have available in Stockholm several volumes of evidence that has not been translated into English. As has been made clear on many occasions in the past, we stand ready to help the Swedish Government with their inquiries to establish with greater clarity what has happened to Mr. Wallenberg.

Mr. White asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the full text of the report handed to the Swedish ambassador by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in 1957 of the alleged death of Mr. Raoul Wallenberg.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: An unofficial translation of the 1957 note has been placed in the Library of the House.

Immigration

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the current expected waiting time from application to interview for entry clearance by (a) fiancé(es) and (b) spouses at ports in the Indian sub-continent.

Mr. Eggar: Those applying on 31 December 1985 would expect to wait for the following times for first interview (in months):—

	Dhaka	New Delhi	Bombay	Islamabad	Karachi
Queue 1	3	2½	3	3	3
Queue 2	13	5½	6	11	6
Queue 3	13	7	9	14	11
Queue 4	23	10	10	15	12

The queues are made up as follows:

Queue 1
1. Persons with a claim to the right of abode.
2. Dependent relatives over 70 years.
3. Special compassionate cases.

Queue 2
1. All spouses.
2. All children under 18 years.

Queue 3
1. Fiancé(es).
2. Other applicants for settlement.

Queue 4
Re-applicants.

Spouses and fiancé(es) submitting first time applications are placed in queues 2 and 3 respectively. However, those with a claim to the right of abode and certain compassionate cases are placed in queue 1. All re-applicants are placed in Queue 4.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many clearance officers were employed in Pakistan, India and Bangladesh in 1979; and what is the total number employed at the latest available date.

Mr. Eggar: The information is given in the following table:

	December 1979	January 1986
Pakistan	21	16
India	10	11
Bangladesh	14	15

These figures do not include temporary entry clearance officers, sent to cover leave absences and seasonal increases in work load. (In April 1986 the permanent complement in Pakistan and Bangladesh will be increased to 18 and 17 respectively.)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the average waiting time for persons wishing to enter the United Kingdom from Pakistan, India and Bangladesh in 1979; and what is the waiting time at the latest date.

Mr. Eggar: Details for 1979 are given in table 5 of Cmnd. 9544 "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1984".

As at 31 December 1985 those called for first interview in Pakistan, India and Bangladesh had waited (in months) as follows:

	Queue 1	Queue 2	Queue 3	Queue 4
Islamabad	3	12	14	15
Karachi	3	7	12	12
New Delhi	3	6	10½	10
Bombay	3	6	9	9
Dhaka	3	18	18	25

Waiting times to decision varied from case to case.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Eggar: The size and costs of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office news department and the ODA press office during the last five years have been:

Year	Staff	Cost £
1981-82	26	447,000
1982-83	27	483,000
1983-84	26	475,500
1984-85	26	498,000
1985-86	26·5	543,500

Immigration (DNA Fingerprinting)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 20 January, when and how he disclosed to the Bangladesh Home Minister and Home Secretary the intention of the British Government to carry out an experimental scheme in Dhaka using the DNA fingerprinting techniques; what the reaction of Bangladeshi Ministers was; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I indicated our intention to introduce the DNA technique on an experimental basis to the Bangladeshi Home Minister and senior officials in Dhaka during my visit from 7 to 10 January. Subsequent to our discussions they indicated some anxiety. The High Commissioner in Bangladesh is continuing to discuss the matter with the Bangladesh authorities.

East Timor (Atrocities)

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Indonesia concerning atrocities by Indonesian soldiers in East Timor.

Mr. Eggar: The Indonesian Government are well aware of our position on human rights. I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex gave the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) on 11 November 1985 at column 60.

Sahel Grant

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to increase his proposed grant to the United Nations

Association international service programme in the Sahel for the next two financial years to no less than the present level.

Mr. Eggar: We propose, subject to parliamentary approval, to increase the amount to the United Nations Association international service for 1986-87 to £360,000. This grant is not offered on a geographical basis and it is for the United Nations Association international service to put forward proposals about how and where the grant might be best deployed. No decisions have been made about the level of grant for 1987-88.

Human Rights

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries to which he has made recent representations concerning human rights violations.

Mr. Eggar: We deplore violations of human rights and make our views known when meeting Ministers or representatives of countries where such violations occur. In some case representations are more productive if undertaken without publicity, and it would not be helpful to disclose full details.

Torture

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens, or the relations of British citizens, have complained to his Department on the grounds that they have been tortured while abroad since 1976.

Mr. Eggar: Specific complaints of torture have been received in respect of one British citizen in the last three years. We raised the allegation with the authorities concerned but they have denied them. Information on allegations of torture made between 1976 and 1982 is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the European convention for prevention of torture.

Mr. Eggar: The text of the draft European convention on torture is currently being discussed in Strasbourg by a committee of experts on which the United Kingdom is represented. Our aim is to reach agreement on a convention that can be signed and ratified by all members of the Council of Europe.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Defence

7. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to raise the public profile of civil defence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Yes. My colleagues and I will take all suitable opportunities to explain the need to plan against a range of emergencies including war. Later this year we plan to produce new information material including a film to promote this all hazards approach.

9. Sir Anthony Kershaw asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any further civil defence handbooks are in preparation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Handbooks of guidance to local authorities on communications and on environmental health are in preparation.

33. Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take against local authorities which do not fulfil their obligations under the civil defence regulations.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend will consider this when the assessment of progress on implementation of the 1983 regulations is complete. The Government are determined to ensure that all local authorities meet their obligations under the civil defence regulations and will take whatever steps are necessary.

43. Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in support of 100 per cent. grant-aid for emergency planning staff salaries.

56. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in support of 100 per cent. grant-aid for all civil defence expenditure incurred by local authorities.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Support has been expressed by the National Council of Civil Defence, the Association of County Councils, the Association of District Councils and other interested organisations.

49. Mr Waller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to issue local authorities with a staged programme for civil defence progress.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We plan to do so by the middle of the year.

59. Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to provide direct communication links between county emergency centres and local British Broadcasting Corporation and commercial radio and television stations.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In a war emergency, local authorities would have access to the wartime broadcasting service through the regional government headquarters. There are no plans to provide direct links as such.

64. Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is conducting any studies about emergency resource data for civil defence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A pilot study is being undertaken in three areas to examine the need for resources registers for emergency planning and ways of identifying, collecting, storing and accessing data. The study is expected to be complete by the end of 1987.

65. Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to protect emergency communications against the effects of electromagnetic pulse.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to a question from my hon. Friends the Members for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden) and for Ynys Môn (Mr. Best) on 5 December, at column 316.

70. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has carried out any studies to investigate the public's general perception of civil defence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Research looking at people's general perception of civil defence was carried out last year. I referred to it, and its relevance to the preparation of new public information material, in my speech to the County Emergency Planning Officers' Society annual study on 30 October, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which local authorities have submitted civil defence plans to his Department; and if he will place copies in the Library;

(2) if any of the civil defence plans submitted by local authorities to his Department include completed sections on each of the 12 subjects specified in schedule 2 to the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We have received plans from the vast majority of county authorities and are in touch with the remainder. It would not be appropriate to give further details until our assessment is complete, nor to place copies in the Library. My right hon. Friend will make a report to the House in due course.

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill

18. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received about the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords].

Mr. Mellor: The Government have consulted widely in the preparation and introduction of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill, now in another place, and during this process my right hon. Friend has received representations from a variety of organisations and individuals. The Bill, which repeals the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 and establishes an entirely new system of controls over scientific procedures on living animals, has been widely welcomed by the moderate animal welfare movements and by science and industry.

Community Policing

19. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has further to develop community policing.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Although it is a matter for the judgment of chief officers how they deploy the officers and resources at their disposal, my right hon. Friend has made clear his support for the concept of community policing, which means essentially that police officers should know and understand the people whom they protect and serve. To carry out this task successfully the police need, and are entitled to expect, the support and co-operation of the citizen.

72. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of police community forums.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Section 106 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, which came into force on 1 January 1985, requires all police authorities (and the Commissioners of Police of the Metropolis and of the City of London) to make arrangements for obtaining the views of local people on matters concerning the policing of their area. Although not required to establish consultative committees, the Home Office guidance encourages them to do so. In almost all police areas the arrangements made include the establishment of consultative committees in at least part of the area. These committees are in various stages of development and Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary continue to keep us informed of progress.

Properly representative consultative committees have a vital role to play in ensuring that the police and local people are able regularly to exchange views and information on the policing of the area. Such exchanges help to encourage positive relations between the police and the public locally and may lead to practical forms of co-operation, particularly in crime prevention. Consultative committees are not to be confused with the police committees established by a number of Labour-controlled London boroughs and some districts outside London, which are aimed, not at improving relations between the police and the public, but at securing political control over the police.

Chief Constables (Statements)

20. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to prohibit chief constables from making partisan political statements.

Mr. Hurd: Police regulations already require officers of all ranks to abstain at all times from any activity which is likely to interfere with the impartial discharge of their duties or to give rise to the impression amongst members of the public that it may do so.

Channel Tunnel

21. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the implications for his Department's areas of responsibility of a fixed Channel link.

Mr. Waddington: The Department has been closely involved in the assessment of proposals for the construction and operation of a Channel fixed link. This enabled matters within my right hon. Friend's area of responsibility to be taken properly into account in reaching the decision which was announced on Monday.

Crime Victims

22. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has carried out any studies of the factors which make it increasingly likely that a person will become a victim of a crime of violence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Yes. Data from the British crime survey show that over the country as a whole the chances of becoming a victim of a crime of violence are quite small, and that the highest risk group are young, single males living in the inner cities who go out a lot, particularly in the evenings and at weekends.

Prisoners on Remand

23. Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of prisoners on remand in prison at the latest available date and the number of those who had been awaiting trial for (a) over 18 months, (b) over one year, (c) over nine months and (d) over six months.

Mr. Mellor: On 30 November 1985 there were about 7,900 untried and 1,500 convicted unsentenced prisoners in England and Wales. Information is not available on the numbers still awaiting commencement of their trial or on how long they had been waiting. However, about five of the untried prisoners had been first remanded in custody over 18 months earlier, about 150 over 12 months earlier, about 380 over nine months earlier and about 890 over six months earlier. These periods include any time which was spent on bail following the initial remand in custody.

Official Secrets Act (Alleged Breaches)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the progress of inquiries involving alleged breaches of the Official Secrets Acts, involving the right hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Parkinson) and Miss Sarah Keays.

Mr. Hurd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to his question by my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General on 13 January, at columns 770-71.

British Broadcasting Corporation

25. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects the Peacock committee on the financing of the British Broadcasting Corporation to report.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We expect the committee's report in the summer.

71. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next expects to meet the director general of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend expects to lunch with him on 12 February.

Crime Prevention

26. Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of Government initiatives in the field of crime prevention.

73. Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of Her Majesty's Government's initiatives on crime prevention.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The recent crime prevention seminar chaired by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister resulted in agreement on a range of initiatives by industry, commerce and the Government which will be followed up by a seminar to be chaired by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary in the summer. They include:

—a British Standard for car security, which will be prepared by the British Standards Institution with the help of the motor manufacturers;

—the insurance industry will consider what scope there is to encourage policy holders to improve the security of their homes;

—advisory packages on security in inner city households and commercial premises will be produced;

—studies will be established and completed urgently on crime on the London Underground, security on new residential estates and violence to bus crews and to helath service staff.

Work is progressing well on the five local crime prevention projects and the national community programme crime prevention initiative announced last autumn. Following encouraging results in London and the midlands, the "Magpies" television and press crime prevention campaign is shortly to be extended to the north of England.

31. Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has of the percentage of homes in England and Wales which now have burglar alarms or efficient door and window locking systems.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Precise figures are not available. It has been estimated, however, that only some 30 per cent. of homes in England and Wales are fitted with effective door and window locks and considerably fewer with burglar alarms. We shall continue to emphasise in our crime prevention advice the importance of fitting and using effective security devices to protect property in the home.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what crime prevention measures the Metropolitan police have instituted.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In his recently published strategy report (a copy of which is in the Library), the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has emphasised that crime prevention will remain of central importance in his force goal for 1986 with priority being given to the reduction of criminal opportunity through community involvement and co-operation.

Measures include:

continued support for crime preventio panels;

the further development of;

(a) neighbourhood watch;

(b) measures to divert young people from crime and other anti-social activities;

(c) a publicity campaign to combat auto-crime;

(d) force training to improve the crime prevention skills of all officers;

(e) schemes to provide reduced house contents insurance premiums for participants in neighbourhood watch schemes, in conjunction with the insurance industry; and

(f) guidance and support for architects and planners;

the preparation of practical advice to the public, in particular women, on ways to prevent and respond to physical attack; the introduction of business watch; and the setting up of crime prevention shops in vacant premises.

In addition, more attention is to be paid to helping victims of crime.

Crime Statistics

27. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information his Department collects on the number, sex, age, race and occupation of victims of crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to a question by the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short) on 5 December 1985, at column 308. I understand that the Criminal Injuries Compensation

Board records information on the age, sex, and occupation of victims of crimes of violence who apply for compensation.

36. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes involving the use of firearms were made known to the police in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and what were the comparable totals five and 10 years previously.

Mr. Mellor: Statistics of notifiable offences recorded by the police in which firearms of all types, including air weapons, were reported to have been used are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 3.1 and 3.2 of the lastest edition for 1984, Cmnd. 9621). Eight thousand three hundred and seventy-six such offences were recorded in 1984, 6,547 in 1979 and 2,828 in 1974.

39. Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases brought to the attention of the police involved firearms in (a) England and (b) the three Yorkshire local authorities for the most recent six-month period for which statistics are available.

Mr. Mellor: Annual figures of notifiable offences recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used are published annually for each police force area in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales,"(Supplementary tables, vol. 3 (table S.3.1. (a) of the issue for 1984). Figures for the latest available six months are given in the table.

42. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of victims of crime during the 12 months ended September 1985: and what were the figures to the 12 months ended March 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available. Statistics of individual victims of crime are not collected centrally except for homicide. The statistics that are available relate to notifiable offences recorded by the police, including those which do not have personal victims and those which have more than one victim. Statistics of notifiable offences are published annually in chapter 2 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales".

66. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of crimes cleared up by the police as a percentage of notified crime for both 1979 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: The proportion of notifiable offences by the police in 1979 which were cleared up was 41 per cent. The corresponding figure for 1984 was 35 per cent. These figures have been published in table 2.17 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1984" (Cmnd. 9621). However, although the proportion of recorded offences which have been cleared up has fallen, the number cleared up has risen from 1 million in 1979 to 1·15 million in 1984.

67. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the increase from October to September 1985 over the previous 12 months in the number of offences of violence against the person.

Mr. Mellor: The police recorded 119,410 offences of violence against the person from October 1984 to September 1985, 6,560 more than in the preceding 12 months. The latest statistics of recorded offences are published in Home Office "Statistical Bulletin," issue No. 34/85.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk aked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the absolute and percentage increase in violent offences against women recorded in each police authority area between 1979 and 1984.

Mr. Mellor: The figures relating to offences of rape and of indecent assault on a female recorded by the police are given in the following tables. Where the numbers of offences are small the changes shown are subject to wide variation and may therefore be misleading. No information is separately available for offences of woundings of or common assault on a woman because the information collected centrally does not include the sex of the victim.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the clear-up rate for each police force area in each year since 1979 for the offence involving robbery, rape or violent assault against women.

Mr. Mellor: The following table gives clear-up rates for recorded offences of rape, indecent assault on a female and robbery in aggregate for the period 1979 to 1984. Annual clear-up figures are subject to wide variation and may be misleading.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table showing how many in the 71 to 80-year-old age group in England and Wales had hospital treatment after being mugged or robbed; and how many people became immobile as a result of the injuries they received over the past 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parents were prosecuted in each of the last 10 years in respect of offences allegedly committed by their children; how many parents did not pay fines imposed following convictions; and if he will publish figures for the average fines imposed for particular categories of offences.

Mr. Mellor: The recording of these cases may be incomplete in the information available to me which is given in the table. More detailed information for indictable offences in 1982 and 1984 is published in table 7C of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1984" (Cmnd. 9621), and provisional information for the period July 1983 to June 1984 was included in table 5 of Home Office "Statistical Bulletin", issue 12/85. Details of amounts of fines are published annually in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (in the issue for 1984 in volume 4, table S4.4*(a)* (age of offender) and table S4.4*(b)* (offence)).

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table showing, for England and Wales over the past 10 years, the number of people convicted of offences involving (a) murder, (b) rape, (c) robbery and (d) mugging, who (i) were given a custodial sentence, (ii) served the full length of a custodial sentence, (iii) were given a suspended sentence and (iv) were subsequently convicted of further offences after completion of the first sentence.

Mr. Mellor: Information on sentences for offences of murder, rape or robbery is published annually under offence classifications 1, 19 and 34 respectively in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" in volume 1, table s1.1(A) for magistrates courts and in volume 2, table s2.1(A) for Crown Courts. These statistics do not separately distinguish offences of "mugging", a term which has no legal definition; most offences of the type frequently referred to as "mugging" are recorded as offences of robbery.

The information requested on subsequent convictions could be provided, in the form requested, only at disproportionate cost. However, estimates of the reconviction rates for those given custodial sentences for selected types of offence and discharged from custody in 1981 are published in table 8(h) of "Prison Statistics, England and Wales 1984" (Cmnd. 9622). Reconviction rates for a sample of persons convicted in 1971 of selected types of offence are published in table 3.1 of "Previous Convictions, Sentence and Reconviction", Home Office research study No. 53. Information on those convicted of murder who were subsequently convicted of homicide is published in table 8.10 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1984". (Cmnd. 9621.)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many crimes involving mugging, theft, murder or rape were committed and recorded in Wales and England over the past 10 years (a) by the 14 to 16 year age group, (b) by the 17 to 20 year age group, (c) by the 21 to 25 year age group, (d) by the 26 to 30 year age group, (e) by the 31 to 35 year age group and (f) by the 36 to 45 year age group;

(2) if he will publish a table showing (a) how many people in the 40 to 50-year-old age group in England and Wales were mugged and robbed by the 14 to 16-year-old age group, (b) how many in the 51 to 60-year-old age group were mugged and robbed by the 16 to 20-year-old age group, (c) how many in the 61 to 70-year-old age group were mugged and robbed by the 16 to 20-year-old age group, (d) how many in the 71 to 80-year-old age group were mugged and robbed by the 14 to 25-year-old age group, (e) how many in the 40 to 50-year-old age group had hospital treatment after bring mugged or robbed and (f) how many in the 61 to 70-year-old age group had hospital treatment after being mugged or robbed over the past 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The age of the offender is known only when found guilty or cautioned by the police. The available information on findings of guilt and cautions is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (Cmnd. 9621) and in the associated supplementary tables. For 1984, details of persons found guilty by age group are published in supplementary tables volume 4, table S4.1(A), under offence classifications 1, 19, 34 and 39-54; corresponding information for persons cautioned is published in table S4.1(C). Information on the ages (and other characteristics) of victims of robbery is not regularly collected centrally.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were prosecuted for offences related to robbery or mugging committed in the Cardiff, West constituency in each of the last 10 years;

(2) how many of the robberies or muggings committed in the Cardiff, West constituency in each of the last 10 years were committed by people in the 14 to 25 age group;

(3) how many of those convicted for robbery or mugging in the Cardiff, West constituency in each of the past 10 years have been (a) given a custodial sentence, (b) given a suspended sentence, (c) fined and (d) given a community service order.

Mr. Mellor: The available information, which may be incomplete, is given in the table. The age of offenders can be given only where there has been a finding of guilt. To produce corresponding figures for earlier years would involve disproportionate cost.

Police (Resources and Equipment)

28. Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with police authorities about resources and equipment needs for the coming year.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We consulted the local authority associations which represent police authority interests in deciding the appropriate level of national provision for the police service in 1986-87 to be included in the rate support grant settlement. The level of resources and the equipment to be provided to each force are for individual police authorities to determine.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implications for his general policies on police equipment of the West Midlands county council's recent hostility to certain equipment procurement requirements of the chief constable.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As my right hon. Friend announced in reply to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Bedfordshire, Mid-West (Mr. Lyell) on 26 November, at columns 515-16, where a chief officer of police concludes that he requires plastic baton rounds, and this is endorsed by Her Majesty's inspector of constabulary, we regard it as essential that the equipment should be made available to the force concerned. We very much hope that in these circumstances police authorities will support chief officers by making the equipment available. If necessary, the equipment and training in its use will be provided centrally under Home Office auspices.

Licensing Laws

29. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of representations he has received regarding the liberalisation of licensing laws in England and Wales; and what proposals he will make in this matter.

Mr. Mellor: Since 2 December we have received seven letters from hon. Members on behalf of constituents, two from organisations and 32 letters from members of the public about the licensing hours. Thirty five of these supported relaxations in the law and six were opposed.

We shall want to look fully into the evidence on the effect of flexible licensing hours in Scotland before deciding whether the licensing hours in England and Wales should be changed.

Hampshire Constabulary

30. Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received since October concerning the case for increasing the establishment of the Hampshire constabulary.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My hon. Friend and I had a meeting on 12 November. We have not received any application recently from the Hampshire police authority for an increase in the authorised establishment of the Hampshire constabulary. One hundred and thirty four additional police posts have been approved for the force since May 1979.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on recent initiatives taken within the Government's overall strategy for tackling drug abuse.

Mr. Mellor: We continue to give a very high priority to our comprehensive strategy for tackling drug misuse. Since 1 January we have announced record provisional figures for customs' seizures in 1985; and the continuation of our successful prevention campaign, beginning with the launch of a two-part video package for young people. Our Drug Trafficking Offences Bill, which is now before Parliament, constitutes a further major initiative against drug trafficking. We have also recently announced the provision of an additional £5 million a year to health authorities from 1986-87 specifically for the expansion of services for drug misusers.

45. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will itemise the special resources which Her Majesty's Government have so far committed to the main elements of their strategy on drug misuse.

Mr. Mellor: Since 1 January 1985 we have announced provision for:

(i) £1·5 million over three years to combat drug production and trafficking in South America and elsewhere;
(ii) a further £2·4 million aid grant to help to eradicate opium poppy cultivation in Pakistan;
(iii) the creation of drugs wings in police regional crime squads, involving a 20 per cent. increase in their manpower, and the enhancement of the national drugs intelligence unit;
(iv) 50 more customs specialist investigators in 1985-86;
(v) 350 additional posts in 1986-87 for customs work (mainly on the prevention of drug smuggling);
(vi) a projected rise of over £12 million from 1984-85 and 1988-89 in customs expenditure on equipment and other drug-related items;
(vii) an increase to over £17 million of the fund to pump-prime local projects for drug misusers for three years;

(viii) from 1986-87, an additional £5 million a year to health authorities specifically for the expansion of services for drug misusers.

Many of our main continuing programmes also contribute to our strategy: for example, the value of urban programme support for drug projects is now nearly £1 million each year.

Racial Attacks

34. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the increase in the number of racial attacks in the metropolitan police area in each year since records were kept.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 10 December 1985, at column 583.

35. Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being taken by his Department and the police service to seek to combat racially motivated attacks.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Last October the Association of Chief Police Officers issued guidance to police forces on the handling of racial attacks. The guidance emphasised the importance of collecting and collating reliable local information about racial incidents and the need for a vigorous and sympathetic police response to these. The guidance supported the training being given to officers working in multiracial areas to heighten their awareness of racism in society and to help them secure the confidence and co-operation of the communities they serve. We have warmly welcomed this constructive document and the Department will be taking a close interest in the steps taken by police forces to combat racially motivated attacks.

Visiting Forces Act

37. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received any representations on the Visiting Forces Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We received three letters during 1985 about the implementation of the Act. In reply we explained our view that amendment to its provisions on jurisdiction was unnecessary and that a case had not been made out for collecting statistics on the number of cases on which a visiting force had claimed primary jurisdiction.

Closed Prisons

38. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many closed prisons there are; and, of this number, how many are in need of refurbishment or replacement.

Mr. Mellor: There are 90 closed prisons, remand centres and youth custody centres in England and Wales. Major capital schemes to refurbish, replace or add to the existing accommodation at 77 of these establishments are currently included in the five-year forward building programme. Of the remaining 13, three are planned to be replaced and closed, while almost all the rest are post-war establishments with no immediate need for major capital investment. All establishments are subject to regular programmes of repair, maintenance and redecoration.

Basildon (Courthouse)

40. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the prospects for a new courthouse in Basildon.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Essex county council is responsible for providing the new magistrates courthouse, in consultation with the magistrates courts committee. We offered the council a building start date of 1987-88 and this has been accepted. At present further action on the scheme rests with the council.

Fraud and Forgery

41. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state, for each year since 1978, the total sums involved in offences of fraud and forgery, and the total recovered for victims.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available. Statistics of offenders ordered to pay compensation for fraud and forgery, analysed by amount of compensation, are published annually, (Tables S4.11(a)(i) and S4.11(b)(i) of "Criminal Statistics, Supplementary Tables, Volume 4" for 1984).

Riot Control Equipment

44. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place with chief constables concerning the purchase, storage and use of riot control equipment.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Department's officials and Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary are in regular contact with chief officers of police in England and Wales about equipment for use in situations of serious public disorder.

Television Licences

46. Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent meetings he has had with the pensioners' groups regarding free television licences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No such meetings have taken place recently, and we have no plans to introduce free television licences for pensioners.

Television (Violence)

47. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about violence on television.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In recent weeks my right hon. Friend has received representations from hon. Members and from viewers' organisations and substantial correspondence from members of the public about what is felt to be excessive violence on television.

63. Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with representatives of (i) the British Broadcasting Corporation and (ii) the Independent Broadcasting Authority concerning the portrayal of violence on television; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend and I met the chairman and directors general of the BBC and IBA on 17

December to discuss public anxieties about violent and offensive programmes on television. The broadcasters described their research, monitoring and advisory arrangements in this area; the IBA reported that it had last reviewed its guidelines on these matters in April 1985 and the BBC that it was now reviewing its guidelines. They agreed to consider how the guidelines have been implemented in the past, and what further measures may need to be taken in the future to meet legitimate public concern.

Thames Valley Police

48. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision on the application from Thames Valley police for an increase in establishment.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Thames Valley police authority has been informed that, as a first step, my right hon. Friend is prepared to approve an increase of 50 police posts in the authorised establishment of the force for the financial year 1986-87, on the understanding that the police authority agrees to find its share of the necessary finance for these posts and its proposed civilianisation programme. He has also approved the police authority's application for 14 supernumerary posts for specific operational purposes.

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on police manning levels in the Thames Valley force.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 168]: There were 3,292 police officers and 1,183 civilian staff in the Thames Valley police on 30 November 1985. This is an increase of 852 (639 police officers and 213 civilians) since May 1979. A total of 320 additional police posts have been approved for the Thames Valley police since May 1979; the present police establishment of the force is 3,317. The police authority has been informed that, as a first step, my right hon. Friend is prepared to approve a further increase of 50 police posts for the financial year 1986-87 and 14 supernumerary posts for specific operational purposes.

Drug Trafficking Offences Bill

50. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received about the contents of the Drug Trafficking Offences Bill.

Mr. Mellor: Since the Drug Trafficking Offences Bill was published on 19 December we have received written representations from one hon. Member. In addition, we received comments from three hon. Members and four members of the public following the publication of a statement about the proposed contents of the legislation on 11 November.

Heathrow Airport (Immigration Officers)

51. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase staffing levels of immigration officers at terminals two and three, Heathrow airport.

Mr. Waddington: Immigration service staffing requirements at Heathrow will need to take account of the changed traffic patterns at the three existing terminals once terminal 4 opens in April. Provision will be made for the necessary staff at terminal 4, and the other terminals, in the light of a current review of conditions at peak periods during 1985 and of prospective workloads.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

52. Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes were operative at the end of 1985; how this compares with a year previously; and if he has any indication as to the effectiveness of such schemes in preventing crime.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Some 8,000 neighbourhood watch schemes were operating in England and Wales at the end of 1985, more than double the number in existence a year earlier. As to the effectiveness of such schemes, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Hirst) on 14 January 1986, at column 547.

Animals (Removal)

53. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to provide for the removal of specified classes of animal from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government have no plans for legislation to provide for the removal from the United Kingdom of animals of any species which have been legally imported and properly held in compliance with our quarantine regulations.

Rape

54. Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has yet received the recommendations from the Women's National Commission regarding under-reporting of rape; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have received a copy of the report by the Women's National Commission on violence against women. We welcome the constructive approach which the report has adopted and are anxious to take effective action to reduce the risks to which women are exposed, and to ensure that victims are treated with proper consideration. The report's recommendations cover a wide range of issues, including the reporting of offences of rape. Changes in police practice in recent years, both as regards recording of reported offences and interviewing of victims, have been in the direction favoured by the report and we shall be considering the issues raised in the report with the police and the judiciary, to see what scope there may be for further action.

Shops Bill

55. Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of letters he has received on the subject of Sunday trading this Session, identifying the number in support of and in opposition to the Government's proposals, respectively.

60. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received concerning the possible effects of enactment of the Shops Bill [Lords].

Mr. Waddington: Since the beginning of the Session my right hon. Friend has received 20,795 letters about Sunday trading, 32 supporting and 20,763 opposing the Government's proposals.

West Midlands County Police

57. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what authorisations or assurances have been given to the chief constable of the West Midlands to borrow on permanent loan plastic baton rounds from the Metropolitan police; and if he will make a statement on the expenditure involved.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Arrangements for the loan of items of equipment between forces are the responsibility of the chief officers of police concerned, in the first instance. I understand that the chief constable of the West Midlands has no plans at present to borrow plastic baton rounds from the Metropolitan police.

58. Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will increase the West Midlands county police establishment.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The West Midlands police authority is responsible for fixing the authorised establishment of the force, subject to my right hon. Friend's approval. He will be looking carefully at the manpower plans of the new West Midlands police authority, which will take over responsibility on 1 April 1986, under the Local Government Act 1985. At present the force has vacancies for both police officers and civilian staff.

Nuclear Attack (Casualties)

61. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of casualties that would result from a nuclear attack on Britain.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Government do not make detailed estimates of casualties, which would depend on the strategic intentions of the enemy at the time and other factors which cannot be predicted.

Naturalisation

62. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to introduce any changes to speed up the procedures for dealing with applications for naturalisation.

Mr. Waddington: We are always ready to implement changes which speed up the handling of applications if we can do so without greatly increasing the cost to applicants or adversely affecting the proper exercise of my right hon. Friend's discretion. We will continue to look for such opportunities in the coming months.

Firearms

68. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to review controls on the illegal use of firearms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We keep these matters under continuing review. My right hon. Friend is currently considering whether to require shotgun certificate holders to keep their weapons secure when not in use, in order to make it more difficult for criminals to obtain shotguns. The existing penalties for the unauthorised possession of firearms are already severe, but it is our intention at a suitable legislative opportunity to increase to life imprisonment the maximum penalty for carrying firearms in furtherance of crime.

Police Establishments

69. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any further plans to increase police establishments.

74. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about present levels of police manpower.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I would refer my hon. Friend and my hon. and learned Friend to the reply given to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 13 January 1986, at column 456, for information about the applications received from police authorities for increases in their police establishments for the financial year 1985-86 or later. One hundred and eleven additional posts had already been approved for seven forces, and eight other applications were under consideration. The following seven police authorities have recently been informed that my right hon. Friend is prepared to approve additional posts:

Police authority/force	Increase applied for	Increase approved
City of London	6	*6
Cumbria	14	†10
Devon and Cornwall	18	18
Northamptonshire	23	23
Thames Valley	200	‡64
Warwickshire	29	12
Wiltshire	11	||11

* Supernumeray posts.
† Includes eight supernumerary posts.
‡ Includes 14 supernumerary posts.
|| Includes seven supernumerary posts.

My right hon. Friend will be giving further consideration to the remaining applications in the light of advice from Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary.

Crime Forfeiture of Goods

75. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the proposals of the Epping Forest district Metropolitan police liaison committee that the confiscation of motor cycles should be made part of the penalty for certain offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The power of the courts to order the forfeiture of goods is generally restricted to offences which are punishable on indictment with at least two years' imprisonment. We are, however, considering whether the courts' general power to order forfeiture should be extended, and hope shortly to be in a position to announce our proposals.

Immigration

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from Pakistan; and what proportion are refused;

(2) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from Sri Lanka; and what proportion are refused;

(3) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from Canada; and what proportion are refused;

(4) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from Nigeria; and what proportion were refused;

(5) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from Ghana; and what proportion were refused;

(6) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from the United States of America; and what proportion were refused;

(7) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the last period for which figures are available come from Bangladesh; and what proportion are refused;

(8) what proportion of those seeking entry to the United Kingdom as visitors in the latest period for which figures are available came from India; and what proportion were refused.

Mr. Waddington: The table gives, for the 12 months ending June 1985, the numbers of passengers of each of the nationalities requested admitted as visitors to the United Kingdom expressed as a percentage of all non-European Community nationals admitted as visitors. It also gives the refusal rate for each nationality (that is the numbers of passengers of that nationality refused entry and removed from the United Kingdom expressed as a percentage of all passengers of that same nationality seeking entry). The statistics on refusals do not distinguish passengers seeking entry as visitors.

Nationality	Number, admitted as visitors as a percentage of all non-EC nationals so admitted	Number refused and removed as a percentage of all arrivals for nationality
Pakistan	1·2	1·3
Sri Lanka	0·3	1·7
Canada	6·1	*
Nigeria	2·1	1·3
Ghana	0·4	3·7
United States of America	39·2	*
Bangladesh	0·1	2·1
India	2·6	0·8

* Negligible.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were awaiting entry certificates in Pakistan, India and Bangladesh, respectively, in 1979; and what were the corresponding numbers at the latest date.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is given in the following table:

*Persons awaiting a decision on their application for entry clearance to the United Kingdom

Indian sub-continent Number

	End December 1979	End September 1985
Pakistan	14,900	7,400
India	8,500	3,000
Bangladesh	21,300	12,800
TOTAL	44,700	23,200

* For immediate settlement or temporary admission, including those who have been interviewed but whose application remains undetermined.

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Government intend introducing legislation to seek to make it a continuing offence for a person subject to immigration control to remain in the United Kingdom when he knows that his limited leave to be here has expired.

Mr. Hurd: Yes. The Immigration Act 1971 provides that a person who is not a British citizen shall be liable to deportation from the United Kingdom if, having only a limited leave to enter or remain, he remains beyond the time limited by the leave, that is he overstays. The Act also provides that such a person commits an offence if he knowingly overstays. A person who is convicted of such an offence may, if he has attained the age of 17, be recommended for deportation by a court. The Government believe that in the case of a person who knowingly overstays it is preferable, rather than use the administrative deportation powers, that he should normally be prosecuted and if appropriate, deported from the United Kingdom following a court recommendation. However, the House of Lords held in Grant v. Borg in 1982 that the offence of overstaying can be committed only on the day immediately after the leave expires. Accordingly, it is intended that legislation should be introduced in the lifetime of this Parliament to the effect that the offence is committed on the day when the overstayer first knows that his leave has expired and that it continues to be committed throughout any period during which he remains in the United Kingdom thereafter.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time per day that prisoners in C1 unit at Holloway prison spent in their cells in the most recent convenient period.

Mr. Mellor: During the week beginning 6 January prisoners on C1 unit spent an average of three hours each day engaged in out-of-cell activities or attending court. Addition time out-of-cell which cannot be quantified, was spent bathing, receiving visits and at interviews.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in the C1 unit at Holloway prison had access to the skills training unit, and for how many hours, in the most convenient period.

Mr. Mellor: In the week beginning 6 January 1986 the attendance was as follows:

Monday 6 January—am none; pm 15 for 1½ hours
Tuesday 7 January—am 15 for 1½ hours; pm 15 for 2 hours

Wednesday 8 January—am none; pm 15 for 2 hours
Thursday 9 January—am 18 for 2 hours; pm 22 for 2 hours
Friday 10 January—am none; pm 20 for 2 hours

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many attempts at self-mutilation and how many cases of attempted and actual suicide have occurred in C1 unit at Holloway prison each week since the end of July.

Mr. Mellor: There were 82 attempts at self injury (involving 25 inmates), one attempted suicide and one death (still subject to an inquest) on C1 unit between 1 August 1985 and 17 January 1986.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers and how many nurses currently staff the C1 unit at Holloway prison.

Mr. Mellor: The staffing level, which is related to the needs of the routine, varies throughout the day. During the morning there are five nurses and 10 officers on duty; in the afternoon there are eight nurses and eight officers; in the evening there are three nurses and five officers; and during the night there are two nurses and two officers.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently held in the C1 unit at Holloway prison; and of these how many are remand prisoners and how many are sentenced.

Mr. Mellor: On Monday 20 January 1986 there were 34 prisoners on C1 unit, of whom 22 were on remand and 12 sentenced.

Martial Arts

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to the answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 570, he will make public the recommendations of the Martial Arts Commission as to the contents of the new guidelines as to the sale of martial arts weapons.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This has already been done. Copies of the guidance notice to traders, which incorporates fully the views of the Martial Arts Commission, were attached to a Home Office press release on the topic on 15 January. Copies of both were also sent to all trading standards officers and to the Sports Council.

Police Posts (Civilianisation)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of police posts civilianised in each of the past three years for (a) the metropolitan police area and (b) all other force areas where such information is available without incurring such disproportionate cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Styal and Rudgate Prisons

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present staffing establishment at Her Majesty's prison, Styal; how many staff of prison officer grade or above were on night duty there on 16-17 January; what was the corresponding number for the night of 31 December 1985-1 January 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The staffing establishment is as follows:

Assistant Governor	4	3

The authorised night manning levels are one senior officer, one officer and 11 night patrol officers. On the night of 16-17 January staff on duty comprised one senior officer, three officers and nine night patrol officers. On new years' eve the numbers were one senior officer, six officers and six night patrol officers.

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about recent disturbances at Her Majesty's prisons Rudgate and Styal.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what disturbances took place at Her Majesty's prison Styal on the night of 31 December 1985; what further disturbances have taken place since then; and what action he proposes to take to prevent further disturbances;

(2) why no statement or press release was issued by his Department on the recent disturbances in Her Majesty's prison, Styal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Between midnight and 2 am on 1 January, a number of inmates at Styal left their houses through the fire doors which set off the alarms. Staff were thus quickly aware of this and took the necessary action. No statement or press release was made: the incident was not reported to headquarters until the deputy director general routinely visited Styal on 16 January, when he discussed the incident with the governor, the local branch of the Prison Officer's

Association, and the chairman of the board of visitors, as a result of which the regional director is considering whether any further action is necessary.

There has been no recent disturbance at Ridgegate.

Young Offenders

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many young offenders under the age of 21 years were sentenced to detention centre or youth custody in 1984;

(2) how many young offenders who were sentenced to periods of youth custody in 1984 received sentences in excess of 12 months;

(3) how many young offenders under the age of 21 years were sentenced to detention centre or youth custody for offences of theft or burglary where the value of the property stolen was less than £50;

(4) how many young offenders under the age of 21 years were sentenced to detention centre or youth custody in 1984 for offences of attempted theft or attempted burglary;

(5) how many young offenders under the age of 21 years were sentenced to detention centre or youth custody in 1984 where the court had found it unnecessary to obtain a social inquiry report;

(6) what proportion of those young offenders who were sentenced to detention centre or youth custody in 1984 had declared themselves unwilling or unable to comply with a non-custodial sentence.

Mr. Mellor: The available information on persons sentenced to detention centre or youth custody is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". Supplementary tables, volume 1, s1.1(c) and s1.1(d) show, for offences aged 14 and under 17 and 17 and under 21 respectively, the number of offenders sentenced in magistrates courts. Corresponding information for the Crown court is published in volume 2, s2.1(c) and s2.1(d). Attempts to commit offences are classified under the substantive offence. Information on the length of sentence for youth custody at the Crown court is shown in volume 2, table s2.5. The information is summarised in tables 7.15, 7.16 and 7.17 of the Command Paper for 1984 (Cmnd. 9621). Information on the value of property stolen and on whether a social inquiry report was made is not collected centrally in the results of court proceedings.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders under the age of 21 years were sentenced to detention centre or youth custody in 1984 who had not previously been the subject of either a supervision order, a probation order or a community service order.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available centrally.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Hurd: The numbers of people employed in the Home Office public relations branch and their estimated salary, accommodation and service costs are as follows:

Financial Year	Staff of all grades in post on 1 January	Estimated salary and other costs £
1981-82	35	448,000
1982-83	31	429,000
1983-84	32	545,000
1984-85	36	596,000
1985-86	36	646,000

NB The basis for estimating staff costs was widened to include all over-heads from 1983-84.

Heathrow (Armed Foreign Nationals)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals are permitted to carry firearms at Heathrow; and what is their nationality.

Mr. Hurd: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to the employees of, or those associated with, foreign airline companies. No such persons have been granted permission to carry firearms in connection with the performance of their duties at Heathrow.

Political Refugees

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of applications received in each year since 1980 for (a) political asylum and (b) refugee status; and how many of each were granted.

Mr. Waddington: The available information is as follows:

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Applications for asylum	2,352	2,425	4,223	4,296	3,478
Granted refugee status	1,073	1,249	1,371	872	574
Granted asylum without refugee status	74	224	356	313	*10

* In July 1984 the category of "asylum without refugee status" was abolished. Since then all persons granted asylum have been recognised as refugees.

Final figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Community Radio

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce a decision on the north London community radio franchise.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A decision will be made when my right hon. Friend has had an opportunity to consider the recommendations of the Advisory Panel on Community Radio, whose advice he hopes to receive within the next few weeks.

Greenham Common (Soviet Agents)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has that Soviet agents have infiltrated the women's camps round Greenham common at any time.

Mr. Hurd: It is not the practice to comment on security matters of this kind, but I am satisfied that the security authorities are fully alert to the need for suitable measures against espionage, sabotage and comparable threats, from whatever quarter.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists have been prosecuted in England and Wales and Greater London, respectively, in each quarter since 1 January 1982 for failing to observe traffic lights, distinguishing between those cases involving injury, death and no injury.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 569]: The available information relates to proceedings at magistrates' courts for failing to comply with traffic signals, other than those at pedestrian light-controlled crossings and is given in the table. Whether injuries or deaths were associated with these alleged offences is not recorded centrally. However, proceedings for the offences "causing death by reckless driving" and "causing bodily harm by furious driving" are separately recorded and these figures are also shown. Further information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Radio Paging (Band 3)

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he anticipates making the award of licences in band 3 for radio paging; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The Director General of Telecommunications expects to be in a position to provide advice on the award of licences for national and London private mobile radio networks in band 3 soon. Subject to this, I should be in a position to announce the names of the successful applicants for national London and regional band 3 networks by the end of February. The actual issue of licences will depend on further discussions with the successful applicants to define certain system details and the licence conditions to be applied.

I expect the decisions on the issue of further licences for wide area paging frequencies, which are not in band 3, to follow a similar timetable.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations that have been made to him and the meetings that have been held with interested bodies in preparation for his negotiations on the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Channon: In preparation for negotiations on the multi-fibre arrangement I have held frequent meetings with organisations representing employers and employees in the textile and clothing industry, consumers, importers and retailers. I have received a large number of representations on this subject from all of these sources and from individuals writing mainly on behalf either of the industry or of the development movement. I have also received representations on the subject from some local authorities.

This week I have met the Consumers' Association, the National Consumer Council, the British Textile Confederation, the British Clothing Industry Association, the Knitting Industries Federation, the British Importers Confederation, the Retail Consortium and the TUC Textile, Clothing and Footwear Industries Committee.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many deals involving interest rate support, whether in sterling or foreign currencies, in respect of exports to other European Economic Community countries have been arranged by the Export Credits Guarantee Department; and how many of them have been arranged with the involvement of third, non-EEC, countries since March 1978.

Mr. Channon: The Export Credits Guarantee Department does not itself arrange export transactions. Information on transactions which it has supported is not kept in a form to provide the information requested.

Regional Development and Selective Assistance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for each year until 1989 his estimate, in real terms at 1985 prices, of expenditure on (a) regional development grants and (b) regional selective assistance; if he will list expenditure on both in 1979-80 and 1984-85 at 1985 prices; and if he will provide an estimate of expenditure on regional development grant and selective assistance for each regional area for 1979-80, 1984-85, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

GEC (Takeover Bid)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he took of GEC's involvement in the proposed European consortium seeking to purchase a stake in Westland plc in deciding whether to refer GEC's bid for Plessey to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brittan: None. The decision to refer this proposed merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission was made strictly in accordance with my statutory responsibilities, and on the recommendation of the Director-General of Fair Trading.

Lloyd's (Inquiry)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure a wide spread of interest on the inquiry into Lloyd's and appoint representatives of trade unions and consumers.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

President Reagan (SDI)

Q13. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister whether she will seek to meet President Reagan to discuss the research programme to investigate the feasibility of strategic defence.

The Prime Minister: No. I have already discussed the strategic defence initiative with President Reagan on a number of occasions. Our jointly agreed position on this subject is recorded in the statement I made in the United States on 22 December 1984.

Turkey

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Prime Minister what representations she intends to make to the Prime Minister of Turkey, Mr. Turgut Ozal, about civil rights in Turkey when he visits the United Kingdom on 17 February.

The Prime Minister: I look forward to holding wide-ranging talks with Mr. Ozal. I shall welcome the progress made by his Government on human rights while, as on previous occasions, expressing our hope that Turkey will continue its efforts to achieve full normalisation in these matters.

Engagements

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 January.

Mr. Stern asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 January.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 January.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to attend a reception in honour of the Prime Minister of Israel, and shall later be presiding at a dinner for the NSPCC.

Gifts (Brunei Visit)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Prime Minister if she will list, describe and estimate the value of the gifts she received, together with their donors, while in Brunei in June 1985.

The Prime Minister: I am not prepared to give details of the individual gifts which I have received; to do so would risk discourtesy to the donors. Such gifts have been dealt with according to the rules, to which I referred in my reply to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) on 15 January, at column 578.

Airport Security

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 521, what were the total costs and numbers of personnel involved in the exercise at Heathrow airport.

The Prime Minister: The exercises are part of the training of the troops concerned, and no significant additional costs were incurred. The numbers deployed have varied on the different occasions. It would not be in the interests of security to reveal how many are normally deployed or are available for this task.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 521, whether the Home Secretary, as the police authority for London, was informed of the decision to send military personnel to Heathrow airport.

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 521, what were the reasons for the deployment of military personnel at Heathrow airport; and on what dates the exercises were carried out.

The Prime Minister: These exercises are held at the request of the police and with the approval of my right hon. Friends the Home Secretary and the Secretary of State for Defence. They are held to familiarise the troops concerned with the duties they would carry out in an emergency, and for deterrent purposes. They have been carried out on the following dates:

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 521, on how many occasions firearms were issued to military personnel on exercises at Heathrow airport.

The Prime Minister: Firearms are a normal part of the equipment of the troops concerned, and have been issued on each occasion when exercises at Heathrow have been carried out.

Appointments

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 9 December, Official Report, columns 421-24, if she will list the names of all those people whom she has appointed to public bodies in each of the past five years.

The Prime Minister: All appointments are announced when made and it would involve disproportionate cost to list in arrears the large number of names appointed or reappointed to these public bodies over the years in question.

Westland plc

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Prime Minister if she instructed the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, prior to his statement at 3.30 pm on Monday 13 January, to refuse to acknowledge the existence of the letter of that date from Sir Austin Pearce to the Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my, and my right hon. and learned Friend's earlier statements on this matter.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Start Project

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General what are the latest figures for the number of people who have qualified for the £20 a week special allowance in the nine areas in which the job start project has been initiated by his Department.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the first two weeks of the pilot scheme—that is, up to 17 January—10 people qualified for the job start allowance.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General if he will tabulate in the Official Report the failure rate of businesses in the three months after the completion of the 12-month period under the enterprise allowance scheme; and what is the failure rate of businesses run by disabled people.

Mr. Trippier: A survey of former enterprise allowance scheme participants three months after the allowance had stopped showed that, of those taking advantage of a full year on the scheme, 14 per cent. had ceased to trade at the time of the survey. No comparable figure is available for businesses run by disabled people.

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General how many people were participating in the enterprise allowance scheme at the latest date for which figures are available; and, of these, how many were disabled.

Mr. Trippier: Fifty-two thousand, four hundred and one people were in receipt of the enterprise allowance on 16 January 1986. No statistics are kept of the numbers of disabled people on the scheme.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Details of the numbers of information officer group staff employed in Department of Employment group press and public relations offices are given below. These figures do not include administrative and clerical staff who work in support of these offices.

	1 April 1982 Staff numbers	1 January 1983 Staff numbers	1 January 1984 Staff numbers	1 January 1985 Staff numbers	1 January 1986 Staff numbers
Department of Employment	8	8	8	7	8
Manpower Services Commission	7	7	7	7	8
Health and Safety Commission/Executive	5	5	7	7	6
Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service	4	4	3	3	2

Budget information prior to 1985-86 is not available, but salary costs were as follows:

	1981-82 £	1982-83 £	1983-84 £	1984-85 £	Budget 1985-86 £
Department of Employment	107,000	121,000	127,000	112,000	147,000

Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service	62,000	65,000	54,000	47,000	49,000

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Rost asked the Paymaster General what action he proposes to take in the light of the refusal by Derbyshire county council to comply with his request under the Employment and Training Act 1973 that unreasonable refusers of youth training scheme offers should be reported to his Department by county careers officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have asked officials to discuss the matter with the director of education. In my view the requirement placed on local education authorities is reasonable and should be complied with.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid Programme

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs from within which heads of expenditure in the Overseas Development Administration budget he has taken the additional £5 million announced by the Minister for Overseas Development on 13 January, Official Report, column 723, to be made available to the Save the Children Fund and the £200,000 to Oxfam; and if he will state, in each case, the residual amounts left in each budget so reduced.

Mr. Raison: As I announced on 13 January, an additional £5 million has been made available through Save the Children Fund, mainly to meet the costs of urgent food distribution in Darfur. The requirement falls mainly in the first half of 1986, and will be met in part this financial year (that is, up to 31 March) and in part next. The amount required this financial year, estimated at up to £2 million, and the £200,000 for Oxfam are available as a result of unavoidable slippage in other programmes. The scope for these new allocations has been identified by an assessment of the forecast of overall spending against the total resources available; they cannot meaningfully be related to reduced spending forecasts for other individual programme items.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all Overseas Development Administration programmes which have suffered unavoidable slippage to the year to date; and by how much he estimates he will (a) overspend and (b) underspend and what will be the net total.

Mr. Raison: I am not prepared to publish such a list. Forecasts of the spending outturn for each aid programme item are the subject of a continual process of assessment throughout the year; most are subject to frequent revision reflecting the changes in the many factors usually affecting the rate of spending. Publication of such figures for particular points in time during the financial year would in my view serve little purpose.

On present forecasts for 1985-86 I expect to neither overspend nor underspend the total aid resources available.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what programmes he has allocated the current year's contingency reserve; and how much remains to be allocated.

Mr. Raison: The aid programme's contingency reserve for 1985-86 has been fully allocated. Its distribution by Supply Estimates subheads is as follows:

		£ million
Emergency assistance for disasters and refugee relief (Subheads A15, A16 and C1 of the Supply Estimates) of which—		35·4
Africa	£29 million
Elsewhere	£6·4 million
Bilateral country programme (Subheads B1 and B3)		21·9
Other programmes including: WHO Action Programme on Essential Drugs and Vaccines (Subhead A8) United Nations Office of Emergency Operations in Africa (Subhead A8)		0·3
Total		57·6

Mr. Charles Morrison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contributions are being made for 1986 to (a) the International Planned Parenthood Federation, (b) The United Nations Fund for Population Activities and (c) the World Health Organisation's special programme on human reproduction.

Mr. Raison: We have made the following pledges for 1986, subject to parliamentary approval:

(a) International Planned Parenthood Federation: £5·3 million;

(b) United Nations Fund for Population Activities: £4·5 million;

(c) World Health Organisation's Special Programme on Human Reproduction: £2·2 million.

Sudan

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the further sums of £5 million and £200,000 for aid projects in the Sudan, referred to in the answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 773, are in addition to the total figures for the overseas development budget given in the public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. Raison: No.

Country Review Programmes

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will place in the Library the most recent country review programmes.

Mr. Raison: A country policy review paper is produced every year for major aid recipients. It is an internal management document which assists Ministers to reach decisions on the future size and scope of the bilateral aid programme under review. It is not suitable for publication.

Project Framework Systems

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the new project framework systems referred to on page 58, paragraph 37 of volume II of the "Government's Expenditure Plans" (Cmnd. 9701-II) differs from the aid framework used by his Department in previous years.

Mr. Raison: The aid framework is the planning mechanism whereby aid resources in total are allocated to specific uses and programmes, multilateral and bilateral, over a three-year forward period. It will continue to operate as in the past.

The project framework, which was introduced recently into the Overseas Development Administration, is a new approach to project planning and implementation. Its main purpose is to set out in a clear and logical way, at the time a project is proposed, the link between the resources put into the project and what it is expected to achieve, in terms of both detailed and broader objectives.

Centre for World Development Education

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the prospects of closure of the Centre for World Development Education, London;

(2) if he will make a statement on the financial position of the Centre for World Development Education, London.

Mr. Raison: At the request of CWDE and five of the main voluntary agencies, I have agreed to make a special grant of £25,000 towards a rescue package which will resolve the Centre's immediate problems. This assistance is additional to the Overseas Development Administration's annual grant to the Centre of £100,000 which will continue until the end of the forthcoming financial year.

I am not able to give any commitment of ODA support beyond that date pending a review of our policy towards development education in general and CWDE in particular. I expect to announce the results of this review later in the year.

British Council

Sir Peter Tapsell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role the British Council will play in respect of the expenditure released by the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation.

Mr. Raison: The British Council will be involved, in either an advisory or administrative capacity or both, in the following schemes mentioned in my reply of 19 December at column 241 to my hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-West (Mr. Budgen):

The ODA Technical Co-operation Training Programme;
a joint scheme for scholarships in the United Kingdom for Chinese students;
the Key English Language Teaching Programme;
a Commonwealth training scheme for black South Africans at Post-Graduate level;
the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Scholarships and Awards Scheme.

These schemes are expected to receive about 80 per cent. of the re-allocated total of £6·4 million.

International Council of Scientific Unions

Sir Peter Tapsell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether financial support will be provided for the International Council of Scientific Unions from the savings of the British contribution to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation.

Mr. Raison: Yes. Money will be allotted to the International Council of Scientific Unions and some of its constituent scientific unions.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Jopling: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number employed
1981-82	99
1982-83	95
1983-84	95
1984-85	94
1985-86	94

Total administration expenditure on press liaison, information policy and technical visual aids for the years 1984-85 and 1985-86 was £2·1 million and £2·3 million, respectively.

Annual expenditure for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Battery Hens

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will be seeking the phasing-out of the keeping of battery hens.

Mrs. Fenner: I have no such plans. Instead, we are seeking agreement within the European Community on minimum welfare standards for hens in battery cages.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Departmental Select Committees

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many days are estimated to have been worked by specialist advisers in respect of each departmental Select Committee for each year since their appointment, together with the total number of days worked for each year.

Mr. Biffen: The information is set out in the following table.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many witnesses have appeared before each of the departmental Select Committees and their Sub-Committees for each Session since their establishment; how many times they have given evidence; what is the rank of each of the official witnesses concerned; and if he will give the same information for Cabinet Ministers and other Ministers.

Mr. Biffen: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many visits have been made by each of the departmental Select Committees, including visits by Sub-Committees, since their appointment, abroad and within the United Kingdom; and what is the total cost for each Committee, together with the global cost for each Committee and for all departmental Committees since their inception.

Mr. Biffen: The information is set out in the following table.

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many reports have been published by each departmental Select Committee for each Session since their appointment; and if he will list those published in the last Session.

Mr. Biffen: The following table shows the number of reports published by each departmental Select Committee in each Session since their appointment.

ENVIRONMENT

Land Compensation Acts (Claims)

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether any progress has been made on facilitating the payment of compound interest on claims under the Land Compensation Acts;

(2) what representations he has received in the last three years regarding the payment and taxation of interest on claims under the Land Compensation Acts; when these representations were received; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: A consultation paper on interest on land compensation was issued on 16 March 1984. The paper proposed that simple interest should continue to be payable on land compensation, but that part payments should be made at regular intervals prior to the settlement of a claim on an estimated basis. Including direct responses to this consultation paper, in the last three years the Department has received correspondence from 43 bodies and individuals, a few of whom have written on more than one occasion. Most accepted the proposals in the consultation paper, although some have said that they prefer the payment of compound interest as an alternative. I am not at present in a position to say when any legislation might be introduced on this subject.

Sandwell Council

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to provide additional funds to the Sandwell metropolitan borough council to assist the council in meeting its obligations under the Housing Defects Act following the designation of Smith type houses under the Act.

Sir George Young: Sandwell metropolitan borough council's obligations under the Housing Defects Act, including those likely to arise following the designation of Smith houses, were taken into account, within the resources available, in making the 1986-87 housing investment programme allocations.

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with Sandwell metropolitan borough council about next year's rate support grant; and what discussions are planned.

Mrs. Rumbold: I exchanged correspondence last year with the chairman of the council's finance committee. No meeting has been sought. I should be happy to meet a deputation from the council if it wishes.

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in percentage terms the proportion of total local authority expenditure met by rate support grant by the Sandwell metropolitan borough council for each year since 1977.

Mrs. Rumbold: Figures before 1981-82 are not comparable with later years. The grant figures and percentages below are after holdback of block grant. Those for 1981-82 and 1982-83 are final entitlements; those for subsequent years are latest entitlements.

Year	Rate support Grant £	Total Expenditure per cent.
1981-82	40,476,440	48·1
1982-83	46,361,960	46·7
1983-84	53,009,218	48·2
1984-85	54,652,740	48·6
1985-86	53,171,046	45·7

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list his Department's allocation for housing expenditure to the Sandwell metropolitan borough for each year since 1977.

Sir George Young: The housing investment programme allocations for Sandwell metropolitan borough council since 1977-78 have been as follows:

	£ million
1977-78	15·649
1978-79	18·039
1979-80	18·119
1980-81	19·869
1981-82	14·684
1982-83	15·834
1983-84	16·668
1984-85	14·664
1985-86	13·153
1986-87	12·343

Since 1981-82 authorities have been able to augment their allocations by spending the prescribed proportion of their capital receipts.

Urban Programme

Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will detail the projects which have received assistance in Manchester under the traditional urban programme, the enhanced urban programme and the urban development grant schemes since 1979; and what is the total cost of these schemes to Government funds.

Mr. John Patten: Manchester city council is a partnership authority which, since 1979, has been allocated in total some £80 million urban programme resources. In 1984-85 alone the allocation was some £12 million and over 400 projects were considered. In addition, many GMC projects also benefitted the Manchester area. Four projects have received urban development grant totalling £5·2 million. It is impracticable to give details of all projects over the six-year period.

Watercourses (Mercury Contamination)

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which stretches of rivers and watercourses in England contain levels of mercury which are (a) above and (b) over twice the level of the limit set down by the European Economic Community;

(2) if he will list those rivers and watercourses or areas of still water where the levels of mercury are such as to present a hazard to the public.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The required information is published each year in the form of a Management Information System for Ministers (MINIS) and is available in the House of Commons Library. The latest, MINIS 6, was published on 24 July 1985.

GLC (Grant Consent)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the factors which have hitherto inhibited him from giving consent to a grant to the All London Teachers against Racism and Fascism for which the Greater London council applied on 17 May 1985.

Mr. Tracey: No. Consent to the council's application has been refused.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to the reply of 20 January, he will make it his policy to reach a decision on each of the consents sought before the end of January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: No. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 21 January, at column 142.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 20 January, Official Report, column 52, what further information has been requested by his Department from the Greater London council regarding each of the four consents listed in the questions.

Mr. Tracey: On each case, the GLC has been asked to provide such further information and justification as is necessary to enable my right hon. Friend to reach a decision as quickly as possible.

Capital Expenditure Allocations

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what capital expenditure allocation was requested by each fire and civil defence authority for 1986-87; and which of these allocations were granted.

Mrs. Rumbold: In determining the Other Services block allocations, my right hon. Friend seeks recommendations from the relevant local authority associations rather than direct bids from the authorities. In the case of the metropolitan fire and civil defence authorities, he accepted the recommendations received from the Association of Metropolitan Authorities. The allocation to the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority was made following discussions between the Home Office, the Department of the Environment and representatives of the authority, taking account of the resources available overall within the block.

Housing (Langbaurgh)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 15 January, Official Report, column 574, how many WCs were in the Normandy three bedroomed and the Ormesby two bedroomed houses, respectively, at the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh (i) before and (ii) after refurbishment.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors affecting existing occupiers he took into account before approving the urban development grant for the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh.

Mr. John Patten: As indicated in my reply of Wednesday 15 January 1986, at column 574, part of the estate had become difficult to let. Relocation of the remaining tenants is a matter for Langbaurgh borough council. I understand that alternative accommodation and home loss and disturbance payments were offered to the tenants concerned.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the houses on the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh in respect of which he approved an urban development grant do not carry a 10 year NHBC certificate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: This is a matter for the housebuilder who is carrying out the scheme.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if all the dwellings shown in the photographs accompanying the application for an urban development grant for the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh were included in the scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: One hundred and seventy-seven dwellings are being sold by Langbaurgh borough council to the developers who are carrying out the scheme approved for urban development grant. This accorded with the plans and drawings submitted in support of the application, which did not identify the properties concerned by means of photographs.

Neighbourhood Watch Notices (Camden)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in view of the decision of the London borough of Camden to prevent the display of neighbourhood watch notices on lamp posts in the borough, he will amend the regulations so as to exempt such notices from local authority planning control.

Mr. Tracey: I understand that the London borough of Camden has not yet determined the advertisement application to which my hon. Friend refers. If consent is refused or is granted subject to conditions with which the applicant is dissatisfied, there will be a right of appeal to my right hon. Friend against the council's decision.

As my right hon. Friend told my hon. Friend in a letter of 25 November 1985, if there is evidence of any general difficulty with neighbourhood watch signs, we would consider whether the Control of Advertisement Regulations should be amended.

Direct Labour Organisations

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to seek to restrict the direct labour organisations of those local authorities which currently produce and sell their own windows; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: While it is not for me to interpret the law, it appears to empower local authorities to make window frames. However, the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act 1970 restricts the sale of such products to other local authorities and certain public bodies. My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to introduce further restrictions.

Ministry of Defence Houses (Maidenhead)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, when disposing of the Ministry of Defence houses at White Waltham, Maidenhead, he will consider applications from housing associations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Yes. The 38 Ministry of Defence houses and land at White Waltham are being offered for sale by tender on 6 February 1986. Bona fide tenders from any source, including housing associations, will be considered.

Local Authority Expenditure

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in the Official Report all the assumptions as to the level of local authority expenditure in 1986-87, in aggregate and for each individual authority, and all other assumptions behind the calculations in the paper, "Grant Re-cycling 1986-87"; and when the information contained in this document was first made available to him.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The assumption was that initial grant claims by local authorities in England amount to £400 million less than the amount provided for in the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement. There are many different expenditures, both in aggregate and at the individual authority level, which would lead to this result. The figures contained in the document were first made available to me on Saturday 18 January.

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will report on progress of The Queen Elizabeth II conference centre being built at Broad Sanctuary, and its cost.

Sir George Young: In my answer of 5 March 1984, at column 425, I said that overall completion was due in April 1986. This is still expected to be achieved. Some construction work will be completed from January to April concurrently with the fitting out.

The estimated cost of the construction and fitting out of the superstructure including the fitting out of the extension to the parliamentary telephone exchange, contractors' claims paid to date, inflation and variation of price payments is £50·4 million. The estimated cost of furnishing remains at £5·3 million.

Kenwood House

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has reached a decision on the land he intends to transfer with Kenwood House to the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission under the Local Government Act 1985.

Mr. Tracey: My noble Friend the Minister of State made an announcement today in another place on this subject:

The Government have now decided on the area appropriate as a setting for Kenwood house and which it is proper for the proprietors of the house to manage. It comprises the land specified in the Iveagh Bequest Act together with the walled garden, and the remainder of the area enclosed by the existing fence erected by the London county council. This consists for the most part, of Southwood and the wooded area, including the lakes which is the centrepiece for the summer concerts. This land will be precisely delineated in a map shortly to be published with the main property transfer order.

It is important that Kenwood house and its surrounding area is managed and presented effectively. I know that English Heritage is committed to working closely with the London Residuary Body which will assume responsibility temporarily for Hampstead heath and, in the longer term, with the ultimate authority for the heath.

Communications Code (Merton)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the code of conduct on communications with the media introduced in 1985 by the London borough of Merton; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am aware of the code of conduct, which is an internal management document of the London borough of Merton.

CIVIL SERVICE

Photocopying

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister for the Civil Service in which Government Departments routine photocopying is permitted only on completion of a form or forms; in which Departments such forms have to be completed in duplicate; if this practice has been introduced in any Department during the last seven years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I regret that this information cannot be provided without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources. However, I will write to the hon. Member explaining this further.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Civil Service

Mr. Alexander asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated number of additional civil servants that will be needed to cope with the extra work arising out of the disbanding of the £8,500 threshold relating to P11Ds income tax form.

Mr. Moore: It is estimated that if the £8,500 threshold were abolished, the additional staff cost for the Inland Revenue would be about 200 units.

Gaming Machines

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sum in value added tax has been collected from gaming machines by Her Majesty's Government in each financial year from 1 November 1975 to the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Brooke: Businesses registered for value added tax are not required to make returns of the tax charged on particular supplies of goods or services, and the information sought is therefore not directly available. Nor, I regret, is sufficiently detailed information available from other sources in this instance on which to base a reliable estimate.

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much licence duty has been collected by Her Majesty's Government from gaming machines in each financial year from 1 October 1966 to the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Brooke: The amount of gaming machine licence duty received in each financial year since 1966-67 was as follows:

	(£,000)
1966-67	2,689
1967-68	2,861
1968-69	2,935
1969-70	7,705
1970-71	7,910
1971-72	7,787
1972-73	7,576
1973-74	8,266
1974-75	9,235
1975-76	8,222
1976-77	8,951
1977-78	9,959
1978-79	11,662
1979-80	13,912
1980-81	17,746
1981-82	26,243
1982-83	57,244
1983-84	62,917
1984-85	53,180
1985-86*	47,897

* April-September.

Depatmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. MacGregor: The information sought is a follows:

	Numbers employed	Cost £ thousand
1982-83	22	404
1983-84	21	456
1984-85	21	508
1985-86*	21	574

* Forecast outturn.

Comparable figures for the year 1981-82 are not available because of machinery of Government changes.

British Legion (VAT)

Mr. Gould asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received seeking exemption of the British Legion from liability to value added tax.

Mr. Brooke: Since May 1985 my colleagues and I have received 77 letters about the VAT position of the Royal British Legion. Some two-thirds of these have been concerned about the supposed imposition of VAT on Remembrance Day poppies. As was made clear in replies to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 19 November at columns 91-2 and to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 15 November at column 273 there is no VAT on the giving of a token in recognition of a donation nor on the donation itself. Like other charities, the Royal British Legion bears VAT which it cannot recover on its non-business purchases; in this respect the treatment of charities in the United Kingdom is the same as in the rest of the European Community.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Hicks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the standard rate of value added tax in all European Community countries, and, where appropriate, the preferential rate of value added tax for hotel accommodation and meals taken in restaurants.

Mr. Brooke: The latest information available is as follows:

	Standard rate	Hotel accommodation	Restaurant meals
Belgium	19	6	17
Denmark	22	22	22
France	18·6	7, 18·6*	18·6
Germany	14	14	14
Greece	VAT has not yet been introduced
Ireland	23	10	23
Italy	18	9, 18*	9
Luxembourg	12	6	6
Netherlands	19	5	5
Portugal	16 (12)†	8 (6)†	8 (6)†
Spain	12	6, 12*	6
United Kingdom	15	15	15

* The higher rate applies to luxury hotels.

† The rate in brackets applies to the Autonomous Regions of the Madeira and Azores Archipelagoes.

Council of Finance Ministers

Mr. Lester asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Council of Finance Ministers.

Mr. Brooke: The EC Economic and Finance Council met in Brussels on 20 January. The United Kingdom was represented by its permanent representative.

The Council adopted a negotiating mandate on commercial interest reference rates, for discussions in the OECD on export credits.

The Council also decided on the terms of reference for the work of the high level group on indirect tax approximation, which it set up at its December meeting. The remit is a wide ranging one, and will allow the group to look at all aspects of indirect tax in the context of completion of the internal market.

TRANSPORT

Road Traffic Law

76. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve and simplify road traffic law.

Mr. Ridley: On 31 January 1985, I announced the setting up of a review body under the chairmanship of Dr. Peter North to examine a number of the most important and pressing issues of our road traffic law. These include the struture of offences relating to reckless and careless driving; the penalty points system and the possibility of new types of penalty for traffic offences. The review body is currently studying responses to the consultation document issued in July, a copy of which is in the Library.

Aviation Security

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will comment on the work that has been undertaken to improve international standards of aviation security in view of the security incidents that occurred during 1985.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have been very much encouraged by the work of the International Civil Aviation Organisation in revising international standards of aviation security. This work was set in hand at the ICAO council meeting which I attended on 27 June, following the TWA hijacking and other recent attacks on civil aviation. On 19 December the ICAO adopted a revised annex 17 to the Chicago convention containing more rigorous international standards and improved recommended practices for aviation security. I have written to the secretary general of the ICAO and the president of the ICAO council to congratulate them on having carried out this work at a speed that few other international organisations have ever matched.

Roads (Investment)

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Transport what the figure of £1·50 for every £1 spent given in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper volume II, page 127, as being the estimated total user and safety benefit, for new investmen in trunk roads, produces as an annual rate of return; and how this is calculated.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Broadly equivalent to an internal rate of return of 12 per cent. The ratio of £1·50 benefit for every £1 spent is calculated by comparing the discounted value of the benefits from estimated savings in travel time, vehicle operating costs and accidents of schemes due to be completed in the period 1985-86 to 1988-89 with their discounted capital costs, using the Department's standard COBA cost benefit techniques. The discount rate used is 7 per cent. in real terms. The internal rate of return is the discount rate which equates the value of the benefits with the costs.

Stansted Airport

Mr. Haselhurst asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the British Airports Authority about disposal of their landholdings in the safeguarded area around Stansted airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The BAA has submitted proposals for a reduction in the area of safeguarded land at Stansted and I am considering these with my ministerial colleagues in the Department of the Environment. I expect to announce details of the new safeguarded area shortly; BAA will then dispose of land outside that area.

Mr. Haselhurst asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the proposals he has received from British Rail concerning a rail link to Stansted airport and on progress with their considerations.

Mr. David Mitchell: The British Railways Board submitted an investment proposal last November for a double track spur from the Liverpool street-Cambridge line to a new station to be constructed beneath the new airport terminal building. The board believes such a link would be financially justified. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I are now considering the proposal and will reach a decision as soon as possible.

Drink-Drive Campaigns

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his objectives for Christmas drink and drive campaigns; and if he will print a table showing the change in the number of accidents achieved during the 1983 and 1984 campaigns, and the best available statistical estimates of the outcome of the 1985 campaign.

Mr. Ridley: The purpose of the Department's publicity campaigns has been to draw the attention of the public to the law on drinking and driving.

Information on casualties and breath tests and positive results during the period of the 1983 and 1984 campaigns is contained in the review section of "Road Accidents Great Britain" for those years, copies of which are in the Library. It is too early to make any statistical assessment of the 1985 campaign.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Ridley: Staff numbers and costs for the information division of my Department are available only for the last four years. Before that, organisational and costing arrangements reflected a gradual change from the point where all information functions were performed within the information directorate of the Department of the Environment. From 1982-83, my Department's information staff and operating costs were separately identifiable, although some continued to provide a common service to the Department of the Environment and the Department of Transport. The scale of information division work also grew from 1983 as a result of the transfer of marine, aviation and other policy responsibilities from the Department of Trade to my Department.

The table shows, for the four most recent years, the numbers and costs of the specialist and support staff in my Department's information division.

	Staff in Post (at 1 January)	Cost at outturn prices (£'000)
1982-83	18	409
1983-84	28	559
1984-85	36	760
1985-86	35	758

Public Service Vehicles

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of vehicles that failed the annual public service vehicle test in 1984-85, in Wales, by operator group.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 55]: The number of vehicles which failed the test at the first attempt is as follows:

1984-85 Wales

Operator	Total number of tests	Number of failures	Failure rate per cent.
NBC	1,271	355	27·9
Local authority	511	193	37·8

	Number of failures	Failure rate per cent.
NBC	89	7·0
Local authority	42	8·2
Private	768	28·8

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of vehicles that failed the annual public service vehicle test in 1984-85, in Great Britain, by operator group.

1984-85 Great Britain

Operator	Total number of tests	Number of failures	Failure rate per cent.
NBC	11,471	4,167	36·3

Helicopter Rescue Service (Stornoway)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will initiate consultations about the possibility of locating a helicoper rescue service in Stornoway to cover the northern and western Highlands and Islands and the Minch; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: Following the loss of th Bon Ami I am considering whether the United Kingdom search and rescue committee should initiate consultations about the possibility of locating a helicopter rescue service in Stornoway.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the economic impact on the British pharmaceutical industry of the Government's restriction on the range of drugs permissible for prescription by general practitioners.

Mr. Hayhoe: Inevitably the diversion of expenditure on medicines to meet other National Health Service needs has had an impact on some pharmaceutical companies, varying according to the circumstances of the company.

However, the savings of £75 million expected from the selected list in 1985-86 amount to about 6 per cent. of the National Health Service drugs bill, and since the list was introduced a number of companies have announced substantial further investments in the United Kingdom. We believe that the United Kingdom pharmaceutical industry continues to have a bright future.

Skoal Bandits

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the statistical health hazards of (a) using Skoal Bandits, (b) using cigars and (c) using pipe tobaccos.

Mr. Whitney: Prolonged use of moist tobacco snuff in the mouth has been associated with an increased risk of oral cancer of a similar magnitude to that seen in pipe and cigar smokers and comparable effects are anticipated with the recently introduced Skoal Bandits.

In reviewing the evidence regarding the health hazards of cigar and pipe smoking, the American Surgeon General's report of 1979 concluded that although the overall risk is small relative to the enourmous risk of smoking cigarettes, the risks of the less common, but very serious cancers of the mouth and larynx, are similar to those of cigarette smokers, namely 20-30 times greater than those of non-smokers.

AIDS

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice his Department is giving to health authorities about methods of dealing with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: The following guidance has been issued:

1. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS)—Interim Guidelines: Advisory Committee on Dangerous pathogens—HC(85)1: January 1985.
2. Health Service Management leaflet: AIDS—Important New Advice for Blood Donors—HC(85)3: January 1985.
3. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS): Screening Test for Blood Donations: February 1985.
4. AIDS Booklet 1: General Information for Doctors—CMO(85)1: May 1985.
5. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS): Facilities for testing outside the Blood Transfusion Service—July 1985.
6. Infection Control Guidelines for the Community Care of AIDS patients and other HTLVIII positive clients—July 1985.
7. Evaluation of Screening Test Kits for HTLVIII antikbody—August 1985.
8. Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS): HTLVIII Antibody Testing outside the National Blood Transfusion Service (NBTS). CMO(85)11: September 1985.
9. AIDS leaflet for Blood Donors—September 1985.
10. AIDS Booklet 2: Information for Doctors concerning the Introduction of the HTLVIII Antibody Test—CMO(85)12: October 1985.
11. HTLVIII Infection in laboratory workers—DCMO(85)2: December 1985.
12. Children at School and problems related to AIDS—CMO(86)1: January 1986.
13. HTLVIII Antibody Testing of Blood Donations outside the National Blood Transfusion Service (NBTS)—DA(86)1: January 1986.

Other advice is in an advanced stage of preparation and will be issued shortly.

Maternity Grant

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current value of the maternity grant in real terms compared with its value in 1969.

Mr. Major: On the basis of the movement of the retail prices index, the current value of the maternity grant is £4·60 compared with its value in November 1969.

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to increase the annual inspection charges for private homes for the handicapped, the elderly and the mentally ill; whether he will consider providing for more than one inspection each year to be covered by the new registration fee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Consultation is at present taking place on recommendations to increase the fees payable for the registration and inspection of residential care homes and nursing homes but there is no proposal to increase the minimum frequency of inspections for those homes. Copies of the consultative documents have been placed in the Library.

Artificial Limb and Appliance Service

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he or his Department has received from Hangars plc any correspondence offering to take over administration of the artificial limb and appliance service;

(2) what representations he has received on the prospects for privatisation of the artificial limb and appliance service; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: J. E. Hanger and Co. Ltd. included the proposal in evidence to the working party on the services of artificial limb and appliance centres, a copy of which was sent to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services. Its receipt has been acknowledged.

McColl Report

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) on what date he received the amendments to the McColl report on the artificial limb and appliance service referred to in his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 599;

(2) if he will distinguish in the published version of the McColl report on the artificial limb and appliance service those passages which were the subject of amendment subsequent to its original submission to the Minister.

Mr. Newton: The working party's final amendments were submitted on 8 January. None of the amendments affects a point of substance or any of the working party's conclusions or recommendations, and I see no need to distinguish them.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 20 January, in which areas payments are to be made for severe weather to date this winter.

Mr. Newton: It is for adjudication officers to decide whether a period of exceptionally severe weather has occurred in any local office area. If such a period is declared, payments will be made in accordance with the guidance issued by the Chief Adjudication Officer on 6 December 1985.

Mrs. Gladys Smith

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he will be replying to the letter written to him on 18 September 1985 about Mrs. Gladys Smith, Silverdale nursing home, Egerton Park, Rock Ferry, Birkenhead, and about which a reminder was sent on 22 November 1985.

Mr. Major: I wrote to the hon. Member earlier today.

Speech Therapists

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, now that all entrants are required to be graduates, he will give speech therapists parity with other graduate professions in the National Health Service.

Mr. Whitney: This is a matter for negotiation within the Whitley council. The management side has already undertaken to examine jointly with the staff side the arguments which bear upon the claim for pay parity.

Maternity Expenses

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provisions will be made for the payment of help with maternity expenses to mothers in low income working families between April 1987, when the maternity grant is abolished, and April 1988 when family credit is introduced to ensure that all those who would be entitled to family credit will not lose the right to any help with maternity expenses.

Mr. Newton: The new arrangements for maternity expenses from April 1987 will be broadly consistent with the approach we shall adopt when the full social fund is implemented, as outlined in chapter 4 of the White Paper. Payments will be made to those receiving family income supplement until it is replaced by family credit in April 1988.

Furniture Grants

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide the latest figures available for the number of single payments made for furniture in the course of a year, the average payment made, the total expenditure on furniture grants and a breakdown of the categories of claimants who receive them.

Mr. Major: The latest available information is contained in table 19.2 of the Annual Statistical Inquiry 1983, a copy of which is in the Library. It should be noted that the table relates to single payments made during the 12 months preceding the date of the inquiry to persons still in receipt of supplementary benefit at the time of the inquiry and does not, therefore, record all the single payments made during the year.

Free School Meals

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of schoolchildren who currently receive free school meals who are in families who will receive neither income support nor family credit under the proposals contained in Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton: These will almost all be children who currently receive free school meals under local authority discretionary schemes. Because the latter are individual local schemes and entitlement conditions vary a reliable estimate of how many of the children are in families who will receive neither income support nor family credit is not possible.

Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people currently receive (i) housing benefit and (ii) supplementary benefit broken down into client group and family status categories used in the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security"; and how many receive (i) rent rebate/allowance and (ii) rate rebate broken down into the categories of pensioners, working households with children and working households without children.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Soial Security Regulations

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he proposes any amendment to, or any abolition of, existing social security regulations prior to the passage of the Social Security Bill.

Mr. Newton: Yes; for example, those on various proposed changes which are currently the subject of consultation, and those which will be required for the July 1986 uprating of benefits.

Single Payments and Heating Additions

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what he estimates he will spend on single payments in 1985-86, 1986-87, and 1987-88; and if he will publish a table showing the real value of single payments in these years compared with 1984-85;

(2) what he estimates he will spend on heating additions in the years 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88; and if he will publish a table showing the real value of heating additions in these years compared with 1984-85.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Single Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many single payments are made for sums of less than £30.

Mr. Major: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Family Credit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of children for whom family credit will be paid on the assumptions used in Cmnd. 9691; and how many of these children he estimates are of school age.

Mr. Newton: The figures are 870,000 and 610,000, respectively.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will launch an immediate inquiry into available hospital beds and the closure of the casualty unit at Manchester royal infirmary.

Mr. Whitney: These are matters for Central Manchester health authority which is responsible for the management of Manchester royal infirmary. The hon. Member may like to address his question to the chairman of that authority.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why severe disablement allowance is not paid to persons from 29 November 1984 who were born prior to 29 November 1949 but are not yet 50 years of age.

Mr. Newton: For administrative reasons the introduction of severe disablement allowance was made in two stages by age of beneficiary, new claimants aged under 35, and 50 and over, qualified from 29 November 1984; while those aged 35 to 49 qualified from 28 November 1985. Those already drawing a non-contributory invalidity pension were automatically transferred to severe disablement allowance from 29 November 1984, irrespective of their age.

Pharmacists

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has on the difference between the level of services of pharmacists in the National Health Service and outside the service.

Mr. Hayhoe: I do not believe it is meaningful or practicable to compare the pharmacy service in National Health Service hospitals and elsewhere in this way.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what funds are being made available to attract more pharmacists into the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: Proposals for substantial increases in the pay of basic and staff grade pharmacists have been made by the management side of the Pharmaceutical Whitley council, the cost of which, if accepted, will be met out of health authority allocations.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the effect on (i) patient services, (ii) control of drug expenditure and (iii) licensing of pharmacists, of the loss of pharmacists from the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have no information to demonstrate the relationship of staffing levels, staff recruitment or staff loss in the hospital pharmacy service to the three areas listed.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the Pharmaceutical Society and the Pharmaceutical Whitley council on the loss of pharmacists from the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: I received a letter from the president of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain dated 9 October 1985. The letter raised a number of issues, including the staffing of the hospital pharmaceutical service, and I replied to it on 11 January 1986. I have not received, and would not expect to receive, representations from the pharmaceutical Whitley council. The management side of that council made revised proposals on 17 January about the pay of hospital pharmacists designed, amongst other things, to aid recruitment. These proposals are under consideration by the staff side.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will undertake a review of the National Health Service pharmaceutical services.

Mr. Hayhoe: No.

Departmental Local Offices

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will tabulate for each of his offices in Greater London for the years 1980 and 1985 (a) the numbers of staff, (b) persons in receipt of supplementary benefit and (c) the approximate percentage of (b) arising from retirement pensioners and others, respectively.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 17 January 1986, c. 740]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Judicial Process and Prison System

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations have been made by the Government of the Irish Republic since the conclusion of the Anglo-Irish agreement about the judicial process and the prison system in Northern Ireland; and with what effect.

Mr. Tom King: These matters have been discussed in the first three meetings of the intergovernmental Conference. The details are as follows:

(a) The joint statement after the first meeting of the conference on 11 December 1985 recorded that "The Conference agreed to establish a working group of officials to consider the machinery for the further discussion of legal matters, including the administration of justice."

(b) The joint statement issued after the second (special) meeting of the conference on 30 December 1985 indicated that the meeting was mostly concerned with prisons matters but recorded that the Irish Government also "put forward views and proposals designed to give substantial expression to the aim of ensuring public confidence in the administration of justice".

(c) The joint statement issued after the third meeting of the conference on 10 January 1986 recorded that: "British and Irish officials reported to the Conference on ways in which the discussion of legal matters could best be pursued. The British side emphasised the need for an early review of policy aspects of extradition and related matters. The Irish side stressed the importance they attached to measures designed to underline public confidence in the administration of justice. The Conference instructed officials to continue their discussions with a view to a meeting, before the next meeting of the Conference, of a sub-group of the Conference comprising, on the British side, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and the Attorney General and, on the Irish side the Minister for Justice and the Attorney General."

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table giving the amounts in the latest fiscal year of payments made to (a) civilians under the Criminal Injuries Compensation (N.I.), Order 1977, (b) members of the security forces, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, the British Army and the Ulster Defence Regiment under the Criminal Injuries Compensation (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 and (c) compensation payments made under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978.

Mr. Scott: The information for the financial year 1984-85 is as follows:

Payments under the Criminal Injuries (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977
Paid to civilians	4,948,306
Paid to members of the security forces	3,468,510
Payments under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978	235,384

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the latest fiscal year payments made under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1973.

Mr. Scott: No payments are made under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1973. However, during the 1984-85 financial year 613 payments totalling £235,384 were made under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978.

Subventions

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the amount of the direct subvention by the Exchequer to Northern Ireland for the latest financial year; and what are the amounts budgeted for in future periods.

Dr. Boyson: The subvention for 1985-86 is estimated to be £1,573 million. Estimates are not available for future years because a number of the figures which form part of the calculation can only be forecast accurately on an in-year basis.

Security Staff Premium

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the amount of security staff premium paid by the Government in the latest fiscal year.

Mr. Scott: £1,299,640 in 1984-85.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will list the date and place of each meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference held since 15 November 1985 and the Ministers who were present from both Governments at each meeting.

Mr. Tom King: The Intergovernmental Conference has met on three occasions:

11 December 1985 at Stormont Castle
Ministers present
The Right Hon. Tom King MP
Dr. Rhodes Boyson MP
Mr. Nicholas Scott MP
Mr. Peter Barry TD
Mr. Michael Noonan TD
Mr. Liam Kavanagh TD

30 December 1985 in London
Ministers present
The Right Hon. Tom King MP
Mr. Peter Barry TD

10 January 1986 in London
Ministers present
The Right Hon. Tom King MP
Mr. Nicholas Scott MP
Mr. Peter Barry TD
Mr. Michael Noonan TD

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the secretariat described in article 3 of the Anglo-Irish agreement dated 15 November 1985, Cmnd. 9657, has been set up; and how many members of the secretariat have been or will be provided by each Government.

Mr. Tom King: A secretariat has been established under Article 3. The United Kingdom side of the Secretariat, including support staff, is likely to total about 6; the number of staff on the Irish side is likely to be of the same order but this is a matter for the Irish Government.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals have been put forward by the Irish Government in accordance with article 2(b) of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: Article 2(b) states the general principle that the Irish Government may put forward views and proposals on matters relating to Northern Ireland within the field of activity of the Intergovernmental Conference in so far as those matters are not the responsibility of a devolved administration in Northern Ireland. Any views or proposals put at the meetings of the conference therefore fall within the terms of this article. The joint statements, issued after each of the three meetings of the conference, set out the matters that were raised. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which are the matters referred to in article 4(a) of the Anglo-Irish agreement which it is the policy of Her Majesty's Government should be devolved within Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: The matters referred to in article 4(a) of the agreement are those listed in article 2. The powers immediately available for devolution to a Northern Ireland administration are those which are classified as "transferred" by the Northern Ireland Constitution Act 1973. Essentially, they comprise economic and social matters administered by the Northern Ireland Departments.

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals have been put forward by the Irish Government in accordance with article 4*(c)* of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: None.

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what views and proposals have been put forward by the Irish Government in accordance with article 5*(c)* of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: Article 5*(c)* provides that if it should prove impossible to achieve and sustain devolution on a basis which secures widespread acceptance in Northern Ireland, the conference shall be a framework within which the Irish Government may, where the interests of the minority community are significantly or especially affected, put forward views on proposals for major legislation and on major policy issues, which are within the purview of the Northern Ireland Departments and which remain the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. As the joint statements record, no views on proposals have yet been put forward in accordance with this article in the conference.

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what views and proposals have been put forward by the Irish Government in accordance with article 6 of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: The Irish Government have offered views on the consultative paper published in 1985 on the police complaints procedure in Northern Ireland, including the role of the Police Complaints Board. We undertook to consider these together with the views of the other respondents to the consultative paper before decisions were made. While I can confirm that the Irish Government have as yet made no proposals in connection with the composition of the bodies, referred to in article 6, matters relating to the appointments of particular individuals will be treated in confidence.

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what programme of special measures in Northern Ireland has been agreed in accordance with article 7(c) of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: At its meeting on 11 December 1985 the Intergovernmental Conference discussed the development of a programme of measures to improve relations between the security forces and the minority community in Northern Ireland. It was informed by the Chief Constable of measures already instituted to improve relations between the security forces and the minority community. It was also informed of the various steps currently under consideration by the Chief Constable. It was recognised that the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the armed forces must not only discharge their duties even-handedly and with equal respect for the unionist and nationalist identities and traditions, but be seen by both communities to be doing so. A joint statement on the meeting of 11 December has been placed in the Library.

Departmental Manpower

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants are employed in the Northern Ireland Office, excluding Northern Ireland Departments; and how many of the 30 most senior civil servants in the Northern Ireland Office were born in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: On 1 January 1986 there were 1,238 civil servants employed in the Northern Ireland Office. (This figure relates to those in administrative grades and excludes, for example, prison officers.)

Of the 28 administrative grade officers at grade 5 level and above, nine were born in Northern Ireland.

Motor Vehicles (Incidents)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report, the number of persons proceeded against since 1982 for offences relating to the taking of motor vehicles without their owners' consent.

Mr. Scott: The number of persons proceeded against for offences relating to the taking of motor vehicles without the owner's consent was 740 in 1982, 640 in 1983 and 645 in 1984. The 1985 figures are not yet available.

Armagh Prison (Strip Searches)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many strip searches were made of female prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Armagh, in December; if he will give the number of persons involved and the number of times each person was searched; whether any prison contraband, smuggled item or illegal correspondence was discovered in any search, indicating which items; in how many cases prisoners refused to be searched and had to be restrained while the search was being conducted; and if he will indicate the reasons for the search, namely, making an appearance at Armagh courthouse on remand, attending trial, inter-prison visit or other reasons.

Mr. Scott: During December 1985 a total of 34 searches were carried out on 21 prisoners; 10 prisoners were searched once, 10 were searched twice, and one prisoner was searched on four occasions. No prohibited article was found during these searches, and no prisoner refused to be searched. Searches were carried out in the following circumstances:

	Number
First admission on remand or whilst awaiting trial	11
First Admission on sentence or on final discharge	4
Attending Armagh remand court	1
Attending other remand courts	1
Attending trial	3
Bail Court appearance	10
Going on, or returning from, home leave	4
TOTAL	34

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Tom King: The number of staff in information officer grades employed in the information service of the Northern Ireland Office on 1 January in the past five years is as follows:

	Northern Ireland Office (London)	Northern Ireland Office (Belfast) and Northern Ireland Departments
1985	4	14
1984	4	15
1983	3	15
1982	4	15
1981	5	15

These officers were supported by the following number of staff in the administrative, clerical and other grades:

	Northern Ireland Office (London)	Northern Ireland Office (Belfast) and Northern Ireland Departments
1985	3	16
1984	3	16
1983	4	16
1982	4	17
1981	4	19

The actual expenditure on general promotional activities in the last five financial years by the part of the information service which covers the Northern Ireland Office (Belfast) and Northern Ireland Departments was as follows:

1984-85	130,256
1983-84	124,257
1982-83	140,594
1981-82	129,349
1980-81	181,931

Information about expenditure by members of the information service in London has not been kept separately and could be extracted only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Onslow asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list the items that are known to have been stolen from the precincts of the Palace of Westminster during each of the last three years.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Universities (Science Courses)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university applications for courses in physics have been received by the Universities Central Council on Admissions by the relevant closing date in December of each year since 1979.

Mr. Walden: Information on university applicants received by 15 December each year is not readily available. However, total applicants for admission to a university through UCCA where physics was the preferred subject of study are as follows:

Academic year of entry	*All applications	Applications by previous 1 December
1979	2,878	†
1980	3,188	†
1981	3,406	†
1982	3,899	†
1983	3,717	†
1984	3,520	†
1985	3,117	2,290
1986	—	1,989

* Excluding mathematics and physics and other combinations.
† Not readily available.

Polytechnics (Funding)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will give consideration to changing the funding of polytechnics from local education authorities to central Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: No.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average length of tenure of civil servants posted to the University Grants Committee over the last 10 years.

Sir Keith Joseph: Four years. This figure takes into account all staff with less than 10 years' service with the University Grants Committee.

Schools (Lunchtime Supervision)

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from local authorities to the effect that the cost of 30 per cent. of a scheme of lunchtime supervision under the Education (Amendment) Bill will incur grant penalties or clawback.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations. In the answer my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr.

Greenway) on 8 November 1985 at column 11, an undertaking was given that the Government would view sympathetically any applications for disregards for such expenditure for the purposes of calculating the hold-back of block grant in respect of 1985-86.

School Curricula

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the objectives of his policy on school curricula; how he is monitoring its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government's policies are set out in the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469); their principal aims are to raise standards at all levels of ability and to secure the best possible return from the resources which are made available. The arrangements for monitoring the effectiveness of these policies are described in chapter 13 of the White Paper.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Customs and Excise

Mr. Roger King asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any changes are proposed in the cash limit for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIII, vote 5 will be increased by £1,750,000 from £355,082,000 to £356,832,000 to cover the cost of increased operations in particular with regard to the prevention of drug smuggling, a shortfall in fees received from traders for out-of-hours Customs attendance, and payments made in lieu of interest, on payments to certain traders of overpaid VAT following legal decisions on direct selling. Of this increase, £1,050,000 is classified as public expenditure. This will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planning total of public expenditure.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid Programme (Interest Burden)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications of the increased burden of interest repayments borne by recipient countries for Her Majesty's Government's future aid programme.

Mr. Raison: Bilateral aid to countries with an income per head of less than $790 in 1983 is provided on grant terms. Aid loans to other countries are at rates of interest well below commercial rates of interest. Twenty one of the poorest countries have already had their past aid debt forgiven under our retrospective terms adjustment policy.

The burden of debt servicing is one factor taken into account in setting the level of our bilateral aid and its forms to particular countries. Many developing countries with debt problems need to adapt their economic policies in order to restore growth and improve their balance of payments position. An important aspect of our aid policy, particularly in Africa, is to support those countries pursuing adjustment and investment programmes agreed with the IMF and the World Bank.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Funerals

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward proposals for price control of funerals.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Lloyd's (Inquiry)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure a wide spread of interest on the inquiry into Lloyd's and appoint representatives of trade unions and consumers.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 281]: I am, of course, carefully considering the composition of the inquiry. I hope to announce its full membership shortly.

WALES

Moorland

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average annual loss of moorland to agricultural or other development in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Moorland is not identified separately from rough grazing in the agricultural census. The reduction in the area of rough grazing between 1975 and 1985 has averaged 7,300 hectares per year.

Bracken

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the average annual loss of agricultural land due to the encroachment of bracken in Wales;

(2) what is the estimated area of land covered by bracken in Wales; and what is the annual rate of encroachment.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Estimates put forward by research organisations suggest that 118,000 hectares in Wales are subject to bracken infestation and that the annual rate of encroachment is between 1 per cent. and 3 per cent.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales to what extent bracken processing for use as fuel is carried out in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: There is no known commercial processing of bracken for use as a fuel taking place in Wales at the present time.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the extent of application of the chemical asulox, used in the treatment of bracken infestation, in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: There is no information available on the use of asulox on bracken in Wales.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Official Secrets Act (Immunity)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General on what basis he has been asked to authorise a grant of immunity to a civil servant from prosecution under the Official Secrets Act as part of inquiries into the leak of the Solicitor-General's letter to the former Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine).

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to what my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said to the House on this matter, with my agreement, in the statement which she made on 23 January.

SCOTLAND

Sheriff of Kilmarnock

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of the reprimand delivered by the Lord Justice Clerk to the Sheriff of Kilmarnock, Mr. David Smith, in relation to the case of a dismissed coalminer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I take it that the hon. Member's question refers to the opinion of the Lord Justice Clerk delivered on 5 November 1985 in relation to the bills of suspension submitted by 14 miners. I have arranged for a copy of the relevant opinions to be placed in the Library.

Drink-driving Offences

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many charges for drunken driving were brought in Scotland in the three weeks commencing 23 December 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: I regret that this information is not available. Monthly returns from police forces for December 1985 and January 1986 are not yet complete; and these do not make it possible to identify the figures for any particular week.

Agriculture Studentships

Mr. Michael Forsyth the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will extend the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland agriculture studentships to include aquaculture training.

Mr. John Mackay: No. The Natural Environment Research Council is responsible for postgraduate training in fisheries and freshwater and marine biology.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland which departments and which universities are currently included in the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland agriculture studentships scheme.

Mr. John MacKay: Awards under the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries postgraduate agricultural studentship scheme are made to students ordinarily resident in Scotland wishing to study subjects within the fields specified in the rules for the scheme. They are tenable at any university at which the student is accepted for postgraduate studies. Studentships are currently held at the following universities: Glasgow (6), Aberdeen (4), Edinburgh (2), Cambridge (2), Newcastle (1), Strathclyde (1), University college, Aberystwyth (1).

Bridge of Allan (Flood Prevention)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give capital consent for Stirling district council to meet its obligations as riparian owner for remedial works to be carried out by the Central regional council to prevent further flooding in Bridge of Allan.

Mr. Ancram: Local authorities are given consent to incur capital expenditure in the form of block consents and have full discretion in using them. They do not require my right hon. and learned Friend's consent to incur expenditure on individual projects. It is therefore for Stirling district council to determine its own expenditure priorities.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, with reference to the answer of 23 July 1985, Official Report, columns 465-6, in each of the five years 1979 to 1983, how many firearms that were stolen of each type were subsequently found to have been used in crimes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This information is not recorded by chief officers of police. While there is little concrete evidence to show how criminals obtain their weapons, between 2,500 and 3,000 firearms annually were reported stolen since 1979 and one must accept that a number of these will subsequently have been used in further crimes.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards establishing a new purpose-built unit to replace the C1 unit at Holloway prison.

Mr. Mellor: A site has been found and work is now going ahead on planning the new accommodation. As recommended by the project committee, advice is being sought from the Department of Health and Social Security.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing improvements in the C1 unit at Holloway prison.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Police Research and Telecommunications

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his reply of 20 December, Official Report, columns 340-1, he will give details of the projects covered by the headings "Police Research and Telecommunications".

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Police Complaints Authority

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints were made to the Police Complaints Authority in 1985; and with what result.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This is a matter for the Police Complaints Authority, which is an independent body established under the provisions of part IX of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. The information will be included in the authority's report for 1985. The report will be laid before Parliament and published.

Theft Act

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been convicted of robbery, contrary to section 8(1) of the Theft Act 1968, since that section was enacted; and how many of those persons were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales"—in table 5.8 of the issue for 1984 (Cmnd. 9621) for persons found guilty and tables 2.4 and 2.5 of the supplementary tables 1984, volume 2, for sentences of life imprisonment and custody for life respectively under offence classification 34. Fifty four thousand five hundred and eighty persons were found guilty of robbery from 1 January 1969 to 31 December 1984; of whom 17 received a sentence of life imprisonment or custody for life. Corresponding information for 1985 is not yet available.

Human Rights and the Police

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any use is made in the training of police officers of the manual "Human Rights and the Police" published by the Directorate of Human Rights in Strasbourg; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This publication is one of many available to police trainers and students in the general field of human rights, an important subject at all levels of training.

Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will arrange for Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha to be deported on the grounds that his continued presence in the United Kingdom is not conducive to the public good; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the reasons why Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha, a person required to leave the United Kingdom following the Libyan embassy siege, has now been re-admitted to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Mr. Ben Rabha was one of the 30 occupants of the Libyan people's bureau at the time of the shooting of WPC Fletcher on 17 April 1984. He was not a diplomat, but a locally engaged member of staff employed as a film technician. Following the severance of diplomatic relations with Libya and the lifting of the siege of the bureau, he was escorted along with other members of the bureau to Heathrow and embarked for Tripoli on 27 April 1984.

In September 1984, Mr. Ben Rabha applied in Paris for a visa to enable him to return to the United Kingdom. The application was refused on 15 November 1984 under the immigration rules on the ground that Mr. Ben Rabha's presence in this country would not be conducive to the public good having regard to his former employment at the Libyan people's bureau and the nature of his subsequent departure from the United Kingdom. This decision carried a right of appeal to the independent immigration appellate authorities.

Mr. Ben Rabha exercised his right of appeal, and on 2 September 1985 the appeal was allowed on the ground that, on balance, the strong compassionate circumstances outweighed the case for refusing the application. Mr. Ben Rabha had married a British citizen in 1973, and the couple had been resident in the United Kingdom since 1974. There were five children of the marriage, the youngest having been born in March 1984. There were no grounds in law to challenge the adjudicator's determination and a visa was therefore authorised for Mr. Ben Rabha, who was admitted to the United Kingdom on 30 October 1985 to rejoin his family. He was interviewed by the police on his arrival who intend to bring no charge against him.

Given all these circumstances there is no basis in which I would be justified in starting deportation action against Mr. Ben Rabha.

Libyan Embassy Siege

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in respect of the various Libyan personnel required to leave the United Kingdom following the Libyan embassy siege, any conditions were imposed, then or subsequently, on (i) the circumstances and (ii) the period, within which they could return to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: No specific conditions were imposed, but my right hon. and learned Friend the then Home Secretary made it clear that he would not hesitate to use to the full the powers contained in the Immigration Act 1971, to ensure the exclusion of the Libyan nationals referred to for so long as it was thought necessary other than in exceptional circumstances. That remains the position.

Sunday Trading

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has concerning the extent of the restrictions on Sunday trading in Portugal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1986, c. 220]: I understand that shops in Portugal may open on any day of the week between 6 am and midnight, subject to local authority approval. Some major supermarkets and shopping complexes open on Sundays but the majority of shops are closed.

EMPLOYMENT

Farm Workers (Accidents)

Mr. Deakins asked the Paymaster General what has been the number of accidents involving farm workers in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Trippier: The number of accidents involving agricultural employees in Great Britain in each of the past 10 years is shown in the table below:

	Fatal	Non-Fatal
1975	34	5,196
1976	41	5,206
1977	34	4,784

	Fatal	Non-Fatal
1978	25	4,529
1979	34	4,024
1980	25	4,223
1981	31	*7,799
1982	27	*7,118
1983	28	*
1984	27	*

* Not available.
† The Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1980 came into force on 1 January 1981. The non-fatal accident figures for 1981 and 1982 are not comparable with those from previous years.

Labour Statistics

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General what discussion he intends to have with representatives of trade union organisations and the Commission for Racial Equality about monitoring statistics and information relating to ethnic minority unemployment.

Mr. Alan Clark: As announced in my reply to the hon. Member for Norwood (Mr. Fraser) on 13 December 1985 at column 799, the Department of Employment was to undertake pilot tests in Stockton, Thornton Heath and Toxteth, to assess the feasibility of collecting ethnic minority unemployment statistics through the unemployment benefit service.

These tests were completed on 17 January 1986 and the Department is currently assessing their outcome. The Commission for Racial Equality and departmental trade union representatives will be invited to comment on the pilot tests as part of that assessment.

Unemployment Benefit (Elected Register)

Mr. Cohen asked the Paymaster General whether the electoral register is used in conjuction with the adminstration of unemployment benefit; and whether there are any plans to use it in that respect when it is available in machine readable form.

Mr. Alan Clark: The electoral register is not used in conjuction with the administration of unemployment benefit and there are no plans to use it in that respect in the future.

Ault and Wiborg Factory

Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to the answer of 11 December 1985, Official Report, column 641, the Health and Safety Executive is now satisfied with the safety standards in force at the Ault and Wiborg paint factory in Perivale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The safety modifications required by the Health and Safety Executive have now been completed. Responsibility for ensuring the adequacy of safety standards at the factory lies with the company. The executive will continue to enforce health and safety legislation at the factory in the normal way.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Mobbing and Rioting

Mr. Maclennan asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland when he expects to receive the report of the Scottish Law Commission on mobbing and rioting.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The Scottish Law Commission has consulted widely on this subject and I expect to hear from it in the fairly near future what action it proposes to take as a result of that consultation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on developments arising from his efforts to secure widespread acceptance of the Anglo-Irish agreement among those people of Northern Ireland who wish for no change of status of the Province.

Mr. Tom King: As the Government have repeatedly made clear, the Anglo-Irish agreement has not effected any change in Northern Ireland's constitutional status as part of the United Kingdom. I accept, however, that there is widespread misunderstanding within the Province about both the terms and the operation of the agreement. I will pay particular attention over the coming months to remedying this, and I believe that longer experience of the practical workings of the Intergovernmental Conference will lead to a much wider appreciation of the true nature and advantages of the agreement.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve are currently estimated to be Catholics; what proportion this represents of the manpower of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve separately; and how these proportions compare with the recruitment of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve in the latest calendar year.

Mr. Scott: The religious denominations of members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and its Reserve have not been recorded since 1970. Nevertheless, I understand that about one tenth of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the full-time Reserve are Roman Catholic and that around one tenth of those recruited to the Royal Ulster Constabulary and to the full-time Reserve in 1985 were Roman Catholic. The Royal Ulster Constabulary will continue its efforts to attract suitability qualified recruits from all parts of the community.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the manpower strength of the Royal Ulster Constabulary in Northern Ireland on 1 January, giving details of the number of operatives at that time for the following categories: Royal Ulster Constabulary full-time, Royal Ulster Constabulary full-time Reserve and Royal Ulster Constabulary part-time Reserve.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

	Number
Royal Ulster Constabulary	8,259
Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve (full-time)	2,755
Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve (part-time)	1,753
TOTAL	12,767

TRANSPORT

London Country Bus Services Ltd

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce a decision on the future structure of London Country Bus Services Ltd.

Mr. David Mitchell: I am considering the matter in consultation with the board of the National Bus Company and an announcement will be made as soon as final decisions have been reached.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from London Regional Transport about the adequacy of the resources it receives from his Department.

Mr. David Mitchell: None. The resources provided by my Department to London Regional Transport have matched its needs given its notable success in cutting costs while maintaining services and increasing investment.

Motorways

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport what new procedures will be adopted from April 1986 for obtaining the information on the maintenance of motorways currently obtained from the metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Ridley: On some lengths of motorway we have appointed consultants or district councils to manage parts of the motorway network who will be required to operate maintenance management systems and to provide information in the same way as our existing agents. On other lengths existing agent authorities will be extending their present maintenance activities into the metropolitan areas, and will provide the information.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many disclosures of names and addresses took place from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre last year; for what purpose those disclosures took place; and which organisations received those names and addresses.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In 1985 there were about 6½ million disclosures of names and addresses from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre. About 5½ million of these disclosures were from the vehicles register and about 1 million from the drivers' register. As far as the vehicles register is concerned the main information was supplied for use in connection with the investigation of an offence to the police, local authorities and other enforcement agencies. In a small proportion of cases information was supplied to those who showed "reasonable cause" for their inquiry as required by regulations and who paid the prescribed fee. Information was also supplied from the vehicle register to vehicle manufacturers for the purpose of safety related recalls. Release of information from the drivers' register only occurs for purposes directly related to driver licensing, road safety and enforcement. This is supplied in the main to the police with a small proportion to other Government Departments and statutory licensing authorities.

Electoral Register

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether the electoral register is currently used in conjunction with the information held at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre in Swansea; and whether there are any plans to use it in that respect when it is available in machine readable form.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The electoral register is not currently used in conjunction with the information held at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre and there are no plans to do so.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the fatal and reported accident rates for lit and unlit sections of the M1 motorway between London and Wakefield from 1979 annually.

Mr. Ridley: The information is as follows:

Accident rates per mile: M1 London-Wakefield (junctions 1-40): by severity, daylight/dark and lighting: 1982-84.

	1982	1983	1984
Daylight lit

All accidents	4·33	3·94	4·76

All accidents	2·05	1·91	1·63
Darkness lit
Fatal	0·09	0·04	0·11
All accidents	2·17	1·60	2·01

All accidents	0·94	0·93	1·00
All condition lit
Fatal	0·22	0·12	0·29
All accidents	6·50	5·54	6·77
All condition unlit
Fatal	0·14	0·14	0·09
All accidents	2·99	2·84	2·63
All hours, all conditions	4·21	3·82	4·21

I shall make the information for the years 1979-81 available to the right hon. Gentleman very shortly. Data for 1985 are not yet available.

M1 (Lighting)

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will identify those junctions on the M1 motorway which are unlit.

Mr. Ridley: Junctions 15, 18, 19, 20, 22, 23, and 27 to 47 inclusive on the M1 motorway are unlit.

Junctions 15 and 18 are planned to be fully lit later this year.

M25 (Signs)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, now that the M25 is complete, he will ensure that new signs are erected and old ones removed so as to avoid the A423 at Maidenhead Thicket.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Signs indicating A423 A404 as a lorry route between M4 and M40 will be removed shortly. I expect those travelling between points south of London and Oxford generally to use M25 and M40.

I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Thorney Bypass

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement in respect of the progress of plans for the proposed Thorney bypass; and when he expects to publish the trunk road order.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A preferred route was announced in 1981, but this is being reviewed to see whether a more economic solution is available. I cannot say when draft orders might be published.

Eye Bypass

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he received the inspector's report in respect of Eye bypass; when he expects to make an announcement as to the result of the public inquiry; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment received the inspector's report in September 1985. Complex issues were raised at the public inquiries including a proposal for an alternative route. Consideration of these issues is necessarily taking some time but I hope that an announcement will not be long delayed.

Car Bumpers (Height)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in introducing a standard height for car bumpers; and whether any proposals for standardisation are being considered by the European Economic Community.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There is no generally accepted standard for bumpers on cars sold in Europe, but in practice most car bumpers are around 17 to 18 inches in height from the ground. Bumper height and other characteristics are being considered by the appropriate technical committee of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe in the context of work to make the exterior fittings of vehicles less aggressive to pedestrians.

Manchester-Blackpool Railway

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Transport, following the announcement of 17 January for the Manchester to Blackpool rail route, when the contracts will go out to tender; how many new Sprinter trains will be purchased; and what expenditure is involved in the improvement of this service.

Mr. David Mitchell: The new Sprinter diesel multiple units will be part of a wider programme for introducing new rolling stock in the north-west. The other questions are matters for British Rail.

Channel Fixed Link

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate has been made of the increased traffic to be generated at Waterloo station on the opening of the Channel fixed link;

(2) what share of the national traffic to be generated from the Channel fixed link he expects to pass through Waterloo station.

Mr. David Mitchell: Forecasts of this traffic are for the Channel Tunnel Group and British Rail.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what planning procedures will be followed by the Government for the provision of new facilities at Waterloo Station to accommodate new traffic generated by a Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: Powers for British Rail to carry out works and acquire any land will be sought in the hybrid Bill. British Rail will be consulting the local authorities concerned. Bodies and persons whose interests are directly affected may petition and have their cases heard by the Select Committee.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will call in for public inquiry the direct and indirect effects of the Channel fixed link on Waterloo station.

Mr. David Mitchell: No.

PRIME MINISTER

Child Nutrition

Dr. Marek asked the Prime Minister what recent studies Her Majesty's Government have made or have available to them on children's diet (a) at home and (b) at school; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys undertook a dietary survey of school children in 1983 which examined dietary intake at home and at school. Analyses of the data collected in the survey are continuing.

Westland plc

Dr. Gilbert asked the Prime Minister if the inquiry in connection with the leaks of the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence has now been completed.

The Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the statement that I made to the House on 23 January at columns 449-460.

DEFENCE

US Bases (Civilian Staff)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are employed at bases in Britain where United States service men are stationed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Approximately 4,000 United Kingdom Civil Service posts exist at those facilities in the United Kingdom made available for use by the United States forces. Statistics for the employment of United States civilians and United Kingdom civilians other than civil servants are not held centrally, but overall the United States bases make a considerable contribution to employment in the areas in which they are located.

US Service Families

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to the number of American service men's families living in the United Kingdom away from their bases; and if he wil make a statement.

Mr. Lee: There are currently about 26,000 dependants of United States service men living in the United Kingdom. It is estimated that about 55 per cent. of families live away from the bases.

Boarding School Allowances

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total and per capita Government expenditure on boarding school allowances for children of armed forces personnel, the number of children covered, and the proportion of children in such schools with parents stationed permanently in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lee: For the total expenditure on boarding school allowance for children of armed forces personnel and the proportion of those in receipt of the allowance who are currently serving in the United Kingdom I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer which I gave him on 26 June 1985 at column 435. Current payments cover some 21,500 children The average annual payment in 1984-85 was some £3,600 a child: it is estimated that about 30 per cent. of this amount would have been recovered by the Inland Revenue in tax.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the costs of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve, divided between wages and salaries, other personnel costs, costs of construction and buildings, investment in military equipment and other costs for the latest fiscal year.

Mr. Lee: Estimated costs for the financial year 1985-86 are in the following form:

	£ million
Wages and salaries	39·1
Support costs	3·2
Capital expenditure on equipment	0·6
Total	42·9

The figures for works costs are not readily available.

Armoured Personnel Carriers

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Defence on what basis an order is to be placed on behalf of the Berlin Brigade for armoured personnel carriers with Thyssen Maschinenbau; what suitable alternatives manufactured by United Kingdom firms were considered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: Consideration is being given to the purchase from the Berlin occupation costs budget of Thyssen TM170 hard-skinned troop carrying vehicles to provide protected mobility for the British Brigade in Berlin. The vehicles would be used solely for duties relating to Berlin and would be based there permanently. No orders have been signed. The Berlin occupation costs budget covers the extra costs incurred by the allies through stationing troops in the city and is funded by the Federal German Government. Purchases from it are normaliy made in deutschmarks, from within the German economy, and preference is given to equipment of German manufacture when, as in this case, suitable items are available.

Service Pensions

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will explain the criteria currently being used to decide whether compound interest is paid to some service pensioners who are underpaid and only simple interest is being paid to others.

Mr. Lee: There are no such criteria. Where compensation is paid for loss of interest this is calculated on compound terms.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage error rate found in the systematic check of Royal Navy/Royal Marines ratings pension awards; on what percentage of cases in which an error was found no action has been taken; and what proportion of the total are accounted for by (a) potential errors where an incorrect award will be made when the Royal Naval-Royal Marine rating reaches 55 years of age and (b) cases where the pensioner has died and payment may be due to the estate.

Mr. Lee: The error rate is 2·5 per cent. There are no cases in which an error has been found and where action has not been taken. In 0·16 per cent. of cases checked the error found would have affected the award when the pensioner reached age 55. In 0·03 per cent. of cases checked the pensioner has died and payment will be made to the estate.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what Her Majesty's Government's policy is for correcting all overpayment and underpayment errors discovered on service pension awards.

Mr. Lee: For errors discovered on service pension awards as a result of the current special checks the policy for correcting underpayments and overpayments is for action as follows:

(a) Underpayments. The corrected rate of pension to be brought into issue as soon as possible, arrears due to be calculated and paid, and a compensation payment to be made for notional loss of interest.

(b) Overpayments. The corrected rate of pension to be brought into issue as soon as possible. Overpayments will be regarded as having been accepted in good faith and, unless there is evidence to the contrary, recovery will not be sought.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence, of the total number of errors found in the current check of service pension awards, what proportion were (a) overpayments and (b) underpayments; and what was the average amount of error found in (a) overpayments and (b) underpayments.

Mr. Lee: The overall rate of errors found is 2.4 per cent. Within that rate just under half—45.6 per cent.—of errors have resulted in overpayments and just over half —54.4 per cent.—in underpayments. The average rate of error is £107 per annum for overpayments and £226 per annum for underpayments.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to move from its present location the task of checking for errors on Royal Navy and Royal Marine ratings pension awards.

Mr. Lee: Responsibility for Royal Navy ratings' and Royal Marine other ranks' pensions work is in process of transfer from director general defence accounts Worcester to HMS Centurion, and the remaining task checking for errors forms part of that transfer. From April 1986 responsibility for all Royal Navy and Royal Marine pensions will rest with HMS Centurion.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to process the backlog of errors found but not yet dealt with in Royal Navy and Royal Marine pension awards.

Mr. Lee: There is no backlog in correcting rates of pension in issue. For the cases of underpayment the arrears and associated compensation are currently being calculated and payment will be made shortly.

Light Aircraft (Airspace)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence why the airspace available for private light aircraft has been restricted, particularly in the case of Upper Heyford; and whether he is considering alternative sites for the training of service pilots.

Mr. Lee: The use of United Kingdom airspace is kept under continual review in order to identify measures which may be necessary to maintain standards of safety. In the particular case of Upper Heyford a working group involving representatives of all interested parties recommended the creation of an area access of which would be controlled by a requirement, before entry, to communicate by radio with Upper Heyford air traffic control. Provided this requirement is met there will be no restriction on access to airspace around Upper Heyford. To safeguard the interests of private aviation this arrangement will be subject to review after a one year trial.

There are no plans to identify alternative sites for the training of service pilots.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Lee: As part of the MOD's defence public relations staff, the defence press office currently employs 11 people. Comparable figures for the last 5 years were:

	Number
1981	12
1982	12
1983	11
1984	11
1985	11

On the basis of official capitation rates, the costs of these staff are calculated as follows:

	£K
1981	203
1982	217
1983	212
1984	226
1985	238

Royal Dockyards (Apprentices)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what would the estimated saving be to his Department if apprentice training in Rosyth and Devonport were transferred to private contractors.

Mr. Lee: The training of apprentices in the royal dockyards has always been based on the need to maintain an adequate work force trained in requisite skills, not only for the dockyards themselves but also to some extent for the rest of the department. No change in this arrangement is planned. The estimated savings from contractorisation of the dockyards are based on the assumption of an overall increase in efficiency under commercial management.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average cost of an apprenticeship in the royal dockyards.

Mr. Lee: The average cost of an apprenticeship in the royal dockyards is some £35,000.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of apprenticeship training schemes in Rosyth and Devonport in each of the last three years.

Mr. Lee: The estimated costs are as follows:

	Devonport dockyard £ million	Rosyth dockyard £ million
1983	7·0	4·6
1984	6·8	4·9
1985	6·5	5·5

Helicopters

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there is (i) a requirement or (ii) funding for the purchase of the Blackhawk helicopter in his Department's forward programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No. Our requirements for support helicopters are currently under review.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to military helicopter types being exported by Westland plc when that helicopter was not also part of the inventory of the British services.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

Armament Directors (Meeting)

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the terms of reference and the agenda for the meeting of the national armament directors' meeting called for 29 November 1985.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The national armament directors of France, Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom had been invited by their Defence Ministers to hold a meeting to review progress towards the achievement of the goals set out in the declaration of principles signed in 1978 by the Defence Ministers of the four nations; and to make recommendations as to how they should be pursued in future.

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence when and in what form the invitations were extended to the national armament directors to attend the meeting held on 29 November 1985.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Invitations were issued orally to the national armament directors of France, Germany and Italy by the chief of defence equipment collaboration on 27 and 28 November 1985.

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates on which meetings of the national armament directors of Italy, Germany, France and the United Kingdom or their deputies have been held since 1979; and at which meetings European helicopter collaborative production was discussed in detail.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The national armament directors meet on numerous occasions throughout the year in many fora, including the conference of national armament directors and the independent European programme group and in smaller groupings to discuss many aspects of equipment collaboration, including helicopters as appropriate. Britain's armament director attended 15 such meetings in 1985 when account is taken of those concerned with the European fighter aircraft project. The meeting held in London on 29 November 1985 was however the only recent occasion on which the four armament directors met specifically to discuss helicopters.

Deputies have met 11 times since 1979 in the forum of the four national helicopter steering committee, which is charged with overseeing progress towards implementation of the 1978 declaration of principles. The most recent of these meetings was held in February 1985.

Defence Contracts

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence contracts awarded following international competitive tender since 1979 have been placed overseas; and if he will list those contracts.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The answer cannot be provided without disproportinate cost and effort.

Berlin Brigade

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the total expenditure on the Berlin brigade of the British Army in each of the last five years;

(2) how much the German Government have contributed financially to the budget of the Berlin brigade of the British Army in each of the last five years.

Mr. Stanley: The estimated cost of the defence budget of the Berlin brigade in each of the years in question is as follows:

	(£ million)
1981-82	27
1982-83	38
1983-84	42
1984-85	47
1985-86	49

In accordance with the allied "Declaration of Berlin" of 26 May 1952, local expenditure on supplies and services for all British forces in Berlin is met without charge to United Kingdom funds. Total estimated expenditure in each of the years concerned is as follows:

	(£ million)
1981-82	69·3
1982-83	74·9
1983-84	71·8
1984-85	82·3
1985-86	98·7

Note:
All figures quoted are at the prices and exchange rates applying in each financial year.

Information about the attribution of this expenditure to particular elements is not readily available.

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what conditions are laid down by the German Government on how the money provided by the German Government for expenditure on the Berlin brigade is spent.

Mr. Stanley: The Berlin occupation costs budget is designed to meet the extra costs of stationing allied forces in Berlin. The allies agreed in 1952 that as the occupation costs were a charge on the budget of the Federal Republic they would be fixed after consultation with the appropriate German authorities and at the lowest level consistent with maintaining the security of Berlin and the allied forces located there. The details of these consultations are confidential between the Governments concerned.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government (Tendering Questionnaires)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the incidence of local government tendering questionnaires and contracts containing political items and clauses; if he will list the councils involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department does not have comprehensive information on local authority contracts or tendering questionnaires, but from representations received it would appear that some two dozen or so English local authorities seek non-commercial information from prospective suppliers or contractors. It is estimated that about half a dozen of these authorities indulge in over political discrimination in the award of contracts, and I would hope that such unreasonable action is challenged in the courts soon.

Urban Development Grant

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 778, why his Department treats as commercially confidential applications which have been approved for schemes involving urban development grant for the refurbishment for sale of local authority housing.

Sir George Young: All urban development grant schemes involve private sector undertakings. In common with other Government Departments administering grant regimes, it is my Department's practice not to disclose information which could be sensitive or of advantage to competitors.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing projects for which he has approved urban development grants, since June 1983.

Sir George Young: Lists of all projects approved for urban development grant are regularly placed in the Library of the House; an updated version was placed there two weeks ago.

Procurator Fiscal (Kirkcaldy)

Mr. Gourlay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the additional building in Kirkcaldy was acquired for the use of the procurator fiscal's department; what is the reason for the delay in making use of the building; and when he expects this additional office will become available for the fiscal's staff.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Grant-related Expenditure

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the grant-related expenditure per head of population for Harborough, Harrow, Hambleton and Holderness, respectively.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is as follows for 1986-87:

Grant-related expenditure per head of population

Harborough	38·55
Harrow	439·03
Hambleton	41·57
Holderness	48·04

The figure for Harrow is not comparable with those for the districts, because London boroughs are responsible for a wider range of services than shire districts.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will list the grant-related expenditure per head of population for each of the local authorities comprising the county, together with the city of Leicester.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is as follows for 1986-87:

Grant-related expenditure per head of population

Blaby	40·91
Charnwood	44·60
Harborough	38·55
Hinckley and Bosworth	40·07
Leicester	94·50
Melton	43·16
North West Leicestershire	44·52
Oadby and Wigston	46·29
Rutland	39·09

The grant-related expenditure per head of population for the county of Leicestershire is £404·35.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 10 district authorities in England with the highest grant-related expenditure per head of population and list the grant-related expenditure per capita in each case.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is as follows for 1986-87:

Grant-related expenditure per head of population

Manchester	576·83
Liverpool	525·43
Wolverhampton	499·40
Birmingham	497·71
Oldham	483·25
Bradford	477·30
Salford	473·94
Knowsley	472·29
Sandwell	461·06
Bolton	459·14

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 10 district authorities in England with the lowest grant-related expenditure per head of population and list the grant-related expenditure per capita in each case.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is as follows for 1986-87:

Grant-related expenditure per head

Mid-Bedfordshire	36·48
South Staffordshire	38·45
Harborough	38·55
Rutland	39·09
South Cambridgeshire	39·09
Broadland	39·40
Hart	39·86
South Norfolk	39·87
North Kesteven	39·99
South Northamptonshire	40·03

Bracken (Water Pollution)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the rate of encroachment of bracken on water catchment areas in the United Kingdom and on the problems posed by, and health risks of contamination of, water supplies by chemicals emanating from bracken.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am not aware of any significant encroachment of bracken on water catchment areas in England. There is no evidence to suggest that elements in bracken which could be a health risk are leaching into water supplies.

In other parts of the United Kingdom this is a matter for my right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Dogs (Public Health)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received calling for legislation to control dogs in the interests of public health.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have received some 1,700 representations since the publication in November 1984 of the consultation paper on the future dog licensing arrangements. Many of these have called for measures to control dogs for reasons of public health.

GLC

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to payments for cyclic and special maintenance, for which the Greater London council applied on 22 October 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of Kings Reach, Stamford Wharf, wall and walk, for which the Greater London council applied on 4 April 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of the Rio Cinema, 103-107 Kingsland high street, Hackney, for which the Greater London council applied on 2 May 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 50-52 King street, Southall for which the Greater London council applied on 20 May 1985;

(5) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of Wilton's music hall, Graces Alley, London E1 for which the Greater London council applied on 19 June 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given him on Tuesday 21 January 1986 at column 141.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in each year since 1981-82 the Government has allocated to London boroughs in respect of rate support grant, housing subsidy and housing investment programme allocation at 1981-82 prices.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Empty Property (Rating)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will introduce legislation to restore the full rating of empty industrial and commercial property in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. I see no grounds, whether for London or elsewhere, for revoking current legislation which exempts industrial and warehousing property completely from empty property rates, and prevents local authorities levying more than 50 per cent. of the normal rate on commercial properties.

Urban Programme

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will broaden the criteria for urban programme expenditure to enable direct investment by local authorities in local commercial and community enterprises; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Greater London Enterprise Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give consent to the transfer of the remaining £8 million of the Greater London enterprise board's annual funding from the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer this question shortly.

GLC (Property Disposal)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 29,400 sq ft of light industrial units in Monier road for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 17,950 sq ft of light industrial units in Gladstone terrace for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 21,950 sq ft of light industrial units in Heckford street for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 24,100 sq ft of light industrial units in the New Lyndenburg II centre for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer these questions shortly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sea Bass

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the threat to stocks of sea bass in British waters; what consideration he has given to the introduction of conservation measures, in particular the control of the use of nylon monofilament nets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Over the years a number of representations have been received in my Department from both the angling and commercial fishery interests about the management of the bass fishery. As a result, scientists from my Department have carried out investigations into the state of the bass fishery. An interim report was placed in the House in March 1983, and I hope to be able to present a final report to the House in the spring of this year.

I hope also to be able to present, at the same time, a report on the use of gill nets, including monofilament gill nets. I shall then consider any recommendations resulting from these reports and, in consultation with the fishery interests, decide whether any further conservation measures are required.

Bracken

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what are the favoured means of dealing with the encroachment of bracken on to agricultural land; and if he will make a statement as to the extent of bracken coverage in the United Kingdom and the problems this poses;

(2) if the Government intend pursuing a bracken eradication programme in the near future.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies he is aware of on the health risks posed by the chemical asulox used in the treatment of bracken infestation; and what is the extent of its use in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Fenner: There are a number of products containing asulam cleared for use under the pesticides safety precautions scheme (PSPS) two of which, "Asulox" and "Asulox/Dessipron" tank mix are cleared for use on bracken. Asulam was submitted to a full range of toxicity studies before clearance. I have no information of any subsequent studies concerning possible health risk arising from the treatment of bracken infestation. In the most recent period for which figures are available, 1980-83, asulam was used on a total of some 453,000 hectares in England and Wales for agricultural and horticultural purposes. I have no information on how much of this use was on bracken.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations currently restrict the use of the chemical asulox in the treatment of bracken infestation.

Mrs. Fenner: Two formulations containing asulam have clearance for use on bracken under the pesticides safety precautions scheme (PSPS). There are currently no regulations controlling this use of asulam. However the proposed regulations controlling the sale, supply, storage, use and advertisement of pesticides which are to be made under the Food and Environment Protection Act later this year will apply to asulam.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Gould asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantities of European Economic Community intervention stocks are kept at Dagenham docks; what is the cost of storage; and what is the eventual destination of the stocks.

Mr. Gummer: On the 20 January 1986, the latest date for which information is available, 29,994 tonnes of feedwheat were held in the intervention store at Dagenham docks. As this grain may be sold back on to the Community market or exported to non-member countries its eventual destination is not known.

Storage costs at individual stores are not given on grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Agricultural Wages

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the aggregate amount of wages paid to employed workers in agriculture at the last date for which statistics are available; what were the equivalent amounts 10 and 20 years previously expressed (a) in current terms and (b) in real terms; and what, in each year, that aggregate amount was as a percentage of farming income.

Mrs. Fenner: Information on the estimated annual earnings of hired agricultural workers and the imputed annual earnings of family workers and junior partners for the years requested are given in the following table:

Wages and salaries of agricultural labour—United Kingdom

Agricultural Workers

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of farms in the United Kingdom employ (a) one to five persons, (b) five to 10 persons and (c) over 10 persons; and what are the equivalent figures for Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and each of the standard regions in England.

Mrs. Fenner: This information will take some time to extract and collate. I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Housing Benefit

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current estimated expenditure on housing benefit in 1985-86 and 1986-87, distinguishing between rent and rate payments and certificated and non-certificated benefits; and what is the estimated number of recipients in each category of benefit in each year.

Mr. Major: The information requested is as follows:

Notes: Estimates for 1985-86 are rounded to the nearest £10 million and 10,000 households; those for 1986-87 to the nearest £50 million and 100,000 households.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services at what levels of gross income entitlement to housing benefit will cease for a working single person, childless couple, couple plus one, two, three and four children and lone parent plus one, two, three and four children, assuming average rent and rates, under the proposals in Cmnd. 9691 and in each case at what income levels entitlement ceases at present.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to the reply, 15 January 1986, c. 595]: The gross income levels at which entitlement to housing benefit will cease on the illustrative assumptions used in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691 are as follows:

	Household type	Gross income (£s) current scheme	Gross income (£s) proposed scheme
(i)	Single person	91·85	71·52
(ii)	Childless couple	114·35	98·76

Notes:

1. The following rent and rates levels respectively have been assumed for the various household types: £13.80 and £5.20 for (i) and (ii), £15.40 and £6.20 for (iii) and (vii); £16.50 and £6.30 for (iv), (v), (vi), (viii), (ix) and (x).
2. The current minimum benefit level of 50 pence has been used throughout.
3. The current tax allowances, national insurance rates, and levels of child benefit and one parent benefit, have been used throughout. No account has been taken of possible entitlement to FIS/family credit.
4. The single person has been assumed to be aged over 25.
5. The ages of the children have been assumed to be as follows; under 11 years where only 1 or 2 children; 1 over 11 and 2 under 11 years where 3 children; 2 over 11 and 2 under 11 years where 4 children.
6. It has been assumed in each case that the head of the household only is in work.
7. Other assumptions are based on the illustrative figures used in the Technical Annex to Cmnd. 9691: income support rates as in paragraph 2.4 of the annex; a taper of 60 per cent. for housing benefit in relation to rent and 20 per cent. in relation to rates; and all householders make a minumum contribution of 20 per cent. towards their rates.

Social Workers (Training)

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the legal training received and applied by social workers responsible for overseeing cases of children at risk; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Appropriate training in child care law and practice is clearly essential for social workers, and all qualifying social work in training courses approved by the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work are required to contain such training. The council is engaged in consultations about the present content of social work teaching and the availability of supervised practice in cases of child abuse with a view to establishing the possibilities for improvement in both qualifying and in-service courses. When it comes to applying the law in particular cases, it is for employing local authorities to ensure that legal guidance is available for social workers.

Kidney Transplants

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients in the West Midlands region are presently waiting for a kidney transplant; and how many kidney transplants were carried out in hospitals in the region during the last 12 months.

Mr. Whitney: According to provisional figures from the United Kingdom transplant service, 117 kidney transplant operations were performed during 1985 at the two renal transplant units in the West Midlands region, the Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham, and the North Staffordshire royal infirmary, Stoke-on-Trent. The number of patients who were registered at the end of 1985 as awaiting a kidney transplant at these two centres was 193.

Mortality (South Lincolnshire)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the perinatal and neonatal mortality figures for South Lincolnshire district health authority for each year from 1979 to the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information is given in the table. Both sets of figures, but particularly the neonatal mortality rates, are based on small numbers, and are therefore liable to chance variation from year to year.

Perinatal and neonatal mortality rates for South Lincolnshire health areas 1979-1981

	Perinatal mortality rate*	Neonatal mortality rate†

Bracken

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what investigations or research have been undertaken on the health risks, including any carcinogenic properties of bracken;

(2) if he has any information on studies linking rates of cancer incidence to the contamination of water supplies by chemicals emanating from bracken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I am advised that there is little evidence to link human disease in the United Kingdom with bracken. No research in this field is being undertaken by the Department or by the Medical Research Council which is the main Government-funded body dealing with cancer and is funded from the science vote of the Department of Education and Science.

Drug Abuse (Video)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if his Department's campaign video on drug abuse will be made available without charge to those police forces wishing to use it in police-school liaison activities;

(2) which bodies are to be supplied with free copies of his Department's video on drug abuse; which will be expected to pay; and what charge is to be made.

Mr. Whitney: "Double Take", the video package for young people on drug misuse, was designed primarily for use in schools. A free copy is being offered to every secondary school in England and Wales and to local education authorities and district health education officers. By local agreement these copies could be used for police-school liaison activities. The charge for purchase of the VHS version is £31.

Dogs (Public Health)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has on the number of cases of eye disease amongst children as a result of contact with dog faeces each year and as to how many result in the loss of sight.

Mr. Whitney: Toxocariasis is the main infection which can cause ocular damage as a result of contact with dog faeces. About 50 cases of ocular toxocariasis are reported each year in England and Wales. Information is not held centrally on the medical complications in individual cases which result from this infection.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his statement of 21 January, he will now publish the list of hospitals whose kitchen conditions are such as would render them liable to prosecution but for Crown immunity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Institution of Environmental Health Officers has reported that, in the year to March 1985, 97 hospitals visited were considered by its members to have warranted prosecution under the food hygiene legislation, were it not for Crown immunity. The institution has not been able to provide us with the names of the hospitals concerned.

Medical Practitioners (Declaration of Interest)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social services if he has been approached by the General Medical Council concerning the possible relaxation of the rules relating to declaration of interest by medical practitioners to prospective patients where the practitioner has a financial interest in a private hospital or clinic.

Mr. Hayhoe: No.

Mortality

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest information he has regarding the mortality rates of people according to socio-economic class; and how this compares with the position 10 years ago.

Mr. Whitney: The latest available figures on social class mortality differentials are for the sample of persons in the OPCS longitudinal study, based on their deaths in 1976-81 and their occupations at the time of the 1971 census. Previous figures were from the Registrar General's Decennial Supplement 1970-72, and these were based on deaths in 1970-72, occupations of the deceased from death registrations, and occupations of the population from the 1971 census. The figures are given below but they are not fully comparable because the occupation shown on the death certificates does not necessarily agree with the occupation recorded in the census. The figures are discussed in an article in Population Trends 40, pages 10 to 16.

The table shows the standardised mortality ratios for men aged 15 to 64 from these two sources, taking all men as 100.

Growth Hormone

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effect the availability of the new biosynthetic growth hormone will have on treatment in the National Health Service of children suffering from growth hormone deficiency.

Mr. Whitney: All those interested in the treatment of growth hormone deficiency in children will share my relief that an alternative to human growth hormone has become available so soon. The availability of the new product will make treatment more flexible and convenient in that it can now be provided in any hospital or by any general practitioner for any child appropriately diagnosed by a specialist medical practitioner as requiring treatment for growth hormone deficiency. I know that the comparatively high cost of biosynthetic growth hormone has led to suggestions that treatment will be curtailed. I have no reason to suppose that this will be the case, particularly as those costs will now be spread over the Health Service as a whole rather than falling upon a few health authorities.

Statistics

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those statistics which were collected by or for his Department on health and social services matters which are no longer collected as a result of Rayner exercises in Government Departments, health authorities or family practitioners' committees.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 603]: The Department keeps the content of statistical returns under continuous review and always seeks to end collection of statistics no longer necessary. Statistical returns on health and personal social services whose collection ceased specifically as a result of the report of the DHSS study team in the review of government statistical services are shown in the table. No central data collection has ceased as a result of other Rayner-type efficiency reviews in this field.

A number of recommendations on health statistics in the DHSS study team's report were overtaken by the reports of the health services information steering group, which were published between 1982 and 1985 and are due to be implemented in two phases, on 1 April 1987 and 1 April 1988.

Hospital Fires

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what factors he attributes the increase of 9 per cent. in the number of fires in hospitals and nursing homes between 1981 and 1983.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 699]: The numbers of fires of particular types in hospitals and nursing homes are subject to variation from year to year and between 1981 and 1983 they increased by 8 per cent from 2,081 to 2,243. The rise is mainly attributable to an increase in accidental fires ignited by smoker materials and an increase in deliberate or possibly deliberate fires largely ignited by patients in psychiatric hospitals.

ENERGY

Bracken

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy what investigations or research have been carried out into the feasibility of processing bracken for use as fuel.

Mr. David Hunt: Under my Department's biofuels research and development programme, a study has been carried out by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, Merlewood, Cumbria on native and naturalised species of plant as potential energy crops. Publication of a report on this work is expected shortly.

The area has also been reviewed by my Department's energy technology support unit—ETSU publication R35 "The potential for catch crops and native vegetation as fuel in the United Kingdom". A copy of this report has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Energy Efficiency Year

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of expenditure in energy efficiency will be committed to the domestic sector; and what is the total amount to be spent.

Mr. David Hunt [pursuant to the answer, 20 December 1985, c. 331]: Total Estimates provision for Energy Efficiency office expenditure in 1985-86 was £20,555,000, of which expenditure on the domestic sector was expected to be £7,471,000. Provisional expenditure plans for 1986-87 call for expenditure of £20,872,000 of which £8,261,000 is expected to be attributable to the domestic sector. Supply Estimates for 1986-87 will be presented to Parliament in due course.

DEFENCE

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the number of persons who have been asked to resign from the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, in 1985 as a result of having been charged with crimes, giving separately details of persons who resigned as a result of being charged with scheduled offences.

Mr. Lee: In 1985 three members of the Ulster Defence Regiment resigned, having been charged with criminal offences. None of these were scheduled offences.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, in 1985 have been found to be members of illegal paramilitary organisations or, separately, legal paramilitary organisations such as the Ulster Defence Association or the Third Force.

Mr. Lee: In 1985 no members of the UDR or its reserve were convicted of membership of any organisation proscribed under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve are currently estimated to be Catholics; what proportion this represents of the regiment's manpower; and how these proportions compare with the recruitment of the Ulster Defence Regiment in 1985.

Mr. Lee: Between 2 and 3 per cent. of members of the Ulster Defence Regiment have declared their religion as Roman Catholic. In 1985, 4·9 per cent. of those who applied to join the regiment and 4·2 per cent. of those accepted for service during the year declared their religion as Roman Catholic.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning current policy and practice on deployment of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve with particular reference to the areas and circumstances in which it is deemed opportune and inopportune to deploy the regiment.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 11 December 1984 at column 415. The policy has not changed.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the average time served in the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve by current operatives for 1985 for each group of non-commissioned officers and other men.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is as follows:

	Average time served Years
Officers	7·9
Non-commissioned officers	10·1
Other ranks	4·5

NOTE: Figures cover full and part-time, males and females.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the number of operatives by rank, separately, of those who have joined the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve, and of those who have resigned from the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve in 1985.

Mr. Lee: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the latest available figures for those male and female officers and other ranks who have joined the UDR and who have left the UDR for reasons other than medical or disciplinary or on death for the period October 1984 to September 1985, are as follows:

	Intake	Outflow
Officers
Male	32	42
Female	Nil	Nil
Other ranks
Male	868	813
Female	187	139

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the strength of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve by rank of serving operative as at 31 December 1985.

Mr. Lee: The information is as follows. Figures for 31 December 1985 are not yet available and therefore those given are as at the latest date, 31 December 1984.

	Number
Officers
Lt. colonel	2
Major	79
Captain	112
Lieutenant	81
2nd lieutenant	33
Other ranks
Warrant officer 1	—
Warrant officer 2	135
Staff sergeant	168
Sergeant	344
Corporal	619
Lance corporal	743
Private	3,466

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the military equipment of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve listing separately firearms and the type of firearms, motor vehicles, armoured vehicles and type and number of radio, radar and electronics surveillance equipment with which the regiment is equipped today and in each year since its inception.

Mr. Lee: Details of equipment allocated to the Ulster Defence Regiment between 1970 and 1983 are not available in the form required. For 1983, I refer the hon. Member for my answer to his question of 11 December 1984 at column 412. The establishment of vehicles for the Ulster Defence Regiment has not changed since then. However, the system of accounting for weapons has altered. Like other equipment, weapons are now issued according to the current needs and commitments of each battalion. On 16 January 1986 the following types and numbers of weapons were held:

	Number
Pistol, Walther 7·65mm	*25
Pistol, Walther ·22mm	*2,319
Pistol, 9mm	†983
SMG, 9mm	242
SLR	6,714
LMG/GPMG	163
Shotgun	3

* Personal protection weapons (PPWs).
† Some 50 per cent. of which are issued as PPWs.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the manpower strength of the Ulster Defence Regiment and its Reserve, as between full-time, part-time, male and female operatives on 31 December of the latest calendar year and at the latest available date.

Mr. Lee: The information is as follows. Figures for 1 January 1986 are not available, and therefore figures for the latest available date, 30 November 1985 are given.

	Full time	Part time	Total
As at 31 December 1985
Male officers	77	209	286
Female officers	10	11	21
Service men	2,406	3,069	5,475
Service women	196	462	658
As at 30 November 1985
Male officers	88	191	279
Female officers	10	10	20
Service men	2,472	2,996	5,468
Service women	195	516	711

Northern Ireland (Army Personnel)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the manpower strength of the British Army in Northern Ireland on 1 January, giving details of the number of operatives at that time for the following categories: Ulster Defence Regiment, regular British Army and British Territorial Army.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is as follows. Figures for 1 January 1986 are not available and therefore figures for the latest available date, 30 November 1985, are as follows:

	Strength
Ulster Defence Regiment	6,478
Regular Army	9,014
Territorial Army	3,479

The figures for the Ulster Defence Regiment include both full-time and part-time soldiers. Soldiers of the Territorial Army are not used in support of the RUC in counter-terrorist operations.

Submarines

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the refitting of Oberon class patrol submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The refitting of Oberon class submarines is planned to continue into the 1990s. Currently HMS Osiris and HMS Otus are in refit at Devonport dockyard. HMS Onyx is completing refit at Rosyth dockyard with HMS Oracle shortly to commence refit there. HMS Otter is in refit at Humber Shiprepair. There are no plans to invite tenders from commercial yards for any other submarine refit in the immediate future, but we have made clear our intention in the long-term ot introduce the principles of competition to the refitting of naval vessels.

Greenham Common

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he remains satisfied with security at Greenham common.

Mr. Stanley: I will answer shortly.

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications for security at Greenham common of the lessons learnt from Exercise Brave Defender.

Mr. Stanley: I will answer shortly.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the number from an ethnic minority background who are employed in his private office and those of other Ministers in his Department; and what are the positions they occupy.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1986, c. 238]: A phased programme of surveys to determine the ethnic origin of civilian staff in MOD is now being conducted. Staff in private offices have not yet taken part in these surveys, and as participation in the survey is voluntary, we are not in a position to release any ethnic information in advance. The surveys are being carried out according to an agreed code of practice on confidentiality. This code provides that no statistical data should be published which might make it easy to identify the ethnic origin of individuals.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lotus Cars

Mr. Foulkes asked the Attorney-General if he will institute proceedings against Lotus cars for offences in connection with its criminal involvement with De Lorean; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Royal Ulster Constabulary is investigating certain matters relating to the companies to which the hon. Member refers. At the conclusion of that investigation the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland will consider whether any criminal proceedings are appropriate.

Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Attorney-General if he will prosecute Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha as an accessory after the fact in relation to the murder of WPC Yvonne Fletcher; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The whole of the law relating to accessories after the fact was repealed by the Criminal Law Act 1967 and was replaced by a new offence of impeding the apprehension or prosecution of an offender. I take the question to refer to a possible offence under section 4 of the Criminal Law Act 1967. There is no evidence to justify the prosecution of Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha for such or any other offence.

Westland plc

Mr. Bell asked the Attorney-General if he will outline the grounds on which he based his statement to the Prime Minister that he was satisfied that the offer of immunity from prosecution to an individual in connection with the disclosure of official information relating to the Westland affair in no way interfered with the course of justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Winnick asked the Attorney-General when the Solicitor-General was first informed that extracts from his letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence had been publicly disclosed; and how he was so informed.

The Attorney-General: Before I authorised the Head of the Civil Service to inform the person concerned that, provided that she gave a full and truthful account of what she knew about this matter, she would not be prosecuted, I satisfied myself, on the basis of what he was already able to report to me, that she was unwilling, unless given such an assurance, to provide the full and frank account of the facts which was essential if the inquiry was to be successful. I was also satisfied that there was in any event no possibility that proceedings would be instituted against her in respect of the part which she had played in this matter.

Mr. Bell asked the Attorney-General on what date the Director of Public Prosecutions was consulted about the possibility of instituting proceedings against any persons concerned in the disclosure of official information relating to the Westland affair; on what date senior Treasury counsel were consulted on the same question; and what was their specific role in the matter.

The Attorney-General: Both the Director of Public Prosecutions and senior Treasury counsel were consulted on 23 January. Their role was to advise me whether the facts of this case justified the institution of criminal proceedings against any person under section 2 of the Official Secrets Acts 1911. My consultation of them was in accordance with the usual practice in matters of this kind.

Mr. Bell asked the Attorney-General on what date and at what hour his right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General first became aware that extracts from his letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) had been communicated to the Press Association; what was his source of information on this point; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: My hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General first learned of the disclosure at about 3 pm on 6 January as a result of my Department being asked to comment on it by representatives of the media shortly before that time.

Mr. Winnick asked the Attorney-General when he was first informed that extracts from the letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) had been disclosed; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I first learned of the disclosure when I heard reports on the radio at about 5 pm on 6 January.

Mr. Redmond asked the Attorney-General if he will publish in the Official Report the full text of (a) the letter dated 6 January from his right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence and (b) the further letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State relating to Westland plc.

The Attorney-General: A copy of my hon. and learned Friend's letter of 6 January was placed in the Library of the House on 15 January. A copy of his further letter of 7 January has today been placed in the Library. I understand that a copy of the letter of 6 January from my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence to which that further letter was a reply has also been placed in the Library.

Official Information (Disclosures)

Mr. Bell asked the Attorney-General what is his policy towards the offering to named individuals of immunity from prosecution in cases of inquiries into disclosure of official information; what conditions he requires to be fulfilled in such cases before granting his consent to the offering of immunity; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: My policy in this matter is to authorise an assurance being given to a witness that he will himself not be prosecuted only if I am satisfied that it is unlikely that he will otherwise be willing to give a full and truthful account of what he knows and that it is necessary, if the true facts are to be established or, as the case may be, if evidence is to be obtained which may permit proceedings to be instituted against others, that he should give that account. Such an assurance is always conditional upon his telling the truth.

It is often a relevant consideration that there is no prospect of criminal proceedings being instituted against him, whatever his own anxieties on that matter, or that there is no evidence against him upon which such proceedings could be founded other than what he himself may say.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many vacancies currently available under the community programme are part-time; and what proportion this number represents of the total number of advertised vacancies under this scheme.

Mr. Alan Clark: There were about 17,000 unfilled part-time community programme vacancies on 6 December, which was about 77 per cent. of the total number of unfilled vacancies. Part-time jobs on the programme are defined as those involving work for less than 35 hours per week.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the 50 parliamentary constituencies in which unemployment has increased by the greatest amount, ranked by the percentage increase in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following table shows the 50 parliamentary constituents in the United Kingdom in which unemployment has increased by the greatest amount between December 1984 and December 1985, giving the percentage increase in each case.

Farmer's Lung

Dr. Mark Hughes asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to deal with the high risk of the incidence of farmer's lung following last summer's wet hay harvest.

Mr. Trippier: The increased risk of farmer's lung following a wet hay harvest is well known and advice has been available for some years. This year the problem was anticipated. The Health and Safety Executive's agricultural inspectors have been reminding farmers of the hazards. A news release has been issued highlighting the dangers.

Fraud Investigators

Mr. Cohen asked the Paymaster General how many fraud investigators his Department employs; and what is his estimate of the amount of public money they saved in 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: On 31 December 1985 there were 548 full-time fraud investigators employed in the Department of Employment. It is estimated that they saved £31·8 million in social security benefits in 1985. This estimate is based on an assumption as to the minimum length of time that claimants would have continued claiming benefit fraudulently.

Staff Training

Mrs. Peacock asked the Paymaster General what percentage of his Department's annual budget is spent on staff training; and if he will give details for each of the last five years.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

WALES

Farmer's Lung

Mr. Mark Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will use his best endeavours to bring to the attention of the farming community in Wales the high risk of farmer's lung this winter following 1985's wet hay harvest.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The ways of minimising this risk have already featured at the many open meetings and demonstrations which have been organised by ADAS over the last few months. The five divisional agricultural offices have published relevant articles in their regular bulletins which are circulated to the farming community and ADAS specialists have made radio and TV broadcasts in Wales.

National Museum of Wales

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations the National Museum of Wales had with his Department regarding the proposed conditions prior to the arrangements for the forthcoming exhibitions in Japan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: My Department was consulted in October 1985 at the time the arrangements which had been made by the then Director and Keeper of Art Earlier in the year were considered by the Museum Council. It was pointed out to the museum that the matter was entirely one for it.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the proposed exhibition in Japan of items from the National Museum of Wales; of these, how many were in favour and how many against; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Two; one expressed no particular view, the other expressed concern.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales if, in view of the part played by members of its staff in securing the arrangements for the exhibition of items from the National Museum of Wales in Japan, he will initiate an inquiry into the management of the art department of the National Museum of Wales, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Under the terms of the Museum's royal charter the council is responsible for the management of the museum and the superintendence and control of the director and all other officers. It would not be appropriate for me to interfere in these functions. At the same time it is generally recognised that there are problems about housing the visual arts in Wales and I have appointed a small group of experts to inquire into this and report to me with recommendations. I shall write to the hon. Lady and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Jobs

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of jobs in Wales are (a) full-time and (b) part-time.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Of women employees in Wales 44·8 per cent. were part-time in June 1985. The latest available figure for males is for September 1981 when 4·7 per cent. were employed part-time.

Dysentery

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh people suffered from dysentery in 1985; how many of these were aged 16 years or under; and what steps he has taken to ensure prevention of a similar outbreak in 1986.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Investment

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the investment per head of population in Welsh industry in real terms in May 1979 and December 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not available.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales, at the latest available date, how many (a) men and (b) women in Wales have been unemployed for three years or longer.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: At October 1985, 25,807 men and 5,244 women had been unemployed for three years or more in Wales.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to seek to privatise the Welsh Development Agency; if any review of the Welsh Development Agency is currently underway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have no plans to privatise the Welsh Development Agency. As foreseen in my answer of 4 December 1985 at column 232, a review of the WDA is currently under way as part of the programme of reviews of all of the executive non-departmental public bodies under my control.

Welsh Water Authority

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to privatise the Welsh water authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction on 9 December 1985 at column 467.

Wales Advisory Body on Higher Education

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the report of the working group set up by the board of the Welsh advisory body on higher education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The working group has not yet produced its report. It will be for the Wales Advisory Body to decide at what stage the report should be published.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations the working group set up by the board of the Welsh advisory body on higher education has had with the institutions being considered for rationalisation.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The working group has obtained statistical information from every institution in Wales engaged in initial teacher training. The working group is now considering the information it has collected. It has not entered into consultations with any of the institutions.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members of the working group set up by the board of the Welsh advisory body on higher education to consider what scope there is for rationalisation of initial teacher training places in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The members of the working group are:

Mr. C. Roberts — Deputy director, Polytechnic of Wales (chairman)
Mr. S. J. Adams—HMI, Wales
Mr. Colin Alves—Secretary of the National Society
Mr. J. B. Davies — Principal, Welsh Office Education Department
Mr. D. Dale Jones—Regional officer, NATFHE
Dr. B. L. Powell—Secretary, Wales Advisory Body
Dr. Gareth Owen—Vice-Chancellor, University of Wales
Mrs. Tydfil Thomas—Member, University Grants Committee.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members and where appropriate their local authorities of the committee of local government members of the advisory body on higher education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I chair the committee of the Wales Advisory Body for Local Authority Higher Education, and the members are as follows

Councillor E. Currie-Jones, South Glamorgan
Councillor J. W. Griffiths, Powys
Councillor J. A. H. Harries, Dyfed
Councillor G. Jenkins, Gwent
Councillor W. A. Jones, Clwyd
Councillor F. J. Kingdom, West Glamorgan
Councillor J. G. Roberts, Gwynedd
Councillor P. Squire, Mid Glamorgan

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members and, where appropriate, their academic institutions of the board of the Welsh advisory body on higher education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The board of the Wales Advisory Body (WAB) is being reconstituted following the conclusion of the review of WAB conducted last year. The bodies represented on the board have been invited to submit nominations. Most of these have now been received and we shall be appointing new members before the next meeting of the board at the end of February.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Grants

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what changes to the student grant system were investigated during his Department's review.

Sir Keith Joseph: A wide variety of changes were considered including the extension of student support to all full-time advanced courses, the abolition or reduction of the parental contribution and lowering the age of independence. However, without the introduction of loans, or without some severe cutback to the present system, or of increased funding which would have been contrary to the Government's policies to constrain public expenditure, it would not have been possible to finance such changes, however desirable.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what factors he took into account when deciding that means tested grants to undergraduates and full grants for postgraduates should be increased by £36 a year.

Mr. Walden: The recently announced 1986-87 grant increase of about 2 per cent. (around £36 a year) represents a balance between students' needs and the total expenditure which taxpayers and ratepayers can reasonably be asked to meet, given other claims on scarce resources. Any increase to student awards agreed following consultations currently being conducted by the Social Security Advisory Committee on the disentitlement of students to certain benefits will be paid in addition to this. The announcement is recorded in Hansard, 16 December 1985, at column 39.

Universities and Polytechnics (Science Faculties)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many scientific faculties of universities or polytechnics have been closed during the last six academic years.

Mr. Walden: No science faculties have been closed in either universities or polytechnics in the last six years. Several small individual science subject departments have been closed or merged.

Burton Manor College, Merseyside

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the future of Burton Manor college, Merseyside.

Mr. Walden: I understand that a resolution of the college governors, providing for the termination of the present agreement for the government and maintenance of the college, will shortly be submitted by the Liverpool local education authority to my right hon. Friend, whose confirmation of the resolution and approval to the sale of the premises is required under the terms of the agreement. In reaching his decision my right hon. Friend will take account of the representations which he has already received about it from various quarters, including hon. Members.

GCSE Examination

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied that preparation for the new GCSE examination is now proceeding satisfactorily and that courses are likely to be able to commence in September.

Mr. Chris Patten: The preparations for the introduction of GCSE examinations have so far proceeded according to the timetable set by my right hon. Friend. Teachers have been able to consider draft GCSE syllabuses for some time, and approved syllabuses are now becoming available. The Secondary Examinations Council has completed its preparation and distribution of the materials necessary for the special programme of in-service training seminars, and the examining groups have completed their plans for the delivery of the first round of these training seminars.

In accord with the timetable set, the first seminars are being held this month. It is too soon to assess whether this next phase of training programme is proceeding satisfactorily.

Deaf Children

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his answer of 14 November 1985, Official Report, column 270, if he intends to provide a full response to the British Deaf Association's report entitled "Raise the Standard: The Case for Improving Deaf Children's Education"; if he intends to discuss the issues raised in the report with the British Deaf Association; when he expects to conclude his review of the provision of special schools for hearing-impaired children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Officials of the Department will be meeting members of the British Deaf Association to discuss their report "Raise the Standard: the Case for Improving Deaf Children's Education". The review of provision of special schools for hearing-impaired children is nearly complete. There are some matters outstanding which initially require action from the providers of the special schools before the review can be completed.

University and Polytechnic Teachers and Researchers

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he is not prepared to institute any review of the salaries and terms of conditions of university and polytechnic teachers and researchers.

Mr. Chris Patten: As I explained to my hon. Friend in the reply I gave him on 21 January at column 82, pay negotiations are still in progress between the university staff side and the employers. My right hon. Friend has received no joint request for a review. Nor has he received any such request from the two sides responsible for negotiating salaries and terms of conditions of FE lecturers (which includes polytechnic lecturers) to undertake a review.

School Discipline (Review)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide further information concerning the nature of the review by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of good practice in regard to discipline in schools; when he expects this to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: The review is now underway. It will identify good practice as regards relationships, behaviour, attitudes to work and discipline observed by Her Majesty's Inspectors during their routine and specialist visits to schools so that the generality of schools can learn from the most successful. I hope that the report will be published before the end of 1986.

Maintained Schools (Redundancies)

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many compulsory redundancies there have been in maintained schools in England and Wales in each of the past three years.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department does not collect data of this kind. Such information as is available would suggest that compulsory redundancies among teachers aged under 50 were rare over this period. Between 1,500 and 2,000 primary and secondary teachers aged 50 and over were prematurely retired on redundancy grounds in each of the last three years but these would in the main have been willing volunteers.

Children in Care

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information is available to his Department in respect of children who are educated out of school and subsequently taken into care by the local authority under a compulsory care order; how many such cases are known to him; and what representations he has received.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department collects no information about such cases and only one has come to the attention of my right hon. Friend recently. Representations have been made by the parents that the authority concerned have acted unreasonably and the matter is currently being considered within the Department.

Clinical Academic Staff

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to be in a position to make a statement about the pay of clinical academic staff.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend will reply as soon as possible to the request for additional funding from the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply of 29 October, Official Report, column 467, what are the reasons for the delay in reaching a decision regarding the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals' request for extra funding to cover the 1985 pay award for clinical academic staff.

Mr. Walden: The report from the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals raises questions of general principle in relation to the Government's public expenditure policies that have to be considered carefully.

Deaf-Blind Education

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what promise his Department made to the National Deaf-Blind and Rubella Association with regard to consultations on the production of a national plan for deaf-blind education; and what action has been taken on this matter subsequently.

Mr. Dunn: The Department is preparing a consultation paper on the education of deaf-blind children and will consult the National Deaf-Blind and Rubella Association (now called SENSE) together with other interested parties. A meeting is being arranged with SENSE, after which it is hoped that the consultation paper will be ready for circulation fairly shortly.

Epstein-Barr Virus

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research he has sponsored into the behaviour of the Epstein-Barr virus, the incidence of infectious mononucleosis, commonly called glandular fever, and into the development of a suitable viral vaccine.

Mr. Walden: The Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid through the Department, is the main Government agency for the promotion of medical research in the United Kingdom. I understand that the council is supporting some such research and I will write to my hon. Friend with details.

Student Grant

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement explaining the factors which he takes into account in establishing the level of student grant.

Mr. Walden: The level of student grant represents a balance between covering students' needs and the total expenditure which taxpayers and ratepayers can reasonably be asked to meet, given other claims on scarce resources.

Mrs. Peacock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether Her Majesty's Goverment intend the £36 compensation sum, to be paid to students under his White Paper scheme, to be means-tested.

Mr. Walden: Any increase in the student grant arising from the present proposals to change student's entitlement to social security benefits would be means-tested in the usual way. The vast majority of students would, however, receive the additional sum in full.

Staff Training

Mrs. Peacock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of his Department's annual budget is spent on staff training; and if he will detail this for each of the last five years.

Sir Keith Joseph: The information is as follows

Expenditure on staff training as a percentage of administration costs

	per cent
1980-81	0·12
1981-82	0·16
1982-83	0·21
1983-84	0·23
1984-85	0·27

University Grants Committee

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is the percentage change in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1984-85, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in home student fees, for redundancy and for early retirement, changes to take account of minor capital works from the recurrent grant, changes in the level of local authority rates additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes;

(2) what is the percentage change in real terms, measured by the gross domestic product deflator, in the funding of each university by the University Grants Committee between 1980-81 and 1984-85, excluding those amounts representing compensation for changes in home student fees, compensation for redundancy and early retirement, changes to take account of minor capital works from the recurrent grant and changes in the level of local authority rates (a) including and (b) excluding additions made for the information technology and new blood programmes.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 150]: The title of the table in cols 150-151 contained a typographical error and should read "Percentage change in UGC funding (Academic Year) 1980-81 to 1984-85."

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South African Military Attachés

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the continued presence of South African military attachés in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: In accordance with the measures agreed with our European partners, we have withdrawn our military attachés from Pretoria and have undertaken not to grant accreditation to military attachés from South Africa.

The question of the continued presence of existing South African attachés is under review with our European partners.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, for each of the 51 judgments against signatory nations delivered by the European Court of Human Rights, whether the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe has passed a resolution under article 54 of the European Convention on Human Rights satisfying itself that the Government involved have executed the judgment of the court and, where such a resolution has been passed, the date on which it was done.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested by my hon. Friend is being assembled and I shall arrange for it to be published in the Official Report.

Westland plc

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which other European Governments, in addition to the Italian Government, his Department contacted over the future of Westland plc; what instructions were given to ambassadors in each country; and what response was received from each of the individual Governments.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: At various times over the last two months, my Department has been in contact with the Governments of France, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and Italy, over the future of Westland plc. In these contacts it was emphasised to the Governments that in the view of Her Majesty's Government the future of Westland plc was a matter for the board of Westland and the company's shareholders to decide. The Governments concerned took note of this position.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response was made by the Italian Government to Lord Bridges' representations regarding public statements by the Italian Government relating to Westland plc.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Italian Government took note of the representation made by Lord Bridges.

Torture

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of torture being carried out abroad with the aid of British-made equipment.

Mrs. Chalker: We are not aware of any specific reports of the use of British instruments for the purpose of torture in other countries.

I am ready to look into any cases that are drawn to my attention.

Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what time scale Her Majesty's Government have in mind with regard to the United Kingdom's ultimate ratification of the United Nations Convention on Torture and the European Convention on Torture; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We intend to ratify this convention, which we signed on 15 March 1985, when the necessary procedures ahve been completed. We need to examine first whether our current legislation and other arrangements accord with its provisions or whether new legislation will be required. This examination and further consultation with the dependent territories, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man will necessarily take time.

The draft European Convention against Torture is still under negotiation by an expert committee of the Council of Europe. We are participating constructively in those negotiations. Our objective is a convention that can be signed and ratified by all members of the Council of Europe.

Mr. Valeri Barinov

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received and what overtures he has made to the Soviet Government about the case of Valeri Barinov.

Mrs. Chalker: During 1985, representations were received from 20 hon. Members in the form of letters on the case of Valeri Barinov. Mr. Barinov's case was among those raised by our delegation to the CSCE experts' meeting on human rights in Ottawa last year in bilateral discussions with the Soviet delegation. We continue to take every suitable opportunity to register with the Soviet authorities our concern for better implementation of the humanitarian provisions of the Helsinki final act. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs most recently did so with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Ryzhov on 21 January.

Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha has been accorded diplomatic status; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha had diplomatic status at the time of the seige of the Libyan People's Bureau.

Mrs. Chalker: Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha was employed by the former Libyan people's bureau as a film technician until he left the United Kingdom on 27 April. At no time was he notified to us as a diplomatic agent nor a member of the administrative and technical staff; he had no diplomatic status. He is not now notified to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in any capacity.

Any question about his presence in the United Kingdom is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

South Atlantic Islands Development Corporation Limited

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the majority shareholding of South Atlantic Islands Development Corporation Limited.

Mrs. Chalker: We understand that Field Nominees Limited, a subsidiary nominee company of the Bank of Butterfield and Son Ltd., Bermuda, holds 75 per cent. of the corporation's issued shares to the order of financial institutions. Of these shares, a British-Swiss financial institution, SG Warburg Bank AG, holds 7,000 of the corporation's shares (equivalent to 70 per cent. of the issued capital) on behalf of two European legal entities, whose directors are all of European nationality and domicile.

Israel

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will maintain the embargo on arms sales to Israel until that country has withdrawn its forces from neighbouring countries.

Mrs. Chalker: We imposed restrictions on arms sales to Israel in direct response to the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in 1982. We welcomed Israel's decision to withdraw, but are disappointed by the residual Israeli presence on Lebanese territory. Our policy is kept under review.

SCOTLAND

List D Schools

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if any progress has been made to clarify the position of list D schools at Balncraig, Balrossie, Kerelaw, Kibble, Oakbank, Rossie and St. Mary's, Kenmure, respectively;

(2) if he will list the facilities available to those children displaced by the closure of list D schools, in each region.

Mr. Rifkind: I understand that these schools intend to continue after 31 March 1986. The redundancy notices issued to the staff of St. Mary's, Kenmure, on 27 December 1985 were withdrawn by the managers on 10 January 1986 following discussion between the churches and Strathclyde region.

The case of each child affected by closure of a list D school will be reviewed by a children's hearing. Local authorities are responsible for providing or securing the provision of facilities including residential and other accommodation, and full information on this is not held centrally.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the alternative provisions available to cater for the needs of children displaced by the closure of List D schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Regional authorities are at present negotiating the terms on which financial support will be offered to the list D schools whose services they require. The total capacity of the list D system currently exceeds demand by some 240. Two schools have so far intimated that they intend to close. Authorities are responsible for providing or securing the provision of facilities, including residential and other accommodation. It is not for me to intervene in these matters, but my Department will continue to respond sympathetically to any requests for advice from the parties to the negotiations. Full information about local facilities is not held centrally.

The case of each child affected by closure will be reviewed by a children's hearing. The review will not necessarily lead to transfer of the child to another residential establishment. It is open to the hearing to vary the terms of the supervision requirement.

Rickets

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of rickets were notified in Scotland in each year from 1980 to 1985.

Mr. Rifkind: Rickets is not a notifiable disease and the information requested is not available centrally.

Land Reclamation

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent by the Government, local authorities and the National Coal Board on land reclamation in Scotland in 1975 and every year until 1985; and what acreage of land was reclaimed by each body.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Crofting Townships (Roads Programme)

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications for grants under the crofting townships roads programme have been refused in the current financial year.

Mr. Ancram: 35 applications had been received by the Scottish Development Department, and remained unapproved when revised arrangements for winding up the programme were announced on 23 October 1985.

Rural Aid

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to make a formal response to the representations concerning the establishment of a rural aid fund which were made by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities at a meeting with the Minister of State on 12 July 1985.

Mr. Rifkind: I hope to respond shortly.

Farmers' Lung

Mr. Mark Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will use his best endeavours to bring to the attention of the farming community in Scotland the high risk of farmers' lung this winter following 1985's wet hay harvest.

Mr. John MacKay: Advice to farmers in Scotland is a function of the three Scottish agricultural colleges which produce leaflets drawing farmers' attention to this particular hazard.

Because of the increased risk due to the exceptionally wet weather in 1985 the problem has been further drawn to the attention of farmers in a number of ways. There have been new releases to the media and the subject has been covered in radio broadcasts, in articles in farming journals and in newsletters which are circulated to farmers.

Scottish Grand Committee

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what security consideration determined boot and bonnet searches of the cars of hon. Members attending the Scottish Grand Committee in Edinburgh on 20 January.

Mr. Rifkind: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scottish Grand Committee

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Lord Privy Seal what was the cost of holding the Scottish Grand Committee meeting in Edinburgh on 20 January.

Mr. Biffen: The details on the basis of which a figure could be given are not yet available. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Departmental Select Committees

Mr. George asked the Lord Privy Seal how many visits have been made by each of the departmental Select Committees, including visits by Sub-Committees, since their appointment, abroad and within the United Kingdom; and what is the total cost for each Committee, together with the global cost for each Committee and for all departmental Committees since their inception.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 289-92]: Whilst all the visits referred to in the table involved official Select Committee business, they were not necessarily all quorate visits.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Manpower (West Midlands)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police constabulary as to the numbers of uniformed and civilian manpower in his force, as to the levels of pay which have been allocated to each rank of officer, as to the number of officers in his force who have been employed on drug detection duties each year since 1979 and as to what proportion of the expenditure of the West Midlands police constabulary will qualify within the framework of the 8 per cent. increment which he intends to allocate to police in England and Wales.

Mr. Giles Shaw: On 30 November 1985 there were 6,539 police officers and 1,354 full-time and 289 part-time civilian staff in the West Midlands police.

The rates of pay or salary scales of each rank of police officer in the West Midlands police are as follows:

The strength of the drug squad in the West Midlands police was 39 during the period 1979 to December 1985 when it was increased to 55.

The planned increases in cash provision for total police expenditure in England and Wales are not allocated to individual forces. The West Midlands police budget is determined by the police authority. In setting the police budget for 1986-87 the authority will need to take account of my right hon. Friend's determination of its maximum precept, under section 68 of the Local Government Act 1985. Authorised police expenditure qualifies for 50 per cent. specific grant from the Home Office.

Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been transferred from (a) England and Wales to Northern Ireland in the latest available calendar year, (b) from Northern Ireland to England and Wales in the latest available calendar year, (c) from Scotland to Northern Ireland in each year since 1979 and (d) from Northern Ireland to Scotland in each year since 1979; and under which section of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 such transfers were carried out.

Mr. Mellor: Five prisoners were transferred from England and Wales to Northern Ireland in 1985, two of them on more than one occasion. Four of these transfers were under section 26 of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 (permanent transfer) one under section 27 (temporary transfer) and two under section 29 (transfer for judicial purposes). No prisoner was transferred from Northern Ireland to England and Wales. Transfers between Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Patrick Hackett

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times Patrick Hackett (342603 Parkhurst) has been held in single cellular confinement; what was the average time spent by the prisoner in single cell confinement; and what was the shortest and longest time so spent.

Mr. Mellor: On one occasion Mr. Hackett has been awarded two terms of 28 days cellular confinement, to run concurrently.

Foreign Diplomats (Parking Offences)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the number of parking tickets evaded by diplomats in the Metropolitan police area in each of the last three years for which figures are available; if he will break down the figures by country in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My hon. Friend was given the figures for 1983 and 1984 in reply to his earlier questions on illegal parking by diplomats on 13 February 1985 at columns 193-95; and 10 July 1985 at columns 457-61. The available figures for 1985 were given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in his reply of 15 November 1985 to my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Mr. Wheeler) at columns 301-3. The figures for the final quarter of 1985 are not yet available, but the preliminary indications are that the improvement which followed the introduction of the new and stricter policy on 1 May continued in the last quarter of the year.

School Teachers (Assaults on Pupils)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances there have been of public prosecutions of school teachers for assaults on pupils in each police force area in the past three years; and how many resulted in a conviction.

Mr. Mellor: Information is not collected centrally on the circumstances of offences of assault which are the subject of court proceedings.

Women Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals for the reform of the prison system in the light of the Howard League for Penal Reform's report, Women in the Penal System, copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend is considering this interesting report, which he received on 23 January.

Metropolitan Police (Strategy)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the report made to him by the Metropolitan police on the Commissioner's annual strategy.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend did so on 14 January.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Grylls asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has set up to monitor the burdens of business arising from provisions of the Data Protection Act.

Mr. Waddington: The Data Protection Registrar has been asked to report to the Home Office on the impact of the Act on businesses after it has come fully into force.

Leeds-Bradford Airport

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will designate Leeds-Bradford airport as a port of entry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: No.

Airports (Libyan Student Engineers)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to require the repatriation of all Libyan student engineers currently under training at airports in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Applications for leave to enter or remain have to be considered individually in accordance with the immigration rules. There are no grounds to justify a general policy of curtailing the stay or deporting all Libyan student engineers currently under training at airports here. But Libyan nationals remain subject to the strict immigration controls announced by my right hon. and learned Friend, the then Home Secretary, on 1 May 1984, and all applications from them are closely scrutinised.

Remembrance Ceremony (Member's Correspondence)

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be replying to the letter of 12 November sent to him by the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding the Remembrance ceremony in Whitehall; and what was the reason for the delay in replying.

Mr. Hurd: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible. I am sorry not to have replied before, but I am still considering carefully the points made in the letter.

Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about why Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha was in the Libyan People's Bureau and what he was doing there at the time of the siege in April 1984.

Mr. Hurd: At the time of the siege in April 1984, Mr. Ben Rabha was a locally engaged employee of the Libyan People's Bureau, working as a film technican. There is no evidence that he was personally implicated in the shooting of WPC Fletcher.

Police and Criminal Evidence Act

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the estimates he has received from chief constables or police authorities of the additional costs arising from implementation of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 for each police force area in England and Wales.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the long term the Act is intended to be broadly neutral as regards resources. My right hon. Friend has, however, agreed to adjustments in force establishments in a number of cases, for reasons associated in part with the requirements of the Act. The estimates and information which he has received from chief constables and police authorities have not been confined solely to additional costs arising specifically from implementation.

The substantial training requirement for all serving police officers has now been completed, and new recruits are being taught the procedures in the Act as part of their basic training, instead of the complex of separate statutory and informal provisions which their predecessors had to learn.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a statement of the estimates he has received of the additional costs arising in respect of magistrates' courts in England and Wales from implementation of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act.

Mr. Mellor: Minor additional costs will arise as the result of the occasional need to hold courts outside normal office hours. Any expenditure of this kind will be marginal, and no separate estimates are available.

Drug Offences (Wales)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Wales in 1985 were convicted of drug-related offences.

Mr. Mellor: The latest available information relates to 1984 when 1,297 persons were found guilty in Wales of offences under drugs legislation or of other offences involving controlled drugs. The corresponding figure for 1985 will not be available before the late summer.

ENERGY

Research and Development

19. Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of the energy research and development budget is devoted to non-nuclear subjects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My Department's expenditure on non-nuclear R & D in 1984-85 was £41 million or 17 per cent. of its total R & D budget. The principal items in this non-nuclear programme are renewables, energy efficiency and offshore oil and gas.

Renewable Energy Sources

20. Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Energy what support he plans to provide for research and development of renewable energy sources over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The renewable sources of energy have a key role in the Government's energy strategy and strong support for their research and development will continue.

Voluntary Insulation Groups

21. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about voluntary insulation groups.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department's Energy Efficiency Office provides grant aid for voluntary sector insulation projects and for the national co-ordinating charity, Neighbourhood Energy Action. The number of projects now operating represents a six fold increase since my right hon. Friend launched his energy efficiency initiative in 1983 and the number will more than double by the end of Energy Efficiency Year 1986.

Energy Efficiency Year

22. Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about Energy Efficiency Year.

Mr. Peter Walker: I shall of course keep the House regularly informed about the progress with the year. I am delighted to say that, since December, the number of events planned for the year has risen from 500 to over 700 and is still rising. 1,100 top executives attended the first of my new series of breakfast briefings in London last week.

Electricity Charges

23. Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of the Electricity Council to discuss electricity charges.

Mr. Peter Walker: I meet the chairman of the Electricity Council frequently. Prices are for the industry to decide.

Electricity Exports (Channel Link)

24. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much electricity was imported and exported via the Channel link in the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Goodlad: Power flowed for the first time through the first of four pairs of cables which will make up the link on 16 January.

Coal Industry Dispute

25. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, when he next meets the chairman of the National Coal Board, he will raise with him the reinstatement of miners sacked by the National Coal Board in Scotland.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the National Coal Board regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Magnox Power Stations

26. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will make a statement on progress on the 20-year long-term safety reviews on Magnox power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The CEGB is making good progress with its long-term safety reviews of Magnox stations, and expects to complete the programme next year. The NII will continue to monitor the progress of the reviews, and to assess the results.

Energy Efficiency Campaign

27. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about the progress of the energy efficiency campaign.

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the latest progress of his plans for Energy Efficiency Year.

Mr. Peter Walker: Since December the number of events planned for the year has risen from 500 to over 700 and is still rising. A series of 20 Monergy breakfast briefings are planned during 1986 and 1987. A major programme of school plays, special displays at exhibitions and technical seminars has been organised. The Monergy road show will visit around 200 town centres and shopping precincts. Many major local authorities have been approached and are supporting Energy Efficiency Year. Over 200 voluntary groups are now operating and have so far insulated lofts and provided draughtproofing in approximately 140,000 homes.

Exploration and Appraisal Wells

28. Mr. Malone asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the number of exploration and appraisal wells drilled in 1985.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The numbers of exploration and appraisal wells drilled in 1985 are 129 and 71 respectively. These numbers include wells drilled both on land and offshore.

Productivity

29. Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about current levels of productivity being achieved in the coal mining industry.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given earlier today to the hon. Member for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart).

Onshore Oil and Gas

30. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many onshore oil and gas developments were approved in 1985.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: In 1985, three onshore oil fields and one onshore gas field were approved for development.

NCB (Chairman)

31. Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has made any arrangements to meet the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss how and when his successor will take over the appointment.

Mr. Peter Walker: In October 1985, I appointed Sir Robert Haslam to be the next chairman of the National Coal Board. He joined the board as non-executive deputy chairman on 1 November 1985 and will take up full-time duties, after a period of leave, from the beginning of May this year. The present chairman's appointment expires on 31 August 1986 and Sir Robert Haslam will take up his three-year appointment on 1 September 1986.

Annexe B Oilfield Development Approvals

32. Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the number of annexe B oilfield development approvals issued in 1985.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: In 1985, I approved 12 oil field development projects.

Sizewell Inquiry

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has asked the chairman of the Sizewell public inquiry to submit to him his main recommendations in advance of the full text of his report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: No. The preparation of the report is a matter for the inspector.

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he expects to receive the full text of the Sizewell report before the summer recess; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I have nothing to add to my right hon. Friend's reply to the written question of the hon. Member for Edmonton (Dr. Twinn) on 19 November, at column 101.

Bracken Processing

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy to what extent bracken processing for use as fuel is carried out in the United Kingdom; and what similar information he has on its use in other countries.

Mr. David Hunt: Although the technology exists to cut, bale and burn bracken, there are no known instances of bracken being processed for use as fuel either in the United Kingdom or within the European Community. We have no information on this possible use of bracken outside the Community.

District Heating

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Energy what guidelines he has sent to local authorities, development corporations and new town commissions for the operation of district heating systems.

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply.

Although no guidelines have been issued in recent years, the Building Research Establishment (BRE) has published three papers on the performance and operation of district heating schemes and on heat metering. Additionally, BRE provides advice on request to individual local authorities.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Crown Agents

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he has made with plans to reorganise the Crown Agents pension division in East Kilbride; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: I hope to announce our plans shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Development Grant

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was paid each year from 1978 to 1984 to firms in the Grimsby travel-to-work area under regional development grants.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Payments of £25,000 or less under the old regional development grant scheme cannot be attributed to any unit smaller than a planning region. Grimsby travel-to-work area is not eligible for the new regional development grant scheme which was introduced on 29 November 1984. The totals of payments of regional development grant of over £25,000 in respect of assets on premises in the Grimsby travel-to-work area in the periods specified is given in the following table.

Regional Development Grant
(Part II of the Industrial Development Act 1982)

Year	Grant paid (£'000)
1978	2,817
1979	1,036
1980	1,888
1981	3,426
1982	2,087
1983	2,435
1984	4,533

Hearing Aid Council

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the present chairman and members of the Hearing Aid Council, designating the categories in which they serve together with the dates when appointments expire.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is as follows:

Mrs. M. B. La Touche	December 1988

British Standards Institute

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons the British Standards Institute has stopped undertaking unannounced surveillance visits to firms supplying goods under BS 5750.

Mr. Pattie: Assessment of companies to BS 5750 is a fully commercial service undertaken by the quality assurance services division, British Standards Institution. Questions about the operation of the service should therefore be addressed to the director, quality assurance services division, British Standards Institution, Linford Wood, Milton Keynes, MK14 6LE.

Export Credit Guarantees

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for which countries there are at present restrictions on export credit guarantees.

Mr. Channon: The economic problems being experienced in a considerable number of the United Kingdom's export markets limit the level of commitments that the Export Credits Guarantee Department can, prudentially, assume on them given its remit to operate at no net cost to the Exchequer. The Department regularly reviews its policy towards markets and aims to relax such restrictions as soon as justifiable. (The Department's assessments are made in consultation with the Export Guarantees Advisory Council in respect of its "commercial account" operations under section 1 of the Export Guarantees and Overseas Investment Act and with the inter-departmental export guarantees committee for its "national interest" operations under section 2 of the Act.)

It has been the policy of successive Governments not to publish the terms on which export credit guarantees are made available for particular markets.

Airbus

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secetary of State for Trade and Industry what sums have been provided to date from public funds for the development and production of the Airbus; and if any further allocations are under consideration.

Mr. Pattie: To date, £105·1 million has been paid as launch aid to British Aerospace in respect of its share of the design and development costs relating to participation in the Airbus A320 programme. No public funds have been, or will be, provided towards Airbus production costs. No further applications for launch aid in respect of Airbus programmes have been received.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secetary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement setting out the procedures for the repayment of public funds provided towards the development and production of the Airbus.

Mr. Pattie: The launch aid provided towards British Aerospace's share of the Airbus A320 development costs is repayable on terms designed to yield a return in real terms on the Government's investment. £50 million is repayable on a fixed schedule over the period 1990-92; the remaining £200 million will be repayable by a levy on A320 sales designed to yield a positive rate of return to the Government in real terms. No public funding is provided towards Airbus production costs.

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to which of his hon. and learned Friends he was referring in his written answer of 22 January to the hon. Member for Christchurch relating to the European Airbus.

Mr. Pattie: The first line of the second paragraph of the answer of my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan) of 22 January at columns 184-85, should read, "I have already informed".

Torture Equipment (Exports)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received concerning the export of equipment that can be used for torture.

Mr. Channon: I have received five representations over the past six months.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the salary at each increase date since 1974 of each of the chairmen of the industries for which he is responsible and the names of the incumbents.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Metrication

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the further extension of metrication in (a) industry and (b) commerce; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Government do not believe that the pace of metrication should be dictated by legally enforced timetables. These decisions are best left to the judgment of the enterprises involved which are in the best position to assess the costs and benefits.

Many manufacturers in the United Kingdom are now producing in metric sizes. It has always been recognised that some difficulties may arise in the retail sector, where metrication has a direct impact on the general public. However, the Government remain convinced that the policy of allowing trade and industry to dictate the pace of change to metric units is the right one.

House of Fraser

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the reply of 16 January, Official Report, column 634, what were the reasons given by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in its request for an extension on the mergers reference of Lonrho and the House of Fraser.

Mr. Butcher: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

English Estates

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on English Estates' funding requirements in the northern region.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I will make a statement on English Estates' financial position shortly.

Wine (Measures)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has received since 1 January 1985 from consumers' organisations concerning the practice by some licensed establishments of selling wine in unlined or unmarked glasses in contravention of the voluntary code of practice agreed between the Government and the licensed trade;

(2) what further representations he has received since 1 January 1985 from the local authorities co-ordinating body on trading standards concerning the operation of the voluntary code of practice agreed between the Government and the licensed trade on the sale of wine by the glass;

(3) if he will now introduce legislation to give statutory effect to the provisions of the voluntary code of practice on the sale of wine which will require public house licensees and others to display the price and precise volume by which wine is sold by the glass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Since 1 January 1985 the Department has not received any representations from consumer organisations concerning sales of wine in unmarked glasses.

Last October the Department received from LACOTS a copy of a second survey undertaken by local authorities between May and August 1985 to ascertain levels of compliance with the voluntary code of practice. Whilst this showed an improvement in adherence to the code's provisions it has still not been adopted as widely as had been hoped. The Department is considering whether further action is called for.

Weights and Measures (Examiners)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many examiners are in post at the National Weights and Measures Laboratory; what are their grades; what is the average annual salary in such grade; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the total salary bill of the laboratory in each year since 1979, together with his best estimate for the years 1985 to 1986-87.

Mr. Howard: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Staff Training

Mrs. Peacock asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of his Department's annual budget is spent on staff training; and if he will detail this for each of the last five years.

Mr. Butcher: Departmental expenditure on training over the past three years has been:

	£ million
1983-84	5·2
1984-85	5·8
1985-86	6·6*

* Estimated.

Expressed as a proportion of pay costs, the respective percentages are:

	£ million
1983-84	4·2
1984-85	4·5
1985-86	4·7*

* Estimated.

It is standard practice to use this basis of comparison in which superannuation is included in both training costs and pay costs.

Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

Westland plc

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the decision to issue his press statement, Ref 12, of 6 January had been cleared with the Prime Minister's Office.

Mr. Pattie: Yes.

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he first had a sight of the letter which the then Sectetary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine), proposed to send to Mr. David Horne, banking adviser to the European Consortium in the Westland affair and which was subsequently sent on 3 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. and learned Friend did not see the letter until after it had been sent.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry at what time his press release of 6 January headed, "Leon Britan, Statement on Westland", was published.

Mr. Pattie: The statement on Westland of 6 January by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State was distributed by a member of my Department's press office at the press conference held by Westland plc on 6 January and was subsequently distributed by the Central Office of Information at 16.30, on its regular distribution run.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he had time, following receipt of his copy of the Solicitor-General's letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence, to amend his press statement No. 12 of 6 January before a member of his staff departed to distribute it at the Westlands board meeting.

Mr. Pattie: The statement of 6 January by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State was drafted and finalised before his receipt of the Solicitor-General's letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence and the contents of that letter had no effect on the statement. The purpose of that statement was to re-affirm the position of the Government on Westland, as set out by my right hon. Friend in his statement to the House on 16 December and by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 and 19 December, that it is for Westland as a private sector company to decide the best route to follow in order to secure its future and that of its employees.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry at what time the member of his Department left his office on 6 January to attend the Westland board meeting to distribute at the meeting copies of his press release, "Statement on Westland."

Mr. Pattie: A press officer left my Department to attend the Westland press conference at 15.40 on 6 January.

Bankruptcies and Liquidations

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) bankruptcies and (b) liquidations there have been in Wales since May 1979.

Mr. Howard: The provisional figure for bankruptcies in Wales in the period 1 April 1979 to 31 December 1985 is 2,519.

The bankruptcy figures cover all individuals and partnerships. Receiving orders and administration orders are included: the total is the net number of cases administered after consolidations and rescissions. The 1979 figures are only available quarterly.

Figures for company liquidations are only available for England and Wales together.

Press Statements

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions members of his Department have attended company meetings to distribute press statements giving the Government's policy with regard to the internal affairs of the company.

Mr. Pattie: It is not unusual for press officers from my Department to attend press conferences held by companies sponsored by my Department. On this occasion, as at other events, their attendance was agreed by the company, which assisted with the distribution of my Department's press release.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people have been employed by his Department's press and public relations office in each of the past five years; and what has been the annual budget for that office over the same period.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 280.]: My Department's press and public relations activities span the whole of information division and the BOTB's publicity unit. The following figures therefore relate to all specialist and support staff in those areas of work as at 1 April each year. The staff costs are at historic prices.

	Staff	£
1981	*138	*1,384
1982	*130	*1,261
1983	*115	*1,065
1984	96	1,385
1985	†127	1,438

* Figures for 1981, 1982 and 1983 are totals of the figures for the separate Department of Trade and Department of Industry, which were combined into the Department of Trade and Industry in June 1983.

† Increase reflects an organisational change between Divisional responsibilities.

Regional Development and Selective Assistance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for each year until 1989 his estimate in real terms at 1985 prices, of expenditure on (a) regional development grants and (b) regional selective assistance; if he will list expenditure on both in 1979-80 and 1984-85 at 1985 prices; and if he will provide an estimate of expenditure on regional development grant and selective assistance for each regional area for 1979-80, 1984-85, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 281]: I regret that the information the hon. Gentleman seeks is not readily available. However, I shall be writing to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Funerals

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward proposals for price control of funerals.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 322]: No.

TRANSPORT

Airport Security

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make make a statement on security at Gatwick airport;

(2) what guidance he has given to the British Airports Authority on the issue of temporary passes at British Airports Authority establishments;

(3) what guidance he has given to the British Airports Authority on the hiring of cleaning staff at British Airports Authority establishments.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department has asked the BAA to investigate the recent attempts by a newspaper reporter to breach security procedures at Gatwick. We shall then consider with the BAA and the airlines concerned what remedial action is necessary. Large numbers of staff need to go airside at airports. We have given airport authorities general advice on the issuing of airside passes and on the need to give the staff concerned security briefings. Currently we are considering ways in which the issuing of airside passes can be strictly controlled by airports. Airlines have long been advised by the Department to control access to their aircraft and to ensure that aircraft are brought into service free from hazard.

Leeds Road System

Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Transport when his proposed study of the Leeds road system will begin; who will be on the study team; and if he will impose a time limit on the deliberations of this study.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am still considering these questions, and I will write to my hon. Friend when I have reached conclusions.

Roads (Speed Limit)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider legislation to seek to reduce the maximum speed limit on British roads to 55 m.p.h.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No.

Salisbury Railway Station

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the total revenue value of ticket sales at Salisbury railway station in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms in each of the past 10 years;

(2) if he will list the number of staff employed at Salisbury railway station and the total real wage bill in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. David Mitchell: These are management matters for British Rail.

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the value of (a) capital expenditure and (b) repairs and maintenance at Salisbury railway station in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. David Mitchell: I do not collect this detailed information, which is entirely a matter for British Rail.

London-Exeter Railway (Investment)

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total investment in the London to Exeter railway system via Salisbury in each of the past 10 years; and whether he has plans for future investment.

Mr. David Mitchell: I do not collect this detailed information, which is a matter for British Rail. It is for the board to come forward with future investment plans.

Central London (Travel Statistics)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the number of people travelling to work in the central area of London by car, motor cycle and bicycle in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Estimates of passenger traffic entering central London daily between 7 am and 10 am for each of the years 1980 to 1984 are given in table 1.4 of "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1974-1984", which is available in the Library.

Airports (Libyan Student Engineers)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many Libyan student engineers are in training at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) any other airports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I shall answer this question shortly.

British Rail Engineering Ltd.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the plans for the privatisation of British Rail Engineering Ltd.

Mr. David Mitchell: We have given the chairman of the British Railways Board a remit to review options for the future of BREL, including the possibility of privatisation. The board has recently announced some organisational changes which it considers to be necessary irrespective of the future ownership of the company.

British Rail

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy not to consent to any British Rail investment which would involve the acquisition of any locomotives built outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is for the British Railways Board to decide where it places its orders. The chairman has made it clear that the board would prefer to buy British goods, provided the designs and prices offer the best value to BR.

THE ARTS

Works of Art

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will reduce from £16,000 to £8,000 the value at which works of art and scientific objects require export licences.

Mr. Luce: No. The value at which works of art, including scientific objects, require specific export licences was increased from £8,000 to £16,000 in May 1985 following a recommendation from the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art which advises me in such cases. There are no reasons to revise these valuations at present.

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether he has received any representations from heritage bodies or individuals with regard to the sale and subsequent export of works of art originating from semi-public bodies and the Church authorities; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Yes. I have received representations from a number of museum bodies and individuals with regard to the sale and proposed export of the George Brown ethnograpical collection by Newcastle university. I am aware of no representations in respect of works of art originating from the Church authorities.

European Museum of the Year Scheme

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the future of the European Museum of the Year scheme.

Mr. Luce: The European Museum of the Year scheme is a private venture which has hitherto been financed mainly by sponsorship, and its future is a matter for its organisers. It has not received any Government funds from my arts budget, and I am not in a position to offer such funds now.

George Brown Ethnographic Collection

Mr. Beith asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the future of the George Brown ethnographic collection owned by the university of Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Luce: I have received representations from a number of museum bodies and individuals with regard to the sale and proposed export of the George Brown ethnographical collection by the Newcastle upon Tyne university.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Maternal Deaths

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of (a) direct maternal deaths, (b) indirect maternal deaths and (c) associated maternal deaths in England and Wales following caesarian section in each year since 1979 for which figures are available; what is his estimate of the total number of women delivered by caesarian section in each year; and what is the estimated fatality rate per 1,000 caesarian sections.

Mr. Whitney: Information in the form requested is not at present available. The table shows the estimated number of caesarean sections for England and Wales for 1979-83.

The figures for 1982 and 1983 are not comparable with the earlier years because they have been estimated on a different basis. Part of the apparent increase in the numbers of caesarean sections in 1982 and 1983 is probably due to an underestimation of the numbers of caesarean sections in the earlier years.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of sets of (a) triplets, (b) quadruplets, (c) quintuplets and (d) sextuplets born each year in England and Wales since 1970 for which figures are available; and if he will specify, in each case, how many of the pregnancies followed (i) in vitro fertilisation and (ii) the use of drugs for treatment for infertility.

Mr. Whitney: The table gives the available statistics about multiple births. The other information is not collected centrally.

Reye's Syndrome

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many reported cases of Reye's syndrome there have been in each of the years 1981 to 1985.

Mr. Whitney: The following figures of reported cases of Reye's syndrome have been obtained from the communicable disease surveillance centre, which since August 1981 has run a surveillance scheme jointly with the British Paediatric Association. The cases are those which meet either the clinical and biochemical or the histological criteria as used in their case definition for Reye's syndrome.

The figures may not agree with those quoted in the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Mr. Patten) to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 5 June 1985 at column 186 as there can be a considerable interval between the onset and the reporting of the disease. In particular, figures for the most recent year will be incomplete because cases continue to be reported.

Bexley Health Authority

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any representations about the funding of Bexley health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Representations have been received from three hon. and right hon. Members. The funding of Bexley health authority is a matter for the South-East Thames regional health authority. The region is fully aware of the financial situation in Bexley and further discussions on this will be held shortly between the two authorities.

Traffic Accidents (Emergency Treatment Fee)

Mr. Batiste asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he will take steps to abolish the road traffic accident emergency treatment fee.

Mr. Hayhoe: In announcing the Government's decision to abolish the fee which health authorities may charge for providing emergency treatment following a road traffic accident, my predecessor said, and I reiterate, that legislation will be introduced at the earliest convenient opportunity.

Social Index of Deprivation

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of health authorities cover districts which score more favourably than Camberwell on the Department of Environment social index of deprivation.

Mr. Whitney: It is not possible to give a precise answer as the index to which the hon. Member refers relates to local authority districts, which in many cases are no conterminous with health authority areas. Of the 366 local authority districts covered by the social deprivation indicators, 98 per cent. score more favourably than the London borough of Southwark, which includes the Camberwell health authority area.

NHS (Computer Posts)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many computer posts within the National Health Service offering salaries of between £10,000 and £20,000 are currently vacant; and what steps he intends to take to match levels of pay for such posts to those awarded for similar posts in the private sector.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not available in the form requested.

In a report specially commissioned by regional health authority chairmen and published earlier this month, it was stated that there was a 15 per cent. overall vacancy level in National Health Service systems development staff and that there were indications that this was rising. As a result, the administrative and clerical staffs Whitley Council has been asked to review its agreements as they relate to computer staff with a view to alleviating the present problems of recruitment and retention. As an interim measure, last year's pay settlement in the Whitley Council increased existing allowances paid to computer staff and created additional entitlements.

War Disablement Pensions

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applicants there have been for war disablement pensions arising from exposure to mustard gas in world war 2 since 1975, giving in each case (a) the date of application and (b) when the information concerning exposure to mustard gas became available.

Mr. Major: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hammersmith Hospital

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the average cost per inpatient week and inpatient case treated in the Hammersmith hospital for the last five years; and what was (a) the annual revenue cost of this hospital and (b) the extent of the revenue protection provided outwith the resource allocation working party formula allocation for those years.

Mr. Hayhoe: The costs for Hammersmith hospital are as shown in the table:

Year	Average cost per inpatient week £	Average cost per inpatient case £	Annual Revenue cost £
1980-81	658·42	938·09	20,573,208
1981-82	755·98	1,057·83	24,194,465
1982-83	807·41	1,083·61	24,946,206
1983-84	859·64	1,111·64	26,820,532
1984-85	920·37	1,132·53	28,695,812

The resource allocation working party formula does not apply to the special health authorities of the London postgraduate teaching hospitals.

Social Security Advisory Committee

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what criteria he makes appointments to the Social Security Advisory Committee.

Mr. Newton: Members are appointed to the Social Security Advisory Committee for the expertise and experience which they can bring to the fulfilment of the committee's role of tendering advice and assistance on social security and housing benefit matters to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Social Services and for Northern Ireland. In accordance with the requirements of schedule 3 to the Social Security Act 1980 one member is appointed after consultation with organisations representative of employers, one after consultation with organisations representative of workers, and one after consultation with the head of the Department of Health and Social Services for Northern Ireland. In addition, at least one member must have experience of work among and the needs of the chronically sick and disabled and this member should if possible be a chronically sick or disabled person.

Income Disregard

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current figure for income disregard in respect of old people admitted to local authority homes; when this figure was last changed; how it compares with the income disregard for supplementary benefit; what representations he has received in respect of the case for adjusting it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Invalid Care Allowance

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the statistical assumptions which have led him to estimate that if the invalid care allowance were extended to married women it would cost an extra £85 million a year.

Mr. Newton: The origin of the estimate is a sample survey of attendance allowance beneficiaries carried out in 1982, with relative proportions applied in line with the growth in the estimated number of attendance allowance beneficiaries since 1982. A take-up of 90 per cent. was assumed, and 95 per cent. confidence levels applied. £85 million was the mid-point of the resulting range of estimates.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of local authorities in which more than 50 per cent. of ratepayers are receiving housing benefit which meets 100 per cent. of their rates liability; and if he will name these authorities.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why it has been decided that the whole of the annuity in home income plans is to be treated as income for the purposes of housing benefit entitlement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The current guidance to local authorities, consolidated in a manual issued last summer, reflects the legal advice we have received on how life annuities and home income plans should be treated when assessing entitlement to housing benefit.

McColl Report

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is yet in a position to state when the McColl committee report on artificial limbs and appliances will be published.

Mr. Newton: Yes. It is being published today.

Sir Hugh Rossi asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is now in a position to publish the report of the working party on the services of artificial limb and appliance centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy when the McColl committee report has been published to hold discussions with the relevant trade unions about its recommendations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The report of the working party chaired by Professor Ian McColl is being published today, and I am placing copies in the Library of the House. I am grateful to Professor McColl and his colleagues for the effort they have devoted to its preparation, and to my hon. Friend for the part he played in initiating this review.

We set up the working party because of our concern that there were shortcomings in the services we provide for disabled people. As there had been no comprehensive review of the subject since it was transferred to the Ministry of Health in 1953, we thought it right to have an independent group carry out a detailed appraisal of these services and make recommendations for future development.

The working party, while acknowledging the good work done over the years by artificial limb and appliance centres, has confirmed that the services are falling below standard in several respects. It has identified a number of matters which must be tackled vigorously if the quality of care we want for patients is to be secured and delivered efficiently and economically.

A number of deficiencies identified by the working party are already being tackled. For example, wheelchair styling has been improved, and a new basic wheelchair for occasional use is to be introduced shortly; new lightweight artificial limbs which compare very favourably with overseas products are now being supplied; steps have been taken to improve management co-ordination and the information available to managers; and progress has been made in improving financial control and reducing costs.

Further improvements should follow from the consultancy study, which we expect to commission shortly, on the wider use of computers in the services. In the light of the report we shall also give special attention to improving appointments and transport for patients, on which an operational research study is now being planned.

Many of the working party's recommendations will require consultation with professional, staff and other interests, and we shall open these consultations at once.

The working party's recommendations on organisational structure require particularly careful consideration. I have asked the NHS Management Board, which contains much experience of business and management, to advise me on this and to oversee the whole programme of action for developing these services.

I am pleased that the working party pays tribute to the dedication of the staff who man the services of artificial limb and appliance centres. I am glad to endorse this, and to express my confidence in the full support of the staff in improving these vital services for many disabled people.

Artificial Limbs

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what initiatives he has taken to resolve the contractual dispute between his Department and the companies that supply and fit artificial limbs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Interim prices for the supply and fitting of artificial limbs from 1 January 1986 have been negotiated with the major companies. Negotiations on final prices and contractual terms will be continued shortly, and the Department will be seeking to discuss contracting arrangements beyond 1986 with the firms in the light of the McColl report.

NHS (Administrative Structure)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services following the Griffiths report, what steps he is taking to ensure that the expertise of the nursing profession can be exercised in the administrative structure of National Health Service hospitals and that health authorities are made aware of the views of the Royal College of Nursing.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities are already very well aware that the Government recognise and value the contribution that nurses can and do make to the management of the National Health Service and to health care directly. Every health authority is required to identify a chief nursing adviser whose main responsibility will be to provide advice to the authority itself and to its managers on professional nursing matters, and on the nursing aspects of other issues. The views of the Royal College of Nursing have been made known through its own publicity campaign.

Death Statistics

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of (a) men and (b) women over the age of 65 years who have died (i) in the winter months and (ii) in the summer months in each year since 1979 to the latest available year (A) nationally and (B) in each standard economic planning region.

Mr. Whitney: The readily available information is shown in the table. "Winter months" have been taken as the March quarter (January, February and March), and "summer months" as the September quarter (July, August and September).

Electroconvulsive Therapy

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what extent electroconvulsive therapy is still used within the National Health Service for the treatment of depressive illness and manic-depressive psychosis; and what advice his Department is giving to health authorities as to the clinical circumstances under which electro-convulsive therapy should be given to patients in preference to anti-depressant drugs.

Mr. Whitney: The numbers of courses of treatment given annually from 1979-84 are given in the table. National Health Service statistics do not show the diagnosis of the patients for whom it was prescribed. The Department does not give advice on the types of treatment to give to patients; National Health Service doctors will be aware of a number of recently published research studies. These bear on the question of for which patients electroconvulsive therapy is likely to be the treatment of choice.

Leeds (Rothwell Office)

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he will take to prevent additional expense falling on claimants in the Rothwell area of Leeds arising from the need to travel to Leeds, following the closure of the Rothwell office of his Department.

Mr. Major: A caller office will be open for inquiries at Rothwell during normal office hours. For those needing to travel to Leeds, the Department's standard rules for refunding travelling expenses will apply. Where it would be difficult for a person to travel to Leeds, for instance because of sickness or disability, a home visit may be made.

Community Care Scheme

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the organisations and projects which have received funding to date under the helping the community to care scheme; and how much each has received;

(2) how many organisations have applied for funding to date under the helping the community to care scheme; and of these how many have been successful.

Mr. Whitney: The helping the community to care programme consists of 12 distinct elements and a variety of organisations have accepted the Department's invitation to participate in their management. Expenditure figures for 1985-86 are not yet available but we estimate that total expenditure will be about £1,364,000.

The information that follows gives a brief description of each element and indicates which organisations are involved in its management. The figures show expenditure in 1984-85.

HELPING THE COMMUNITY TO CARE

1. Home from hospital schemes for elderly patients (£13,500)

A three year project to set up demonstration projects to ensure basic care so that elderly patients discharged from hospital can settle in again at home. Age Concern, the British Red Cross Society and the Continuing Care Project will manage the schemes.

2. Information and training for carers of elderly people suffering from incontinence (£8,500)

A two year project to produce guidelines and materials for training programmes about the problems and management of incontinence in elderly people, both for professional staff, especially GPs, nurses (and social services staff) and also for informal carers and volunteers. The work is being managed by the King's Fund and Age Concern.

3. Support for elderly members of ethnic minorities (—)

A three year project to produce and run a training programme for volunteers working with ethnic minority elderly people and to set up demonstration projects to develop services for them. Age Concern and the Standing Conference of Ethnic Minority Senior Citizens will manage some of the activities; other applications are being considered.

4. Development officers for self help/mutual aid groups (£14,000)

To provide an opportunity to develop and gain experience from the support of informal self help/mutual aid groups. This will be achieved by providing funding for 18 well designed and managed projects. Careful monitoring will enable experience to be used constructively and fed into future developments on a wider basis. The scheme is being managed by a group of national voluntary organisations who are termed the Self Help Alliance.

5. After-care for patients with chronic schizophrenia (£23,000)

Three projects in Southampton, Salford and Hackney for the development of systems designed to improve the follow-up and co-ordination arrangements for chronic schizophrenic patients and information packages for sufferers and their families. The Health Authorities in these districts are managing the schemes.

6. Industrial therapy advice unit (£12,000)

To help the British Institute of Industrial Therapy to fund a small advice unit and associated services which will encourage and support the development of viable and potentially self-financing community industrial therapy units. The units will aim to provide long term employment and training opportunities for mentally disordered people living in the community.

7. Open University course on community care for mentally handicapped people (£50,000)

To assist MENCAP and the Open University to develop the first phase of a course on mental handicap for care staff and the families of mentally handicapped people.

8. Community Resource Centre for Mentally Handicapped People (—)

To fund Dr. Barnardo's for the conversion of a large residential unit in Woodford Bridge, London into a general community centre for mentally handicapped people and their families and for the initial running costs of the centre. The centre will support the recruitment and training of carers, as well as providing a centre for information and self-help activities.

9. Information and Training for Informal Carers (£12,000)

To increase understanding of the needs of informal carers and to identify the various means of support; to identify and develop educational resources which can contribute to meeting these needs; to identify how these resources might reach carers and to explore ways in which front-line professionals might increase their support for informal carers. The King's Fund is managing this scheme.

10. Demonstration Districts for Informal Carers (—)

Three demonstration districts are being established (in East Sussex, Stockport, and Sandwell), to explore and expand the range of services provided by the voluntary sector to assist informal carers. Voluntary sector consortia in each area will manage the schemes and work in partnership with statutory services.

11. Family Self Help Centres (£10,000)

Family centres which provide social recreational services for the community can also help to give support to families at risk or already under stress. This may reduce delinquency or diminish the need to take children into care. The Department is therefore encouraging the setting up and development of self help family centres as a preventive social services measure. The Department also wishes to sponsor demonstration projects for community services providing information and help for families seeking day-care for pre-school children.

The Department has sponsored the National Children's Bureau to carry out a preliminary study to collect information about the various models of family centres and current practice in the field and a further short term study by NCB is underway. Other work is being considered.

12. Asian Mother and Baby Campaign (£123,000)

This is a partnership between DHSS, Save the Children Fund and health authorities. The aim is to improve the accessibility, acceptability and uptake of antenatal care for Asian mothers. The means are a health education campaign and the employment of "link-workers", women with a good knowledge of English and at least one Asian language whose role is to improve communication and mutual understanding between Asian mothers and health professionals.

Refugees and Asylum Seekers

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consult the British Refugee Council concerning the social security needs of refugees and asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The British Refugee Council submitted extensive evidence for the review of social security. We will continue to take its views into account as we consider the detail of the new income support scheme.

Regional Health Authorities

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library copies of all letters sent to regional health authority chairmen following the review processes, and the documents submitted by regional health authorities in accordance with the action plans attached to those letters.

Mr. Hayhoe: Copies of ministerial review follow-up letters and action plans are routinely placed in the Library. These contain a summary of the action taken by regions on the preceding year's action plan. If the hon. Member wishes to pursue any particular points arising out of the reviews might I suggest she approaches the regional health authorities direct.

Social Workers (Training)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has received recent proposals for training social workers from the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We have received the council's resolution on qualifying training which includes an instruction to its officers to initiate discussions on the resources required to implement its recommendations. Officials of the Department and the other Departments concerned are at present working with the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work to identify the implications for the various parties who would be involved.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide detailed information about the numbers of people, in each of the last three years, living in Bradford, in receipt of family income supplement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information is not available. Family income supplement claims are dealt with by one centre at Blackpool and no information is maintained about claims from particular local areas.

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the number and percentage of teachers in receipt of family income supplement.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information is not available. Teachers are included for family income supplement statistical purposes in a general group which covers administrative, social, professional and technical workers and a breakdown by individual occupation is not possible.

Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha, a Libyan national resident in Wiltshire, is in receipt of any social security benefits.

Mr. Major: It is the Department's policy not to give information about any individual without their permission.

Fraud Investigators

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many fraud investigators his Department employs; and what is his estimate of the amount of public money they saved in 1985.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Hospital Beds (Occupancy Rate)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the occupancy rate for hospital beds at The Stone House, Bishop's Castle, for the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how this figure compares with each of the other National Health Service hospitals in Shropshire.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Board and Lodging

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the number of exemptions in each board and lodging regulations exemption category for claimants, under 26 years, who have claimed since 25 November 1985 in Tyne and Wear; and how many of these exemptions are under the exceptional hardship category;

(2) what is the present live case load of board and lodging claims by those under 26 years who have claimed after 25 November 1985 in Tyne and Wear;

(3) what is the number of claimants under 26 years since 25 November 1985 who have been granted an exemption from his Department's board and lodging time restrictions in Tyne and Wear.

Mr. Newton: The Department's local offices do not keep separate statistics on the number of board and lodging claims made by persons aged under 26 years. The information is not therefore readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. No requests for exemption under the exceptional hardship category have been received from claimants in this area.

Social Security (Reform)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many working households with children currently receive (a) both family income supplement and housing benefit; (b) just family income supplement; and (c) just housing benefit, and how many, under the structural proposals in Cmnd. 9691 will receive (i) both family credit and housing benefit; (ii) just family credit; and (iii) just housing benefit.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 596]: Reliable estimates of the numbers of working households with children currently receiving housing benefit are not available, and the actual position following the introduction of family credit would depend on the rates of benefit set. The estimates shown in the table are therefore necessarily approximate and should only be taken as indicating the orders of magnitude involved on the basis of the illustrative figures in the technical annex to the White Paper. They have been calculated on the same basis as the estimates of numbers within various bands of marginal tax rates given in my reply to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 13 January at column 594.

Estimated number of working families with children receiving the benefits quoted

Family Income Supplement (FIS) and Housing Benefit*†	200,000
FIS only*†	20,000
Housing Benefit only	280,000

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Representatives

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the hon. Member for Wokingham, as representing the Church Commissioners, if he will publish in the Official Report the names and length of tenure of all hon. Members representing the Church Commissioners during the past 30 years.

Sir William van Straubenzee: The information is as follows:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Incomes

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the income of a small, medium and large farm in England and Wales as an average of all the sections listed in table 27 of the "Annual Review of Agriculture", Cmnd. 9708.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested is given in the following table:

Net farm income for different sizes of farm 1984-85 (£ per farm)

	Size of business
	Small	Medium	Large
England	3,074	10,535	36,867
Wales	2,834	9,933	22,488

Notes:

(a) Size groups are as defined in table 27 of the White Paper on the annual review of agriculture 1986 (Cmnd. 9708).

(b) Figures given in the table include incomes of farm types not included in table 27 of the annual review of agriculture 1986 White Paper because of insufficient sample size.

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what causes he attributes the fact that incomes of dairy farmers in Northern Ireland, as indicated in table 27 of the "Annual Review of Agriculture", Cmnd. 9708, are approximately double those of other United Kingdom dairy farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Net farm income, the measure used in table 27 of the White Paper on the annual review of agriculture 1986 (Cmnd. 9708), comprises total farm output less total costs except for the labour of the farmer and his spouse. Because net farm income is the residual between relatively large aggregates of output and costs, small changes to either of these components can have a significant effect on the calculated level of income. Weather factors in a particular year can also exert a considerable influence on outputs and inputs and hence on the level of net farm income achieved.

Between 1983-84 and 1984-85, the first year of milk quotas, the value of milk output declined by less in Northern Ireland than elsewhere. This was largely because the drought conditions experienced in Great Britain during the summer of 1984 were less severe in Northern Ireland. Output from enterprises other than dairying is more important on dairy farms in Northern Ireland than in Great Britain. In 1984-85 the value of this output increased in Northern Ireland but fell in the other countries.

Total input costs on dairy farms were also lower in Northern Ireland than in Great Britain. Given the more favourable weather conditions experienced in Northern Ireland in the summer of 1984, dairy farmers there were able to make large quantities of good quality fodder. This was not the case in Great Britain and feed costs on small dairy farms in Northern Ireland were well below those on equivalent farms elsewhere in the United Kingdom. Labour costs also tend to be lower in Northern Ireland where the farmer's own labour (which is not treated as a cost in the derivation of net farm income) accounts for a higher proportion of total farm labour input.

Agricultural Holdings

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, with regard to table 27 of the "Annual Review of Agriculture", Cmnd. 9708, what are the numbers of holdings which comprise small, medium and large businesses; and what these are in percentages of the total number of holdings.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested is given in the following table:

Numbers of holdings by size of farm, United Kingdom June 1984

	Size of business
	Small	Medium	Large
Number of full-time holdings ('000)	70·0	51·6	31·9
Percentage of full-time holdings	45·6	33·6	20·8

Notes:

(a) Size groups are as defined in table 27 of the White Paper on the annual review of agriculture 1986 (Cmnd. 9708).

(b) Figures given in the table exclude agricultural holdings classed as part-time. These part-time holdings are estimated to account for less than 5 per cent. of agricultural production.

(c) Expressed as a proportion of all holdings, including part-time holdings, percentages would be approximately as follows:

	Percentage
Small	27
Medium	20
Large	12

Agricultural Improvement Scheme Grants

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the take-up rate of the new agricultural improvement scheme grants in the United Kingdom and in Cumbria.

Mrs. Fenner: The agriculture improvement scheme came into operation on 1 October 1985. Up to 31 December 1985, 1,109 applications were received in the United Kingdom for the approval of plans under the scheme. Twenty seven of these came from Cumbria.

These figures are unlikely to reflect the real level of interest in the scheme, because applicants must complete outstanding work on other capital grant schemes before new plans can be approved. This will delay some applications.

The scheme also provides grants for certain investments for which prior approval of plans is not required. My Department does not have information on the take-up rate for these investments.

Flood Protection

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress with the Barnstaple flood protection scheme and coastal protection measures along the north Devon coastline.

Mrs. Fenner: I understand that the South-West water authority is making good progress on the work needed to defend Barnstaple and other work on the river Taw and its estuary.

Rabies and Foot and Mouth Disease

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans his Department has to protect the United Kingdom from rabies when the Channel tunnel is built;

(2) what plans his Department has to protect United Kingdom farmers and their stock from foot and mouth disease when the Channel tunnel is built.

Mrs. Fenner: The Government's policy will continue to be to provide for enforcement of controls designed to minimise the risk of importing these diseases. They will insist on practical arrangements being made by operators of the Channel fixed link to apply the necessary precautions.

Import Levies

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the current import levies on the various foodstuffs provided with protection under the common agricultural policy; and if he will show the figures in terms of pence per pound weight.

Mr. Gummer: Details of import levies on foodstuffs under the common agricultural policy are published in the Official Journal of the European Communities, copies of which are deposited in the Library of the House. Import levies applicable to foodstuffs on 13 January 1986 were published in the following official journals:

The import levies are set in ECU per unit weight. One ECU-tonne converted at the United Kingdom agricultural conversion rate is equal to 0·028062 pence-pound.

Export Rebates

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the current export rebates on the various foodstuffs provided with disposal assistance under the common agricultural policy; and if he will show the figures in terms of pence per pound weight.

Mr. Gummer: Details of export refunds for foodstuffs under the common agricultural policy are published in the Official Journal of the European Communities, copies of which are deposited in the Library of the House. Export refunds applicable on 13 January 1986 were published in the following official journals.

Farmer's Lung

Dr. Mark Hughes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will use his best endeavours to bring to the attention of the farming community in England the high risk of farmer's lung this winter following 1985's wet hay harvest.

Mrs. Fenner: Yes. A number of Agricultural Development and Advisory Service published articles, local radio broadcasts and promotional events have already drawn attention to these risks and advisers are continuing to provide appropriate warnings in the course of their general advisory activities.

Seed Peas (Cultivar Belinda)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the effect of the current restrictions on the sale of the seed pea variety Belinda on the United Kingdom seed industry in relation to the same industry in other European Economic Community member states.

Mrs. Fenner: We have received representations to the effect that our action in imposing restrictions on the sale of stocks of pea seed infected with pea bacterial blight is not paralleled in other member states. This is, however, a serious disease, prohibited in intra-Community trade, and a means must be found of protecting our crops from it.

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will lift immediately the current holding orders on second generation seed peas of the cultivar Belinda;

(2) what evidence has been found of the existence of the disease pseudomonas syringae in stocks of the Belinda pea seed; and what recommendations he is making to those in the pea seed industry who are in possession of such stocks;

(3) when his officials first investigated the instance of the disease pseudomonas syringae in Belinda pea seed; what action has been taken by officials of his Department; and when he expects to make a statement indicating whether such stocks should be withdrawn.

Mrs. Fenner: We hope to announce shortly how the stocks of protein pea seed which are infected with pea bacterial blight may be used. This serious disease was found last September in a sample taken from a crop. My officials traced the related stocks. Since then these stocks have been held under statutory notices. Sowing or sale for sowing is prohibited but controlled movement for compounding into animal feed or for other approved uses is allowed. A statistically based sampling programme was instituted and laboratory tests found infection in 10 out of 15 samples from the suspect stocks. We shall need to continue to control the infected stocks so long as this is necessary to avoid risk of spreading the disease.

Bracken

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government intend pursuing a bracken eradication programme in the near future.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 24 January 1986, c. 342]: We have no plans to introduce a bracken eradication programme. My Ministry already makes grants available for bracken control.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the favoured means of dealing with the encroachment of bracken on to agricultural land; and if he will make a statement as to the extent of bracken coverage in the United Kingdom and the problems this poses.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 24 January 1986, c. 342]: The Agricultural Development and Advisory Service provides information to farmers on various methods for controlling or eradicating bracken including ploughing, cutting or crushing fronds, use of heavy stocking rates and treatment with appropriate herbicides particularly from the air. The main problem is the encroachment on good grazing land and general access in many upland areas. The decision on the particular method to be used is left to the farmer in the light of local circumstances. Bracken contains poisonous substances which can cause unthriftiness or death in animals which consume the fern in sufficient quantity.

Official statistics are not collected on the area of bracken in the United Kingdom but estimates put forward by research organisations suggest that between 160,000 and 200,000 hectares of land in England and Wales are infested with bracken.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Executive

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total cost of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's activities in the last financial year; and what figures in respect of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive are available to indicate (a) the dwelling stock, (b) the collectable rent which should have been received from tenants, (c) expenditure on repairs and maintenance of stock, (d) expenditure on new buildings, (e) expenditure on rehabilitation of stock, (f) expenditure on salaries and administration, (g) expenditure on grants to the private sector, (h) expenditure incurred on interest charges and (i) grant received from the Department of the Environment.

Mr. Needham: The total cost of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's activities in 1984-85 was £482·8 million and in the current financial year is estimated at £501·8 million. The following figures are available for 1985-86 in respect of the executive's expenditure blocks which are most closely related to the information sought:

(a) Effective dwelling stock—174810 (at December 1985)

(b) Gross collectable rent (dwellings and garages)—£131·6 million (estimated)

(c) Expenditure on housing and grounds maintenance — £52·9 million (estimated)

(d) Expenditure on new housebuilding — £82·3 million (estimated)

(e) Expenditure on improvement of the existing stock — £77·4 million (estimated)

(f) Expenditure on supervision and management — £36·3 million (estimated)

(g) Expenditure on House Renovation Grants — £60·2 million (estimated)

(h) Expenditure on Loan Charges — £168·3 million (estimated)

(i) Grant from the Department of the Environment — £194·9 million (estimated)

Maryfield (Security)

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been taken to increase security at Maryfield and to protect civil servants working for the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Tom King: Appropriate security measures have been taken by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. For obvious reasons, I will not describe the measures in detail.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets have been fired in Northern Ireland since the beginning of the current year; in what circumstances; in what locations the bullets were fired; and how many persons were injured as a result of the use of plastic bullets.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many formal complaints have been made about incidents of police use of plastic baton rounds in 1985 and the year to date; in how many cases the complaint has been upheld; and in how many cases disciplinary action has been taken against the officers involved.

Mr. Scott: During 1985 six formal complaints were made concerning the use of plastic baton rounds by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Three were later withdrawn and the others are still under investigation. To date in 1986 (19 January) no formal complaints have been made concerning the use of baton rounds by the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many firearms, by type, namely, handguns, rifles, shotguns or fully automatic weapons, were seized by the security forces in Northern Ireland in the latest calendar year and to date; and for each type, how many were legally held weapons stolen by terrorist organisations from: (i) civilians, (ii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, (iii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, (iv) the Ulster Special Constabulary, (v) the Ulster Defence Regiment and (vi) the regular Army.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Teachers

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many teachers are in post in Northern Ireland in the current school year; and how many he plans will be in post in Northern Ireland in the school year commencing 1 September 1986;

(2) how many compulsory redundancies of teachers there have been in controlled schools in Northern Ireland in each of the past three years; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what plans he has to introduce a teachers' redeployment scheme in the controlled and voluntary schools in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Farmer's Lung

Dr. Mark Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will use his best endeavours to bring to the attention of the farming community in Northern Ireland the high risk of farmer's lung this winter following 1985's wet hay harvest.

Dr. Boyson: Yes; steps have already been taken to make sure the danger is fully understood by the farming community. The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland's advisory staff and the farm safety officers will continue to publicise the dangers.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Civil Service

Mr. Alexander asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of Civil Service posts abolished since 1979; and what are the consequent savings to the Exchequer.

Mr. Brooke: Between 1 April 1979 and 1 October 1985, the number of civil servants fell by 136,511 (an overall reduction of 18·6 per cent.) This represents an estimated net reduction in the pay bill of over £¾ billion.

Capital Allowances

Mr. Murphy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding capital allowances and their maintenance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about various aspects of recent changes to the capital allowance system. Capital allowances will continue in force and, from April 1986, their basis will more closely reflect commercial depreciation.

Electoral Register

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the electoral register is used in conjunction with information held by the Inland Revenue; and whether there are any plans to use it in that respect when it is available in machine readable form.

Mr. Moore: Tax offices buy a copy of the local electoral register and use it to check the identity and address of a sample of claimants to tax repayments for internal security purposes. There are at present no plans for any other routine use by the Inland Revenue when the register becomes available in machine readable form.

North Sea Oil Revenues

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has revised the forecast of North Sea oil revenues set out in the Autumn Statement in consequence of the recent changes in the price of oil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: Recent changes in the oil price will have little effect on the Autumn Statement forecast of Government revenues from United Kingdom oil and gas production in 1985-86 since these revenues are dependent mainly on the price of oil delivered in the period up to the end of 1985. Provisional estimates of Government revenues from United Kingdom oil and gas production in 1985-86 will be published in the 1986-87 financial statement and Budget report.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the £117,917,000 being paid to the European Economic Community under article 10(2) of Council Regulation 2891/77 represents an actual increase in European Economic Community contributions by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why he has agreed to pay to the European Economic Community an additional £18,000,000 in consequence of a decision by the European Parliament to recommend increases in the Community Budget for 1986.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 22 January at columns 197-98.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Steen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the effect on the number of traders making value added tax returns if the value added tax threshold was raised to £100,000;

(2) if he will estimate the effect on value added tax revenues if traders whose throughput is less than £100,000 per annum were excluded from value added tax returns.

Mr. Brooke: It is difficult to predict with confidence the effects of a large rise in the threshold on the number of traders registered and the tax yield; experience suggests that a substantial number of traders who would be eligible to opt out of the value added tax system would, for sound commercial reasons, choose not to do so. I refer my hon. Friend to the estimates for the effects of a rise in the threshold to £50,000 which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 4 December 1985 at column 253. I regret that corresponding figures for an increase to £100,000 would be subject to a proportionately greater degree of uncertainty and could not be regarded as statistically sound.

Mr. Steen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of collecting value added tax.

Mr. Brooke: The cost is £191·3 million in 1984-85 —about one penny for every pound of net revenue.

PRIME MINISTER

Leak Investigations (Immunity from Prosecution)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister what is her policy as Minister for the Civil Service on the use of offers of immunity from prosecution in the course of leak investigations involving civil servants.

The Prime Minister: All matters concerning prosecution or immunity from prosecution are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General.

Pay Comparisons

Mr. Pawsey asked the Prime Minister if she will publish a table to show, for each year since 1968 (a) the percentage by which the average pay of (i) teachers in England and Wales, (ii) civil servants, (iii) nurses, (iv) local government officers and (v) police officers has varied from the mean of all five groups' pay and (b) the mean of those five groups' pay in cash and real terms.

The Prime Minister: The available information which is based on new earnings survey results from 1970 for five national agreements affecting these groups is shown in the table.

Press Office

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 88, which producers of radio and television programmes have been contacted by her press office in the last month for which figures are available; what record is kept of the content of the contacts; and what amplification of the information contained in the Radio Times and the TV Times has resulted.

The Prime Minister: My press office keeps regularly in touch with about seven radio and television current affairs programmes to establish the subjects the producers intend to pursue and the members of the Government they wish, or have arranged, to take part. The current list is LWT's "Weekend World"; BBC TV's "This Week, Next Week" and "Panorama"; BBC Radio 4's "The World this Weekend" and "File on 4"; Granada TV's "World in Action"; and Thames' "TV Eye'. The objective is to amplify the information contained in the Radio Times and TV Times.

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister what are the functions of her press office; how many staff are currently employed there; and what its budget is for the current year.

The Prime Minister: The functions of my press office are to give advice on my own and the Government's relations with the media; to provide a service to press, radio and television; and to co-ordinate the presentation of Government policy.

The office has a staff of eight, including secretarial and other support staff.

The budget for 1986-87 is £280,000, which covers salaries, superannuation, accommodation, travel and subsistence, and general publicity and equipment charges.

Engagements

Mr. Fisher asked the Prime Minister whether she will list her official engagements for Monday 6 January and Tuesday 7 January.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Monday 6 January.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister whether she will list her official engagements for 6 and 7 January.

The Prime Minister: On Monday 6 January and Tuesday 7 January I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others at 10 Downing Street.

Mr. Bernard Ingham

Mr. Fisher asked the Prime Minister on what date Mr. Bernard Ingham made a report to her about his actions on Monday 6 January; and at what time.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the statement I made on 23 January at columns 449-460 and my speech in the debate today.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if she will give a list of the duties performed by her press secretary; and to whom he is directly responsible in day to day matters.

The Prime Minister: My chief press secretary, Mr. Bernard Ingham, deals with all media and public relations matters relating to my office. He is answerable directly to me, and as I told the House on 23 January at column 459 I have great confidence in him.

Westland plc

Dr. Gilbert asked the Prime Minister if the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence was leaked by a member of the private office of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister (1) on what date she was personally informed that the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry had authorised the disclosure of extracts from the letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); and if she will make a statement;

(2) why it was decided not to acknowledge publicly responsibility when the decision was taken to disclose extracts of the letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); and if she will make a statement;

(3) if her press secretary consulted any members of the Cabinet before approving on her behalf the disclosure by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry of extracts from the letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the statement I made in 23 January at columns 449-460 and my speech in the debate today.

Mr. Bell asked the Prime Minister when she first had a sight of the letter which the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) proposed to send to Mr. David Horne, banking adviser to the European Consortium in the Westland affair and which was subsequently sent on 3 January; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: On 4 January 1986.

Mr. Bell asked the Prime Minister what was the cost to public funds of the inquiry into the disclosure of official information in relation to the Westland affair; how many officials were involved; on what dates the inquiry started and finished; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if she will list the officials and their position who carried out the inquiry under the Secretary to the Cabinet into the disclosure of official information relating to the Westland affair; and if she will also list the persons who were interviewed in the course of the inquiry.

The Prime Minister: As I told the House on 23 January at column 452, the inquiry started on 14 January and reported on 22 January. The inquiry was conducted by the Head of the Home Civil Service, assisted by one other official. There was no extra cost to public funds.

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister whether her office was aware that a member of the Department of Trade and Industry would be attending the Westland's meeting of 6 January to distribute the press release about the company's future.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Bell asked the Prime Minister what grounds the Head of the Civil Service had for his belief that the testimony of a particular person to be questioned during his inquiry into the disclosure of official information relating to the Westland affair was sufficiently vital to the inquiry as to justify an approach to the Attorney-General for his consent to a conditional offer of immunity from prosecution; and if she will make a statement.

The Attorney General: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I have just given to his question on this matter. The decision was mine. I was satisfied that the person concerned was uniquely able to give a first-hand account of how the disclosure was made.

European Museum of the Year Scheme

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Prime Minister if, in the light of reductions in the United Kingdom's spending on international cultural affairs arising from the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation, Her Majesty's Government will make it their policy to use some of the savings from withdrawal from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation to provide funds to the European museum of the year scheme; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. The money saved from our contribution to UNESCO will be used to further educational, scientific and other activities designed to benefit developing countries, particularly in the Commonwealth.

Lotus Cars

Mr. Foulkes asked the Prime Minister if she is satisfied with the co-ordination between the Department of Trade and Industry and the Northern Ireland Office in relation to Government policy on action in respect of Lotus Cars and its involvement with de Lorean; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: De Lorean Motor Cars Limited is in receivership and liquidation. Matters arising from the company's affairs are the concern of the joint liquidators, the joint receivers and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. I am satisfied that the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has consulted, where necessary, with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Downing Street (Hospitality)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister pursuant to her reply of 16 January, Official Report, column 628, what is the basis for deciding who is a prominent national of a country represented by a foreign visitor for the purposes of invitations to Downing street dinners; and where the information to provide the basis for such decisions is kept.

The Prime Minister: It is a matter of judgment and common sense.

Nuclear Forces

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister if she is made aware when United States nuclear forces at bases in Britain are put on to a state of alert; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government would expect to be informed.

Mr. Leon Brittan

Dr. Gilbert asked the Prime Minister what recent discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry about his continued membership of the Government.

The Prime Minister: The hon. Member will have seen my exchange of letters with my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan) on 24 January.

Defence Procurement

Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the co-ordination of responsibilities in relation to the placing of major defence equipment orders between the Ministry of Defence and other relevant Departments, so far as the defence procurement policy implications on the one hand and the social and employment consequences, on the other, are concerned.

The Prime Minister: The Ministry of Defence consults, as necessary, with other Government Departments on the industrial and social implications of major defence equipment orders. As I confirmed in the House on 19 December 1985, major procurement decisions are a matter for collective decision.

ENVIRONMENT

Public Sector Housing Stock

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the net and gross amounts spent on repairing the public sector housing stock from (a) the capital account and (b) the current account for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Expenditure on renovation and repair by local authorities in England has been as follows:

	Capital £ million	Current £ million
1979-80	723	691
1980-81	670	863
1981-82	619	939
1982-83	951	1,052
1983-84	1,151	1,199
1984-85	*1,240	*1,254

* Estimated.

These figures relate to expenditure by local authorities on their own stock: they do not include expenditure by housing associations or new towns. It is not possible to provide figures for net capital expenditure on renovation and repairs because it is not known what proportion of such expenditure is funded from capital receipts. Nor is there an appropriate definition of 'net' current expenditure for this purpose.

Housing Construction

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how he intends to ensure that the increased allocation for housing announced in the autumn statement is actually spent on physical construction work.

Sir George Young: The whole of the £200 million increase in gross capital provision for housing for 1986-87 announced in the Autumn Statement has been added to the planned level of local authority capital spending, from which the housing investment programme allocations for individual authorities have been derived. A high proportion of local authority capital spending is directly reflected in physical construction work, and it is on those types of capital expenditure that local authorities have been encouraged to concentrate.

Housing Expenditure

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a breakdown of gross capital expenditure local authority provision for housing in 1985-86 and 1986-87 by (a) housing investment programme allocation, (b) the prescribed proportion of capital receipts, (c) expenditure out of accrued receipts and (d) non-prescribed expenditure.

Sir George Young: For 1985-86, the gross provision for local authority capital spending on housing was £2,324 million, and the housing investment programme allocation total was £1,600 million. For 1986-87 the corresponding figures are £2,532 million and £1,465 million. The calculations used to arrive at the allocation total are based on assumptions about capital receipts and non-prescribed expenditure across all services, rather than specifically for housing.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report (a) any available breakdown and (b) the source, of the repair and maintenance figures given in Cmnd. 9702-II, Part 2, "Additional Analyses," paragraph 24.

Sir George Young: These figures are based on table 1.6 of Housing and Construction Statistics 1974-84, HMSO, published by the Department of the Environment, recording output by the construction industry.

Table 1.6*(a)* shows that in 1984 the industry recorded output of £3,746 million (at current prices) of repair and maintenance work for the public sector excluding Housing. Housing repair and maintenance for the public and private sector totalled £6,251 million, at current prices, of which it is estimated that the public sector accounted for half, approximately £3,100 million. The figure of £6 billion reflects a cautious adjustment to allow for capitalised repair and maintenance subsumed within table 2.18.

Private Rented Accommodation

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to introduce further legislation to stimulate the supply of homes to rent in the private sector during the current Parliament.

Sir George Young: The Government hope to introduce measures to encourage the supply of homes for renting in the private sector, though no proposals for any major reform of the existing legislation are likely to be brought forward during the lifetime of this Parliament.

Urban Programme

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources he is proposing to make available under the urban programme in 1986-87 for partnership and programme authorities.

Mr. John Patten: I am today announcing initial resource allocations to individual partnership and programme authorities totalling £220 million for 1986-87. I am also providing £5 million through the urban programme to support community refurbishment schemes set up in co-operation with the urban housing renewal unit (UHRU). Therefore about £225 million should be available to partnership and programme authorities compared to £224 million initially allocated for 1985-86. Local authorities will receive additional allocations where they support urban regeneration projects through the urban development grant scheme. Additional resources sometimes become available for redistribution within the urban block in the course of the year so initial allocations frequently differ from outturn.

Separately, the £50 million available through the urban housing renewal unit is not yet allocated so individual authorities will be able to supplement their resources by bidding for this.

1986-87 will be the first year of operation of the urban programme management initiative (UPM). The UPM has been discussed in detail with local authority associations, whose ideas resulted in valuable improvements to the system. I welcome their acceptance of the UPM in the revised form. Under the UPM, individual projects will have clear objectives related to the strategy set by the authority in its inner area programme (IAP). Expected outputs of projects will be quantified wherever possible, and overall outputs expected from the IAP will also be expressed in a form that can be aggregated at national level.

The allocations made today are provisional; formal allocations are made after IAPs have been approved. We accept that certain aspects of the UPM cannot operate in full in the first year. However, authorities cannot expect to have their allocations confirmed in full unless the main requirements of the UPM are met and Ministerial Guidelines for the urban programme are followed.

The allocations to the programme authorities are the same in cash terms as those made last year, as is that for the Birmingham partnership, which has an exceptionally large scale of problems and a good record in the effective use of resources. The allocations to individual authorities are:

Authority	Allocation (£ million)
Birmingham	24·5

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will broaden the criteria for urban programme expenditure to enable direct investment by local authorities in local commercial and community enterprises; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 341]: The categories of financial assistance by local authorities to commercial undertakings, including community businesses, which are eligible for Exchequer support under the urban programme are set out in annex A to the Department's letter of 26 March 1984 to designated district authorities in England. There are no plans to amend these categories.

Urban Aid (Merseyside)

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what schemes operating in the Knowsley borough area of Merseyside are funded by urban aid money; and what schemes have operated in the Knowsley borough area of Merseyside in the years 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 which have been funded by urban aid moneys.

Schemes are shown only in the financial year in which they were approved except for 1981-82 which includes revenue schemes approved in previous years but still in receipt of grant in 1981-82.

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what urban aid funding has been provided by the Government to Merseyside, district by district, during 1981 and each subsequent year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The information requested for the year 1981-82 to 1985-86 is as follows:

Urban programme resources (Merseyside) 1981-82—1985-86
Allocation in £ million cash

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Liverpool	17·40	24·98	25·90	28·28	27·41
Knowsley	0·47	1·34	3·96	5·89	7·43
Wirral	2·79	4·95	7·78	7·83	6·27
Sefton	0·88	0·90	3·03	4·36	2·05
St. Helens	0·49	1·41	1·95	1·55	1·77

Notes:
1. Figures include urban programme expenditure by Merseyside county council and in some cases health authorities.
2. From 1982-83, figures include resources made available for special initiatives on Merseyside.
3. Figures are for complete financial not calendar years.
4. Figures for 1985-86 are provisional.

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what central Government funding has been made to the Stockbridge village trust in the current financial year; and how these figures compare with those for each year since 1978-79.

Sir George Young: Stockbridge village trust was established in April 1983 when it embarked upon a major capital development programme for the estate supported in part by the urban programme through Knowsley borough council. Some works undertaken by the trust have also been eligible for derelict land grant. In the current financial year £1·935 million of UP resources have been approved. Urban programme approvals in earlier years are as follows: £1·719 million in 1984-85 and £1·401 million in 1983-84. DLG resources of £0·144 million were also approved in 1984-85.

St. Mary's House, Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has yet received a request from Portsmouth city council for listed building consent to demolish St. Mary's house, Portsmouth.

Mr. Tracey: I have not received a request from Portsmouth city council for listed building consent to demolish St. Mary's house, Portsmouth.

Derelict Land

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what the total acreage of derelict land in England was in (i) 1975 and (ii) 1985, or the last year for which figures are available; and what total acreage of derelict land within those figures is attributable to coal mining activities.

Sir George Young: Surveys of derelict land in England were carried out in 1974 and 1982 and the information requested is available only for those two years as follows:

	Acres
	1974	1982
Total amount of derelict land in England	106,900	112,800
Of which spoil heaps account for	32,400	32,900
Of which colliery spoil heaps account for	*	12,500

* Not available.

Land Reclamation

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was spent by the Government, local authorities and the National Coal Board on land reclamation in England in (i) 1975 and (ii) 1985, or the last year for which figures are available; and what acreage of land was reclaimed by each body.

Sir George Young: The information requested is as follows:

	1974-75 £ million	1984-85 £ million
Expenditure incurred by local authorities on approved reclamation schemes	8·2	66·4
Derelict Land Grant (DLG) paid in Central Government to las.	11·7	64·5

	Acres	Acres
Derelict land reclaimed by local authorities with the aid of DLG	2,235	3,073
Derelict land reclaimed by local authorities without the aid of DLG	259	*

* Not yet available.

Apart from the impact of inflation, a main reason why the number of acres being reclaimed has not risen proportionately with the resources devoted to reclamation is that urban sites, to which more emphasis is being given, are more expensive to reclaim.

No grant aided reclamation has been undertaken by the NCB who normally release their redundant sites to local authorities for reclamation.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to revise circular 32/81 on part II of the Wildlife and Countryside Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Revision of this circular will be incorporated in the revision of circular 108/77, which is expected to be published in the spring.

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department will publish an updated review of the code of guidance for sites of special scientific interest, following the revisions brought about by the Wildlife and Countryside Amendment Act 1985.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department aims to publish an updated review of the code towards the end of 1986.

Greater London Enterprise Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now publish the name of the company to which he referred at column 1490 of the Official Report of 26 July; if he will withdraw the allegation he made concerning the company and its relations with the Greater London Enterprise Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The name of the company concerned must remain a matter of confidence until its consent to reveal it has been obtained. We have been unable to obtain its consent.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give consent to the transfer of the remaining £8 million of the Greater London Enterprise Board's annual funding from the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 341]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 9 December at c. 477. The full results of the independent assessment of GLEB are awaited.

Block Grant

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment with reference to the extra block grant entitlements in the document headed "Grant Recycling 1986-87", what was the assumed total expenditure for each local authority giving rise to the £400 million underclaim on the national grant pool.

Mr. Waldegrave: No assumption was made. Many levels of total expenditure would give rise to a £400 million underclaim.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment with reference to the extra block grant entitlements in the document headed "Grant Recycling 1986-87", what percentage expenditure increase the assumed total expenditure represents for each local authority, for each authority from its adjusted 1985-86 budget, as defined in annex G RSG report.

Mr. Waldegrave: No assumption as to each authority's expenditure was made.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment with reference to the extra block grant entitlements in the document headed "Grant Recycling 1986-87", what was the grant entitlement for each authority before close-ending.

Mr. Waldegrave: No assumption as to each authority's entitlement before close-ending was made.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, with reference to the extra block grant entitlements in the document headed "Grant Recycling 1986-87", what were the total grant entitlements for each class of authority before, and after, close-ending.

Mr. Waldegrave: No assumption as to each class of authority's total grant entitlement before and after close-ending was made.

Inner-city Investment

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when an announcement will be forthcoming on the selection of an inner-city area for a pilot scheme allowing the injection of public resources to attract private sector investment; and if Bradford is still on the short-list.

Sir George Young: Part III of the Housing and Planning Bill empowers the Secretary of State to provide financial assistance to persons who incur expenditure in the course of activities which will contribute to urban regeneration. It is my right hon. Friend's intention, subject to the approval of the Bill by Parliament, initially to use part III in a limited number of localities to support regeneration programmes carried out by the private sector. No decisions have yet been taken on where the power will be used. But we would expect to give priority to localities where there are substantial areas containing derelict or disused land and buildings and where there is a willingness on the part of private sector interests to undertake the task of regeneration.

South Africa (Sporting Links)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has had discussions with members of the Anti-Apartheid Movement regarding sporting links with South Africa.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it is his policy that visits to South Africa by members of sporting organisations in receipt of funds from the Sports Council will prejudice the grant of such moneys.

Mr. Tracey: This is essentially a matter for the Sports Council. It is well established that Government and Sports Council policy is to support the Gleneagles agreement and that public funds cannot be used to assist contacts with South Africa.

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has had discussions with members of the Campaign for Fair Play regarding sporting links with South Africa.

Mr. Tracey: Yes.

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has offered the Sports Council with regard to the allocation of funds to organisations whose members have played sport in South Africa without authorisation from the body concerned.

Mr. Tracey: None.

Tobacco Industry (Sport Sponsorship)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Luton, North on Wednesday 22 January, Official Report, column 225, whether he will publish details of his intention to alter the current voluntary code exercised by the tobacco industry over the sponsorship of sport.

Mr. Tracey: No. My negotiations with the industry must be confidential. I have sought advice from interested bodies.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 39,000 square feet of light industrial units in Bridge road, for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 26,100 square feet of light industrial units in Malham road for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985.

Mr. Tracey: No applications have been received from the Greater London council for consent to the disposal of these light industrial units. Consent has however been given to contracts for development works at Bridge road and Malham road.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 33,145 square feet of light industrial units, Yarnton Way II, for which the Greater London council applied on 19 July 1985.

Mr. Tracey: No application has been received from the Greater London council for consent to the disposal of these light industrial units. An application for consent to a contract for development works at Yarnton Way II is, however, receiving consideration.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of shop unit 8, Brixton recreation centre, Lambeth, for which the Greater London council applied on 23 September 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Consent was given to this application on 26 September 1985.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of the site of 368-374 Norwood road, London SE27, for which the Greater London council applied on 23 September 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 5 Westminster Bridge road, London SE1, for which the Greater London council applied on 30 August 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of unit 1, Parkhouse trading estate, Park House street, Camberwell, London SE5, for which the Greater London council applied on 25 July 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 21 January 1986 at column 141.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations from local authorities or individuals about the interim budget issued by the London Residuary Body, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 141]: I have received some representations.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 28 January 1986

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Arable Farms

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the aggregate profit in 1985 for arable farms employing labour.

Mrs. Fenner: I regret that this information is not available.

Central Veterinary Laboratory, Lasswade

Mr. Fletcher asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Steel) of 29 October, Official Report, columns 416-7, if he will now state what essential services are to be retained in Scotland, following closure of the department of the central veterinary laboratory at Lasswade.

Mr. Jopling: It is intended that mammalian histopathological services, avian diagnostic and consultancy services and various animal health blood tests and import-export tests will be undertaken by a unit of 17 ADAS officers based at the East of Scotland college of agriculture, Edinburgh following the closure of the department at Lasswade.

Female Workers

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if female workers in part-time employment in agriculture are paid at the same hourly rate as their full-time counterparts; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The current statutory minimum rate for all workers, male or female, regularly working 30 hours per week or less set by the independent Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales is £2.19 per hour. That for full-time workers and other workers regularly working more than 30 hours per week is £2.24 per hour.

Dairy Crest

Mr. Jackson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether Touche Ross has completed its study of Dairy Crest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: Last year my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I commissioned the management consultants Touche Ross to report to us on Dairy Crest, the Milk Marketing Board's commercial arm. We have received the consultants' report and copies are being placed in the Library of the House. We shall be discussing the consultants' findings with interested parties.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Trade Documents (Departmental Authentication)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, following his talks with the Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. Shimon Peres, he will end the Foreign Office authentication of signatures on trade documents.

Mr. Renton: On 29 January the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will cease authentication of signatures on documents related to the Arab boycott of Israel.

Anglo-Israeli Relations

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there has been any improvement in Anglo-Israeli relations following the visit of Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. Shimon Peres, to London.

Mr. Renton: Mr. Peres' useful visit demonstrated the importance we attach to maintaining close and friendly relations with Israel.

State-sponsored Terrorism

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he has for seeking to eliminate state-sponsored terrorism following the attacks at Rome and Vienna airports in December.

Mrs. Chalker: We have taken, and will continue to take, whatever steps we can to deter and if possible eliminate state-sponsored terrorism. European Community Foreign Ministers and their representatives issued a statement yesterday of their determination to strengthen co-operation to deal with all forms of terrorism. They established a new group, within political co-operation, to ensure effective follow-up in the areas covered by the statement.

Gulf War (British Shipping)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the Government's reaction to the illegal action taken against British shipping in the Gulf war in recent weeks.

Mr. Renton: The United Kingdom upholds the general principle of freedom of navigation on the high seas. However, under article 51 of the United Nations charter a state such as Iran, actively engaged in an armed conflict, is entitled in exercise of its inherent right of self-defence, to stop and search a foreign merchant ship on the high seas if there is reasonable ground for suspecting that the ship is taking arms to the other side for use in the conflict. This is an exceptional right: if the suspicions prove to be unfounded and if the ship has not committed acts calculated to give rise to suspicion, then the ship's owners have a good claim for compensation for loss caused by the delay.

Our representatives in Tehran are in touch with the Iranian authorities as to why the British registered vessel Barber Perseus was stopped for a check of the ship's manifest on 12 January.

United Nations Sanctions

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's attitude to United Nations mandatory economic sanctions.

Mrs. Chalker: Our views are well known. We do not believe that mandatory economic sanctions are an effective means of encouraging peaceful change.

Gulf War

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he has and what action he has taken to help towards the ending of the Iran-Iraq war.

Mr. Renton: We shall continue to support all realistic efforts aimed at bringing an end to the tragic and wasteful conflict between Iran and Iraq, especially through the good offices of the United Nations Secretary-General and his special representative Mr. Olof Palme. We are keeping in close touch with all interested parties.

Arab-Israeli Relations

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what developments towards a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict he foresees following his recent discussions with King Hussein in London.

Mr. Renton: We expeect King Hussein to continue his efforts, which have our full support, to make progress towards a negotiated settlement.

Iraq (Officer Training)

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any members of Iraq's armed forces are currently training in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lee: I have been asked to reply.

Yes.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Duties)

65. Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the extra duties that teachers are now required to undertake compared with five years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: There is no agreed list of duties that teachers are required to undertake as part of their contractual obligation. Nor did such a list exist five years ago. The Government's willingness to see an additional £1,250 million over four years spent on teachers' pay is conditional on the negotiation of just such a list.

Teachers (Pay Dispute)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from parents regarding the teachers' current pay dispute; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: Very many parents have conveyed their views to me in the form of letters and petitions. I have also met and addressed organisations which represent parent interests.

I welcome the measure of agreement reflected in the outcome of the discussions held between the two sides under the auspices of ACAS. I regret that the NUT was not party to this agreement and intends to continue with some forms of disruptive action. This is bound to cause further damage to childrens' education.

Education Statistics

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, at the latest available date, how many people in Great Britain aged 16 years or over, were in (a) schools, (b) sixth-form colleges, (c) further education colleges, (d) polytechnics, (e) universities and (f) other educational establishments, separating them by age into single years from 16 to 20 years and in bands aged 21 to 24 years, 25 to 29 years and 30 years and over.

Mr. Walden: The readily available information for home students in Great Britain in 1983-84 including all modes of attendance is as follows:

Great Britain (000s)

	Age at 31 August 1983
	16	17	18	19 to 20	21 to 24	25 and over	Total

* Includes sixth-form colleges.

† Includes 1,680 thousand students aged 16 and over in adult education centres, for which some of the age detail has been estimated. Excludes 467 thousand students on other courses run by responsible bodies.

‡ Includes polytechnics and central institutions.

‖ Includes 76 thousand students in the United Kingdom enrolled with the Open University.

Deaf-blind Children

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research he is aware of into (a) the effects of deaf-blindness on a child's ability to learn and develop and (b) the personal and behavioural problems arising from the dual sensory handicap.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any specific research which has been undertaken into these matters. Any research would have to take into account the fact that children described as "deaf-blind" suffer varying degrees of visual and hearing impairment and often also have mental and physical handicaps.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research has been carried out by his Department or other institutions into the forms of communication used by deaf-blind children; and what proportion of deaf-blind children of all ages are without any form of communication.

Mr. Dunn: The Department has carried out no research into the forms of communication used by deaf-blind children and is not aware of any which has been carried out by other institutions. The Department does not collect information on the proportion of deaf-blind children of all ages who are without any form of communication.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of the teachers of deaf-blind children in (a) deaf-blind units, (b) ESN(S) schools and (c) hospital schools have received special training in teaching children with the dual handicap; and what form the training took.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect this information. Teachers of deaf-blind children are subject to regulation 18 of the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1982 which requires that a teacher of a class of deaf-blind children should have an additional specialist qualification to teach either the deaf or the blind. I am sending the hon. Member a copy of the relevant extract from the regulations.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what courses there are for training teachers of deaf-blind children; and what progress is being made in extending the provision.

Mr. Dunn: There are currently no training courses specifically for teachers of deaf-blind children. The future training needs of these teachers are currently under consideration.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of deaf-blind children have access to a specialist in teaching those with the dual handicap; and if he will detail the nature of the access.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect this information.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of deaf-blind children are being taught by a full-time teacher who has had special training in teaching a child with the dual handicap.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not available.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of deaf-blind children are in schools where the child is (a) the only deaf-blind pupil, (b) one of two, (c) one of three and (d) one of more than three.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect this information.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many deaf-blind children are being educated in (a) deaf-blind units, (b) ESN(S) schools, (c) hospital schools and (d) other schools.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect this information.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what specific educational provision is made for deaf-blind children.

Mr. Dunn: There are no special schools solely for deaf-blind children but a number of special schools principally for the visually handicapped and hearing impaired make specific educational provision for the needs of these children. Some who additionally have other handicaps such as severe learning difficulties are educated in special classes and units appropriate to those handicaps.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children of school age and below are known to be deaf-blind; and on what criteria they are identified.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect information on the numbers of deaf-blind children of school age and below. The criteria on which such children are identified are set out in the Education Act 1981; the responsibility for identifying, assessing and meeting special educational needs rests with individual local education authorities.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will institute a national programme to (a) survey the numbers and educational needs of deaf-blind children, (b) provide additional staff and buildings and (c) make appropriate arrangements for their future further education.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend is concerned about a wide range of pupils with profound and multiple learning difficulties, including those who have additional hearing and visual handicaps. There is, however, no intention to institute a national programme to survey the numbers and educational needs of deaf-blind children, provide additional staff and buildings or make appropriate arrangements for their future further education. These are all matters for individual local education authorities to determine in the first instance.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average staff-child ratio for the teaching of deaf-blind children.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does not collect this information.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to assess the proportion of peripatetic services required in the education of deaf-blind children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: This is a matter for individual local education authorities to consider through their procedures for assessing the special educational needs of pupils and determining whether or not to maintain statements of needs under section 7 of the Education Act 1981. They also have a duty under section 2(4) of the Act to keep their arrangements for special educational provision under review. The level of such services required is likely to vary considerably both from year to year and from area to area.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to identify and assess the educational needs of deaf-blind children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Under the Education Act 1981 it is the responsibility of individual local education authorities to assess the requirements of children in their area who appear to have special educational needs and to decide what provision would be appropriate for them. I am sending the hon. Member a copy of the Department's circular 1/83, which gives detailed guidance to LEAs on how this should be done.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to make suitable educational provision for pre-school, primary and secondary aged deaf children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The Education Act 1981 requires local education authorities to secure provision in ordinary schools for children for whom they maintain a statement of special educational needs, provided that account has been taken of the views of the child's parents, and that the placement is compatible with the special educational provision required by the individual child; the provision of efficient education for the children with whom he will be educated; and the efficient use of resources.

The Department is currently reviewing the provision of special schools for hearing-impaired children, in order to match the provision of places to the likely demand, in the light of falling rolls and the increasing move towards integrated education. Some schools for hearing-impaired children will have to close as a result of the effect of declining numbers; my right hon. Friend recognises that there will be a continuing need for special schools for some children, and it is his intention that those schools should be capable of providing a suitable and efficient education. Discussions are continuing with the local education authorities and schools involved.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he has taken any steps to advise teachers of the deaf on how to make full use of any residual vision of deaf-blind children; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has taken any steps to advise teachers of the visually impaired on how to make full use of any residual hearing of deaf-blind children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has given no specific advice on these subjects.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will initiate discussions with his counterparts in those European countries which provide for the teaching of deaf-blind children on a national basis on the record of this form of educational provision for children who are small in number but are very severely handicapped; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: EC Education Ministers agreed at their meeting in June 1984 to set up a working group of experts to consider the educational needs of handicapped children. The group will shortly submit proposals for a programme of future work which, if agreed, will include a study of children with sensory handicaps. It would be inappropriate to consider other discussions at this time.

Universities (Building Projects)

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the universities which have major building projects in progress or starting soon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The universities with major building projects in progress or starting soon are as follows:

Aston
Bath
East Anglia
Liverpool
London
Manchester
University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology
Newcastle
Reading
Salford
Sheffield
Southampton
Aberdeen
Dundee
Glasgow
Heriot-Watt

Provision for grant to universities to cover major capital building work (that is, mainly those projects expected to cost £1 million or more) was £25·8 million in the financial year 1985-86, including a small amount carried forward from the 1984-85 financial year. Subject to parliamentary approval, provision in the financial year 1986-87 will be £26·4 million.

Civil and Military Research

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why, pursuant to the answer of 20 January, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Walden) did not give the figures requested by the hon. Member for Cambridge in his answer of 20 January relating to sums allocated in 1984-85 for civil and military research and development; whether he will now give this information; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The established policy of the Department in dealing with requests for statistical information is to refer Members to sources where the data can readily be obtained. In addition, my hon. Friend's Question called for information in areas which are not the responsibility of my right hon. Friend.

Science (Policy Review)

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when his annual review of policies for the support of science will be made available to the House.

Mr. Walden: Details of the Government's expenditure plans for education and science in 1986-87 were announced in the House on 12 November 1985. In reaching its decisions on the science budget, the Government took into account advice received during the year from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils. Copies of the Board's advice have been placed in the library of the House. It is likely that a similar pattern will be followed in the current year.

Teachers

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has evidence of a growth in the use by local education authorities of fixed term non-permanent contracts for the employment of teachers.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department does not collect information about the incidence of fixed-term contracts among those who return to teaching employment after a period of absence, and it has only recently begun to collect such data for newly qualified teachers. We estimate that about 12 per cent. of the newly qualified teachers taking up positions in schools in England and Wales in 1984 were appointed on a temporary basis, but we are not yet in a position to identify any trend in such appointments.

Teachers (Child Abuse)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that both initial and in-service training enables teachers both to recognise cases of child abuse among their pupils and to take the action necessary to protect children at risk.

Mr. Chris Patten: The criteria which now govern all courses of initial teacher training require, inter alia, that the courses should prepare students for their pastoral responsibilities as teachers. Local education authorities are responsible for ensuring that their schools have adequate arrangements to identify children at risk and that their teachers are aware of these arrangements. A range of training acitivities to promote awareness of how to identify and deal with child abuse is promoted by local authorities and is available to school staff. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services is currently reviewing his procedural guidance on child abuse and will be issuing a consultation paper shortly which will include recommendations on training.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimate he has made of the additional finance, manpower and other resources required for the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Chris Patten: The general criteria for the GCSE provide that syllabuses and methods of assessment should not make unreasonable demands on human or financial resources. The Government's expenditure plans should allow authorities to make appropriate provision for the GCSE provided that they take advantage of the scope for efficiency saving and contain their costs.

In initiating the special programme of in-service training for the introduction of the GCSE, the Government has recognised the resource implications for examining groups, LEAs and schools and has arranged to make a substantial contribution towards these costs: it is supporting £8 million expenditure on supplying cover for teachers attending training seminars; and is giving £1·5 million to the Secondary Examinations Council and the examining groups towards the cost of providing that training.

Leeds University

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last paid an official visit to Leeds university.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend's last official visit to Leeds university was on 6 November 1984.

Science Budget

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science by what proportion in real terms the science budget has changed between 1981-82 and 1985-86.

Mr. Walden: There has been a 6 per cent. increase. This figure has been derived by adjusting the cash outturn for 1981-82, and the cash provision for 1985-86, to a base of average 1984-85 prices using the deflator for gross domestic product at market prices.

Lunches

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimates he has for the number of (a) free lunches and (b) lunches paid for by pupils served by each local education authority to children; and what were the figures in each of the past five years.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is shown in the Department's annual school meals census; copies of which are available in the Library. The latest available information is for autumn 1984.

Fire Precautions Act 1971

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to bring schools, colleges and other educational establishments within the provisions of the Fire Precautions Act 1971.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to designate educational establishments as requiring a fire certificate under the Fire Precautions Act 1971. My right hon. Friend and I are at present satisfied that existing legislative provisions, including the parts of the 1971 Act which already apply, are adequate.

PRIME MINISTER

Channel Tunnel

Q15. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister what recent discussions she has had with President Mitterrand about the Channel fixed link; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: On 20 January, President Mitterrand and I met in Lille and announced the joint decision of the two Governments to facilitate the construction of a Channel fixed link. I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport on that day, at columns 19-20.

Under-fives (Education)

Q44. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on Government policy towards the provision of education for the under-fives.

The Prime Minister: It is for local education authorities to determine the scale and nature of the provision in their area for those below compulsory school age, in the light of local needs and priorities and the availability of resources. Chapter 4 of "Better Schools" sets out the Government's policy on the education of the under-fives, including resources. Current participation rates and actual numbers of under fives in school are the highest ever. Overall, some 80 per cent. of children are in school before they are five; excluding "rising fives", 22 per cent. of 3 and 4-year-olds now attend maintained nursery classes or nursery schools and 21 per cent. attend primary reception classes; and a significant contribution to pre-school experience is also made by playgroups, which are attended by some 40 per cent. of 3 and 4-year-olds.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the effect on the economies of Third world countries of the Communities' policy of providing export rebates for the disposal of surplus agricultural products.

The Prime Minister: I will bear my hon. Friend's suggestion in mind in deciding, nearer the time, what it might be appropriate to raise at the next meeting of the European Council.

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister what action Her Majesty's Government have taken specifically to implement each of the conclusions in chapter IV of the special report of the Court of Auditors on the system for the payment of refunds on agricultural exports (85/C215/01); and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The report is not addressed to individual Governments and it is for the European Commission in the first instance to decide what further action needs to be taken in the light of the court's findings.

However, the Government would consider positively any proposals for cost-effective measures which would improve financial control over the use of Community funds.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 28 January.

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 28 January.

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 28 January.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 28 January.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 28 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Shops Bill

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister how many representations she has received (a) before and (b) after the publication of the Shops Bill [Lords]; if she will break them down (i) for and (ii) against giving the names of the major retail stores concerned and the nature of their representations; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Family Courts

66. Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General if, when the interdepartmental committee reviewing family courts completes its work, a final report will be published; and if he will make a statement.

67. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Attorney-General when the interdepartmental review on family courts is expected to report.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to my hon. and learned Friend's answer to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 13 January, at column 446.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Salaries

Mr. Deakins asked the Lord Privy Seal what arrangements have been made for determining the pay of hon. Members after 1987.

Mr. Biffen: The Resolution of the House of 26 July 1983 provides that, for service on and after 1 January 1988 the salary of hon. Members shall be at a yearly rate equal to 89 per cent. of the maximum point of the senior principal (grade 6) pay scale in the non-industrial Civil Service.

SCOTLAND

Glengarry Forest (Low Frequency Installation)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, in the light of medical evidence from the United States of America, he has any intention of postponing the installation of the proposed extremely low frequency test facility in Glengarry forest; whether he has commissioned any research into the links between extremely low frequency transmissions and the levels of cancer and leukaemia in local populations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The proposed extremely low frequency test facility in Glengarry is the responsibility of the Ministry of Defence. I understand that the Ministry will be consulting the planning authority for the Glengarry forest in accordance with the guidelines for Government Departments laid down in the Scottish Development Department's circular No 21/1984. Only if the Ministry of Defence and the planning authority fail to agree would the Secretary of State for Scotland become involved, and it would therefore be inappropriate for me to comment at this stage on the merits of the proposed development. I have not commissioned any research into the links between extremely low frequency transmissions and the levels of cancer and leukaemia in local populations, but I understand that studies undertaken in the United States of America have established no such links.

Glasgow Airport

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans Her Majesty's Government have to stimulate the growth of Glasgow airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The development of Glasgow airport is a matter for its owners, the British Airports Authority.

Housing

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what allocation has been made by his Department to Inverclyde district council for housing expenditure each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The information is given in the following table. The substantial increases in the provisional capital allocations for 1986-87 over the allocations issued last March for 1985-86 reflect Government recognition of the continuing housing needs in Inverclyde.

Year	Housing Revenue Account £ million	Non-housing Revenue Account £ million

Scottish Grand Committees

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what security consideration determined boot and bonnet searches of the cars of hon. Members attending the Scottish Grand Committee in Edinburgh on 20 January.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 371]: No special security considerations applied that day. When the Scottish Grand Committee meets in Edinburgh, cars using the car park are normally searched as they are also at Westminster.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Asset Sales

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report, on a basis consistent with table 5.1 of Cmnd. 9702, the actual or planned proceeds for the years 1979-80 to 1988-89 from asset sales retained in nationalised businesses in a form consistent with the then Chief Secretary's reply on 26 July 1985, Official Report, columns 861-2.

Mr. MacGregor: Actual and forecast receipts from asset sales for the years 1980-81 to 1985-86 included in the total internal resources figures shown in table 5.1 of Cmnd. 9702 are as follows.

In accordance with usual practice, it is not appropriate to publish future figures for individual industries because of commercial confidentiality and other factors.

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report, on a basis consistent with table 2.2 of Cmnd. 9702-II, a table showing, by programme for the years 1979-80 to 1987-88, the proceeds of asset sales which are outside central privatisation proceeds and which are netted off against programme totals.

Mr. MacGregor: The table below shows sales of land and buildings by department for the years 1979-80 to 1987-88. The figures include sales by local authorities and new towns as well as central Government and are consistent with the figures published in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9702. To be consistent with table 2.2, the figures are provided by Department, rather than programme, and in real terms. The real terms figures are the cash outturn or plans adjusted to 1984-85 price levels by excluding the effect of general inflation as measured by the GDP deflator.

It is not possible to identify fully the sales of assets, other than those from central privatisation proceeds and sales of land and buildings, within the public expenditure figures. However, the amounts of these other sales are likely to be relatively small.

Gas Levy

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the actual or forecast proceeds of the gas levy, for each of the years 1980-81 to 1988-89.

Mr. Moore: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 12 November, at column 128.

Privatisation

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report references in support of the statement that proceeds from privatisation are, in line with international conventions, netted off against the public spending figures, Cmnd. 9702-1, paragraph 57, and place the relevant documentation in the Library.

Mr. MacGregor: The United Kingdom treatment of privatisation proceeds is in accordance with the advice in "A Manual on Government Finance Statistics" drafted in 1974 by the IMF, and in general use since. Section IV C of the manual makes it clear that transactions in company securities should be treated, like net lending, as part of net Government expenditure rather than as a financing item. The net treatment is also supported, for example, by the "European System of Integrated Economic Accounts" published by the Statistical Office of the European Communities. I am placing copies of relevant extracts of the documents referred to above in the Library.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the years 1979-80 to 1988-89 for each organisation treated as a nationalised industry in at least one year the actual or planned figures, as appropriate, for capital requirements and financing in a form identical to table 5.1 of Cmnd. 9428-ii.

Mr. MacGregor: I have placed tables covering the years 1980-81 to 1986-87 in the Library. In accordance with normal practice, figures for 1987-88 and 1988-89 are excluded.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report (i) the public expenditure gross domestic product ratio for the years 1970-71 to 1989-90 on the definitions used in the 1985 public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9428 and (ii) the ratio for the same years using the definitions used in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9702 and place a detailed reconciliation in the Library.

Mr. MacGregor: Public expenditure figures expressed as a percentage of gross domestic product using the definitions used in the 1985 Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9428) and the 1986 Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702) were illustrated in chart 2.20 of Cmnd. 9702. The underlying figures are as follows:

Public expenditure expressed as a percentage of GDP

	1978-79 outturn	1979-80 outturn	1980-81 outturn	1981-82 outturn	1982-83 outturn
Cmnd 9428 definition	40½	40	42½	43½	43
Cmnd 9702 definition	43	43½	46	46½	46½

	1983-84 outturn	1984-85 outturn	1985-86 estimated outturn	1986-87 plans	1987-88 plans	1988-89 plans
Cmnd 9428 definition	42½	43	41	40	39	38½
Cmnd 9702 definition	46	45½	44½	43	41½	41

An explanation of the above two definitions was given in an article entitled "Measuring Public Expenditure" published in the August 1985 edition of Economic Trends, table D of which provides a reconciliation between the two measures. This article includes figures going back to 1973-74. It should be noted that these figures are not directly comparable to those given above because they were based on the definition of the planning total used in the 1985 White Paper. However, the differences between the two White Papers are relatively small.

Freeports

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the turnover of business in the freeports which are already operational.

Mr. Brooke: The freeport operators have made public some information on their operations. They have provided information to Her Majesty's Treasury and Her Majesty's customs and excise on the basis that it will remain confidential.

North Sea Oil

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the actual and forecast proceeds of North sea oil and gas revenues for the years 1973-74 to 1988-89.

Mr. Moore: I refer the hon. Member to table 1.3 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1985" for the figures for Government revenues from United Kingdom oil and gas production from 1973-74 to 1984-85. The 1985 autumn statement contained a forecast of £11·5 billion for revenues in 1985-86. A forecast for subsequent years will be provided in the 1986-87 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Building Societies

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many building societies there were in 1982, 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The following table shows the number of registered building societies at 31 December 1982, 1983 and 1984, and of these, the numbers which were authorised to accept shares and deposits under the Building Societies (Authorisation) Regulations 1981.

	End 1982	End 1983	End 1984
Number of building societies:
Registered	227	206	190
Authorised to accept shares and deposits	211	192	170

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what share of the building societies deposits were represented by the largest three, largest six and largest 10 societies in 1982, 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The following table shows for the years 1982, 1983 and 1984 the total shares, deposits and loans of building societies held by the largest three, largest six and largest 10 societies.

	1982 per cent.	1983 per cent.	1984 per cent.
Largest three societies	45	45	45
Largest six societies	61	61	61
Largest 10 societies	73	74	74

Clearing Banks

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what share of clearing banking was represented by the top four clearing banks in 1965, 1975 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I regret that this information is not readily available in the form requested and cannot be provided without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

EC Budget

Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 22 January, Official Report, columns 197-8, if he will list the items of non-obligatory expenditure in the 1986 European Community budget which are disputed by the United Kingdom, detailing the total value in each case; when he expects the European Court to hear the actions brought by the Council and individual member states; if he will seek authority from Parliament for supplementary payments on a monthly basis in the absence of an agreement over the budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The 1986 budget as adopted by the European Parliament contains some 230 disputed items of non-obligatory expenditure totalling 563 million ecu (£361 million), as follows:

Million

	Payment appropriations ECU	£
The European Regional Development Fund	160	103
The European Social Fund	260	167
Food Aid	40	26
Co-operation with Latin American and Asian developing countries	20	13
Other	83	52
TOTAL	563	361

The European Court's timetable is uncertain, but my advice is that the substantive cases brought by the Council and individual member states are unlikely to be decided much before the end of 1986. The United Kingdom's application for an interim order suspending implementation of the disputed elements of the budget pending substantive judgment should be heard much more quickly.

The Special Supplementary Estimate presented to Parliament on 22 January is intended to enable the Government to contribute to the disputed elements in the budget during February and March. The Government hope that the European Court will grant an interim order making further contributions to the disputed elements unnecessary. Failing such an order, the Government will seek any necessary parliamentary authority for further contributions in a 1986-87 Estimate.

Incomes

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures showing the ratios of the highest to the lowest deciles of gross and of net incomes (a) for people of working age, (b) for the retired population and (c) for the population as a whole.

Mr. MacGregor: Information based on the 1984 family expenditure survey is shown below:

	Ratio of highest to lowest decile points
	Gross household income*	†Net household income
(a) Non-retired households	4·8	4·0
(b) Retired households	3·5	3·1
(c) All households	6·8	5·3

† Gross income after income tax and employees National Insurance contributions.

DEFENCE

9 Signals Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army personnel have been discharged or are being discharged as a result of the inquiry into breaches of security at 9 Signals Regiment.

Mr. Lee: Four have been discharged.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force personnel have been discharged or are being discharged as a result of the inquiry into breaches of security at 9 Signals Regiment.

Mr. Lee: No final decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the service personnel who have been interviewed by Lt. Col Dobson in connection with breaches of security at 9 Signals Regiment have subsequently been discharged or await discharge and under which form of discharge.

Mr. Lee: Two service personnel have been discharged on completion of their engagements and two were discharged in accordance with Queen's regulations for the Army, paragraph 9.414. One is shortly to leave the service on completion of his engagement.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 83 service men prematurely discharged from 9 Signals Regiment have been subjected to interrogation since 3 January 1984.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his answer, 13 January 1986, c. 525]: Nine of those prematurely discharged from 9 Signals Regiment provided statements of evidence as part of the investigation into the alleged breaches of security at 9 Signals Regiment. Others may have been interviewed but not required to provide such statements, and it would not now be possible to establish this figure precisely without disproportionate cost and effort.

501st Security Police Group (USAF)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the numbers of (a) Ministry of Defence police, (b) Royal Air Force Regiment, (c) Royal Air Force Police and (d) other British subjects who work in operational liaison with 501st Security Police Group (USAF).

Mr. Stanley: The only Ministry of Defence personnel that are integrated operationally with the USAF's 501st Security Police Group are certain RAF Regiment and RAF police personnel at RAF Greenham Common. As my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence said in reply to the hon. Member for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes) on 7 November 1983 we ae not prepared to discuss the numbers of personnel involved with security.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek from the United States Air Force authorities guarding Greenham common, in order to place it in the Library, a copy of the year-end report of the United States Air Force 501st Security Police Group dated 5 December.

Mr. Stanley: No. I understand the report is an internal document of the US Air Force.

El Salvador

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are any plans in the next 12 months for officers from El Salvador to train in the United Kingdom with British armed forces.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces gave to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 13 January 1986, at column 525.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the manpower strength of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, as between full-time, part-time, male and female, operatives on 1 January.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 24 January 1986.

Air-sea Rescue Helicopter Service

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is planning any change in the air-sea rescue helicopter service which is operated from HMS Daedalus at Lee-on-Solent.

Mr. Stanley: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Approved Stockists

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is satisfied that the British Standards Institute register of approved stockists for his Department's purposes can ensure that products supplied against Ministry of Defence requirements have direct traceability to, and have been supplied by, his Department's approved sources of manufacture.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Nimrod

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what sums have been provided to date from public funds for the Nimrod project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Mustard Gas Leak (SS John Harvey)

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will institute inquiries in order to procure an estimate of the number of naval ratings on the decks of ships near the SS John Harvey on 2 December 1943 exposed to the mustard gas leak.

Mr. Lee: I will write to the hon. Lady.

Multi-launch Rocket Systems

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to place orders for further multi-launch rocket systems.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

SP-70 Shell

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on the tripartite agreement to develop and manufacture the SP-70 shell; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Scott Lithgow

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 642, he will make a statement on his Department's operational requirements to Scott Lithgow.

Mr. Lee: The answer given in the Official Report of 16 January contains a typographical error and has been subsequently amended. The relevant passage should have read

". . . This timing reflects our operational requirements. Scott Lithgow will continue to be invited to tender for all MOD new construction and refit work which it is capable of undertaking, but it must be competitive if it is to win future orders."

I can advise the hon. Member that, as far as we are able, the MOD's requirements are made known to industry generally on a regular basis, eg for the Navy, at the Controller of the Navy's annual SEAFACTS presentation.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 642, he will specify the wider and more relevant factors which persuaded the Government to place an order for a range mooring vessel with Scott Lithgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to the answer given on 16 January 1986 at column 642.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 642, he will indicate the nature of the terms and conditions which he expects Scott Lithgow to fulfil in connection with the orders for a range mooring vessel and two lighters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The main factors to be addressed will be price, delivery and compliance with the tender documentation, particularly the technical specifications.

Upholder Class Submarines (Orders)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will describe, without reference to details of individual tenders, the rules governing the competition for the recent orders for three Upholder class patrol submarines, including the deadlines for tenders and any opportunities for the submission of revised tenders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Four rounds of tendering were involved. Initial tenders were sought on 30 November 1984 (closing date for responses 19 March 1985), revised tenders were sought on 24 May 1985 (due back by 17 June 1985) and "best and final" bids were sought on 13 August 1985 (due back by 17 September 1985). Finally, on 25 November 1985, all tenderers were invited to revise or confirm their bids. The rules of this competition were those normally followed by my Department for follow-on vessels. The VSEL/CL bid offered substantially the best value for money to the defence budget.

Procurement Policy

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent, in reaching defence procurement decisions, he takes account of the implications of the phasing and distribution of orders for the ability of individual yards to maintain the integrity of their design and production teams at a level conducive to the making of competitive bids for future orders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: It is not our policy to place orders in advance of the requirement or to advance orders to match shipyard capacity. Our policy is to place orders wherever practicable by competitive tendering, although we might need to take account of wider and relevant factors. In the specific case of conventional submarines we believe that there will be satisfactory competitions in the future.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the non-commercial factors which are used to decide between rival tenders for procurement orders which are otherwise broadly competitive with each other; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Government's prime consideration is seeking the best value for money for the defence budget. Other considerations are described in defence open government document 83/01.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards the participation of foreign-based or substantially foreign-owned companies in competition for (a) defence procurement contracts generally, and (b) contracts for naval ships or submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Our general policy on procuring the equipment which the armed forces need for their tasks was set out by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in her reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 13 January at column 517.

Within this overall policy, each requirement is examined on a case-by-case basis. In general, a foreign-owned firm with a comprehensive and established capability in this country is regarded as part of British Industry. As I said on 13 January, at column 525, it is not the Government's policy to place orders for warships overseas.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many redundancy notices have been issued at each of the royal ordnance factories since July 1985.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Advertising

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the hon. Member for Newham, North-West can expect a substantive answer to his question to which a holding answer was given on 6 December 1985, Official Report, column 386.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to the reply, 6 December 1985, c. 386]: Expenditure on advertising by the Ministry of Defence, and by the Central Office of Information on our behalf in 1984-85 is given in the following table. The figures include advertising for civilian and Armed Forces recruitment; range firing notices and defence sales advertisements:

Financial year 1984-85

	£ million
Press/Journals	6.863
TV/Films	0·488
TOTAL	7·351

The advertising budget for 1985-86 is £8·876 million, of which some £6 million has been spent to date.

7H 70 (155mm Shells)

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current delay on the delivery of the 155 mm shell ordered for British forces' use on the 7H 70 and placed with RheinMetal, Dusseldorf, West Germany.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

Environmental Health Officers

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many qualified environmental health officers are employed by his Department; and how many of those are serving members of the Armed Forces.

Mr. Lee: There are 58 qualified environmental health officers in the Department. Only one of these is not a serving member of Her Majesty's forces.

US Nuclear Force Bases

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is made aware when United States nuclear forces at bases in Britain are put on to a state of alert; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister today.

RAF Phantom (Harrogate)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on the recent Royal Air Force Phantom jet crash in Harrogate.

Mr. Lee: On 7 January 1986, an RAF Phantom engaged in a low-level interception training exercise crashed at Waldon Moor, Yorks. The two-man crew safely ejected although both sustained major injuries. A board of inquiry has been convened to investigate the accident and it would therefore be inappropriate for me to comment further in advance of its findings.

Porton Down (Animal Research)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of animals subjected to deliberately inflicted wounds at the Chemical Defence Establishment laboratories at Porton Down since 1980 have been allowed to recover from the anaesthetic.

Mr. Lee: In the five years 1980 to 1984 inclusive, as part of its research into improved methods of treatment for wounds, the chemical defence establishment, Porton Down, used 190 anaesthetised animals in studies of penetrating injuries. Of these, 77 were allowed to recover from the anaesthetic.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Nicaragua

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support proposals for a loan by the Inter-American Development bank to the agricultural sector in Nicaragua.

Mrs. Chalker: We shall examine any such proposals put to the board of directors by the bank's management on their merits. So far none has been submitted.

Spain

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent Her Majesty's Government propose to help Gibraltar to meet its contributions to Spanish pensioners arising from Spain's accession to the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's Government have offered, and the Gibraltar Government have accepted, a contribution of £16·5 million over three years. This is without prejudice to the position thereafter.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Tyre Foot Pumps

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it a condition of the import of tyre foot pumps that they comply with current British standards.

Mr. Howard: No. British standards are not mandatory for United Kingdom produced tyre foot pumps. It would therefore be contrary to our international trading obligations to require compliance from imports. However, those supplying tyre foot pumps with inaccurate gauges, whether home produced or imported, may be subject to prosecution under the Trade Descriptions Act.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation to permit firms of accountants, which also provide auditing services under the Companies Acts, to incorporate.

Mr. Howard: The implications of allowing firms of accountants which also provide auditing services under the Companies Act to incorporate are far-reaching. The profession is currently examining various issues which this possibility raises, and I look forward to hearing the outcome. If any proposal for change were to be put forward, I am ready to consider it.

Manufacturing

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the share of the top 100 private sector companies in (a) manufacturing employment, (b) net manufacturing output and (c) net capital expenditure in 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The figures in the following table relate to the manufacturing activities of the largest 100 enterprises in the private sector, defined in terms of their employment in manufacturing. Estimates for 1984 are not yet available.

Share of total manufacturing activity in 1983 accounted for by the top 100 private sector enterprises

	Per cent.
Employment	34
Net output	38
Net capital expenditure	37

Source: Annual Census of Production.

Retail Sales

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many firms represented the upper half of retail sales in the United Kingdom in 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The largest 121 individual companies accounted for one half of retail sales in Great Britain in 1983. It is provisionally estimated that the corresponding figure for 1984 was 113.

Company Finance

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what has been the contribution of (a) self-financing and (b) stock market equity finance, to the investment requirements of British private industry since 1978;

(2) what was the share of the source of funds the British industrial and commercial companies accounted for by (i) total internal funds and (ii) issues of ordinary shares for cash in 1984 and from January to September 1985.

Mr. Butcher: It is not possible to relate individual sources of companies' funds to particular uses. Statistics of the sources and uses of United Kingdom industrial and commercial companies' funds are published regularly in "Financial Statistics", table 8.2. On the definitions used in that table, percentage contributions have been as follows:

	Percentage of total sources of funds
	Total internal funds	Issues of ordinary shares for cash
1978	78	3
1979	76	3
1980	64	3
1981	62	5
1982	60	4
1983	76	6
1984	75	3
January/September 1984	89	3
1985	66	8

Expenditure on fixed assets and on the increase in the book value of stocks in the United Kingdom has accounted for between 54 per cent. and 71 per cent. of total uses of funds in these years. It must be emphasised that different answers could be obtained by classifying certain items differently (for example, by treating payment of taxes and dividends as uses of funds instead of deducting them from income as in the table in "Financial Statistics").

Mass Spectrometers

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many licences were issued for mass spectrometers, and mass spectrometer sources designed for measuring the isotopic composition of uranium hexafluoride (UF_6) gas, uranium and uranyl compounds; how many were refused; and if he will break these totals down by planned country of destination.

Mr. Howard: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to make public information of this kind.

Car Exports (Spain)

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to seek to ensure that British car exporters have discrimination against them removed by the Spanish Government.

Mr. Howard: The fastest possible removal of Spanish barriers to imports of British cars was one of our major priorities in the negotiations over Spain's entry to the Community. Under the treaty of accession, high Spanish duties on imports of cars from the rest of the Community will be phased out over seven years, with over half the reduction occurring in the three years 1986 to 1989. In addition, Spain has opened a tariff quota for imports of cars from the United Kingdom and from other member states at a substantially reduced rate of duty; and the introduction of VAT from 1 January 1986 will remove the discrimination against imports inherent in Spain's previous indirect tax regime.

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cars Britain can export to Spain in 1986 at preferential duty rates; and how many can be similarly imported from Spain.

Mr. Howard: Under the treaty arrangements governing Spain's accession to the Community, British and other Community car exports to Spain are subject to a preferential rate of import duty which is substantially below the rates applying to Spanish imports of cars from non-Community countries. There is no limit on the quantities involved. In addition, Spain has opened a tariff quota from 1 January for imports of Community cars at a further reduced rate of duty. The United Kingdom share of this quota will be 5,000 cars in 1986.

The rate of import duty applied to British imports of cars from Spain is also substantially lower than the rate applied to non-Community countries. There is no limit on the volume of such imports.

Consumer Credit

Mr. Grylls asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements he has made to monitor the burden on business of the Consumer Credit Act.

Mr. Howard: The Consumer Credit Act only came fully into force on 19 May 1985 and, as the "Lifting the Burdens" White Paper made clear, the first need now is for a period of stability in the interests of lenders and consumers. However, it is important that the working of the Act should be kept under review, and my Department has set up monitoring arrangements with the represenatives of the main commercial lenders. We will be attempting to assess the effectiveness of the Act and, inter alia, to identify any burdens imposed by the Act which appear excessive or unnecessary. But I am prepared, where appropriate, to take immediate action to alleviate specific business difficulties. This has already been done for mail order traders and the life insurance industry. The banking supervison White Paper has also announced our intention to amend the Act in the forthcoming Banking Bill to facilitate the development of electronic funds transfer at the point of sale (EFT-POS).

Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act

Mr. Malone asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 is to be implemented.

Mr. Howard: The Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 (Commencement) Order 1985 (SI 1985/1924) as read with SI 1986/78, brings into force the main provisions of the Act on 1 April 1986, with the exception of the provisions relating to preferred debts. Certain other provisions come into force on 1 February 1986 in order to enable qualified insolvency practitioners to apply to the Accountant in Bankruptcy for inclusion on the list of interim trustees.

Following consultation with professional bodies and others, the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Regulations 1985 (SI 1985/1925) have also been made prescribing matters for the purposes of the Act.

House of Fraser

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply of 16 January, Official Report, column 634, what were the reasons given by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in its request for an extension on the merger reference of Lonrho and the House of Fraser.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 382]: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission's request for an extension of three months to the reporting period for this merger reference was necessitated by the number of exceptionally lengthy submissions which it had received from the parties.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the salary at each increase date since 1974 of each of the chairmen of the industries for which he is responsible and the names of the incumbents.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 382]: The information is as follows:

NORTHERN IRELAND

De Lorean

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are his current proposals for the future use of the former De Lorean factory premises in Belfast.

Dr. Boyson: There are five buildings within the De Lorean complex comprising three units of 50,000 sq ft and two large buildings of 191,000 sq ft and 263,000 sq ft. One 50,000 sq ft unit has been acquired by Short Bros plc and it is intended to retain the other two as part of the Industrial Development Board's factory stock. Private sector proposals will be sought in the near future for the acquisition and subdivision of the two larger buildings for commercial and industrial use.

Government Subvention

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the total annual level of the Government subvention to Northern Ireland for each year since 1979 and list the subvention as a percentage of gross domestic product for each of these years.

Dr. Boyson: The information is as follows:

	Subvention £ million	Percentage of gross domestic product
		Northern Ireland	United Kingdom (including Northern Ireland)
1979-80	944	25·80	0·55
1980-81	1,090	26·39	0·56

Supplementary Benefit

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will set out a table for the years 1970 and 1984, showing numbers of recipients and dependants in receipt of supplementary benefit, and distinguishing between retirement pensioners, the unemployed, the sick and disabled, national insurance widows with and without dependent children and lone parents.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is not yet available in respect of 1984. The table sets out the required information in respect of the years 1970 and 1983.

Numbers in receipt of supplementary benefit at November 1970 and at December 1983

Teachers

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce a teachers' redeployment scheme in the controlled and voluntary schools in Northern Ireland, and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 409]: A redeployment procedure is under consideration by the conditions of service negotiating committee (schools) which is a committee of the teachers negotiating machinery for Northern Ireland. My Department awaits the outcome of this consideration.

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teachers are in post in Northern Ireland in the current school year; and how many he plans will be in post in Northern Ireland in the school year commencing September 1986.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 409]: Information on the number of teachers in post on the current school year's statistical date (31 January 1986) is not yet available, but the number of full-time posts allocated was 18,590. Under present plans, about 18,450 full-time posts will be allocated in the next school year.

WALES

Hospital Beds (West Glamorgan)

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many beds on average are empty each day in West Glamorgan health authority hospitals; how many of these are in each specialty; how many vacancies there are on the waiting list for each specialty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The table gives the average daily number of available and unoccupied beds in West Glamorgan health authority hospitals during the 1984-85 financial year, together with the number of patients on inpatient waiting lists for each specialty at 31 March 1985.

A5 (Bypasses)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make public the final report of consulting engineers who have undertaken technical appraisal studies of the need for and feasibility of providing bypasses for certain communities on the A5 on Anglesey.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The general content of such reports is disclosed when a scheme goes to public consultation, and the report itself subsequently becomes available for public inspection on request by objectors to draft statutory orders. Earlier disclosure could be detrimental to interests potentially affected by the report.

Public Paths

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, the applications received for the making by him of public path creation, diversion and extinguishment orders under the powers in sections 26(2) and 120(3) of the Highways Act 1980, stating in each case (a) the community concerned and the number of the footpath or bridleway, (b) whether the application was for a creation, diversion or extinguishment order, (c) whether he agreed to prepare a draft order and (d) where a draft order was prepared, whether or not it was subsequently made.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: To date there have been no applications.

Tourism

Sir Anthony Meyer asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total value of financial resources allocated to the Wales Tourist Board in 1985-86 for the purpose of (a) supporting capital expenditure of the tourist industry under section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act and (b) all other purposes, including marketing; and what provisions he intends to make under these respective headings for 1986-87.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: For 1985-86, the Wales Tourist Board was originally allocated £2 million to grant-aid projects which will provide or improve tourist amenities and facilities in Wales. This was increased to £2·5 million last August. The board's grant-in-aid allocation, which includes marketing, general administration, and so on, is £5·19 million.

The board's total allocation for 1986-87 is £7·907 million. The split between section 4 grant aid and grant-in-aid will be published when the Supply Estimates are presented to Parliament for approval.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he next proposes to meet the Wales Tourist Board; if he proposes to discuss with the Wales Tourist Board the report on tourism of the Trade and Industry Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I met the Wales Tourist Board on Friday 17 January. In the course of the meeting, the board conveyed to me its initial reactions to the Trade and Industry Committee's report on tourism. The board will be letting me have its considered comments in due course.

Housing

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many dwellings have been demolished in each local housing authority area in Wales, and in total, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is given in the following table:

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985 (January-September)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give a list of all local authorities in Wales which have shown a surplus in their housing revenue accounts since 1981-82, giving the figures for each year in each case in outturn terms and at 1984-85 prices.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Based on returns made to the Welsh Office, the amounts transferred from local authorities' housing revenue accounts to their general rate funds since 1981-82 are estimated to have been as follows:

	1983-84 outturn prices £000	1984-85 prices £000	1984-85 outturn prices £000	1985-86 outturn prices £000	1984-85 prices £000

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the amounts of Exchequer housing subsidies and non-statutory rate fund contributions in each year since 1979-80, both in outturn terms and at 1984-85 prices, for each local housing authority in Wales and in total.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Based on returns made by local authorities to the Welsh Office, the information as estimated is given in the tables.

The figures in the tables showing rate fund contributions exclude statutory contributions made in respect of rent rebates.

The amounts shown at 1984-85 prices have been derived by the application of the GDP market price deflators.

Independent Education

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds he has made available to the independent education sector in Wales under the assisted places and other schemes for the current year, 1985 and 1987; and if he will list the independent schools and the cash they received and for each year.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Details of reimbursements for remitted fees under the assisted places scheme and grants under the direct grant scheme are given in the following table:

ENVIRONMENT

Ove Arup Report

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received the Ove Arup report on the disposal of mine spoil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I expect to receive the consultant's report shortly.

Council Housing (Sale)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's policy concerning the disposal of local authority housing estates to developers where the consideration received by the local authority would be less than the outstanding debt charges from the construction costs of the estate.

Sir George Young: Private sector skills and resources have an important part to play in the revitalisation of rundown local authority housing estates. Sales of such estates to developers are made entirely on a voluntary basis, and normally at current market value. Whether or not the receipt from such a sale would cover any outstanding debt charges is a matter for the authority to take into account in deciding whether to proceed.

Ironbridge Bypass

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the result of his consideration of the public inquiry into the Ironbridge bypass.

Mr. Tracey: The Secretary of State for Transport expects to announce his decision within the next 14 days.

Disabled People (Sport)

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how the Sports Council applies its sport for all policy for the disabled.

Mr. Tracey: The Sports Council's policy of sport for all its intended to promote opportunities and active recreation for all sections of the community, including disabled people. The council encourages and grant-aids local authorities and others to assist in the provision of facilities which cater for the disabled. Additionally, the council supports the British Sports Association for the Disabled, the national development and co-ordinating body for sport for the disabled.

Mr. Watts asked the Secreprotary of State for the Environment how much was spent by the Sports Council in each of the last three financial years in support of sport for the disabled; and what proportion of total spending those amounts represent.

Mr. Tracey: The Sports Council's grant aid to organisations directly concerned with sport for disabled people was approximately £100,000 in each of the last three years, mainly to the British Sports Association for the Disabled. Also during this period the council spent £16,000 in connection with the "Sport for All — Disabled People" campaign, and over £8,000 to improve access for the disabled at the national sports centres. In addition, considerable regional grants for participation and facility provision, aimed at the wider community, have benefited the disabled.

Highways Act 1980

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 and for each regional office of his Department, the applications received for the making by him of public path creation, diversion and extinguishment orders under the powers in sections 26(2) and 120(3) of the Highways Act 1980, stating in each case (a) the parish concerned and the number of the footpath or bridleway, (b) whether the application was for a creation, diversion or extinguishment order, (c) whether he agreed to prepare a draft order and (d) where a draft order was prepared, whether or not it was subsequently made.

Mrs. Rumbold: Since this information is not readily available, it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether persons who apply to him to exercise his powers under section 120(3) of the Highways Act 1980 to make a public path diversion or extinguishment order are required to enter into an agreement to defray the costs incurred by him in preparing and giving notice of the draft order, in arranging and holding any public inquiry or hearing into objections to the draft order, including the cost of employing an inspector, and in giving notice of his subsequent decision.

Mrs. Rumbold: No.

British Lions (South African Tour)

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will seek to prevent the British Lions from touring South Africa after the Commonwealth Games this summer.

Mr. Tracey: The Government discourage sporting contacts with South Africa in accordance with the Gleneagles agreement. Should an invitation be issued to the British Lions to tour South Africa, we would seek to dissuade the rugby authorities from accepting it. The Government's views are well known to them.

Electricity Boards (Rating)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the proposed Green Paper on reform of the rating system will include proposals for a review of the formula for calculation of rates payable by electricity boards; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The present formula will necessarily be reviewed as a consequence of the revaluation of non-domestic property announced by my right hon. Friend today.

Gleneagles Agreement

Mr. Allan Rogers asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to uphold the Gleneagles agreement on sporting contact.

Mr. Tracey: All governing bodies have been clearly advised of the Government's commitment to the Gleneagles agreement. They are aware that Her Majesty's Government discourages sporting contacts with South Africa, and that current Sports Council and Government policy ensures that no public funds are made available to support such contacts, as they might otherwise be for competition with other countries. I only rarely need to approach individual bodies to repeat or clarify that advice.

Council House Sales

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the reasons for the delay by Southwark council in processing the application of Mr. A. Castle of 30 Sunray avenue to buy his council home; and when he now expects the transaction to be completed.

Sir George Young: Full details of this case are being urgently sought from the London borough of Southwark, and I shall write to my hon. Friend when I have the council's reply.

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the reasons for the delay by Southwark council in proceeding with the application of Miss L. Colwell of 78 Red Post hill to buy her council home; and when he now expects the transaction to be completed.

Sir George Young: I understand that Southwark council dispatched the necessary legal documentation on 3 December and proposed a completion date of 13 January. If there are any outstanding difficulties, perhaps my hon. Friend will write to me.

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on deterrents to prospective purchasers of council flats in the London borough of Southwark.

Sir George Young: I have had many representations on behalf of tenants of the London borough of Southwark who wish to buy their flats, expressing concern about delays in the processing of their applications, and about the level of service charges they will be required to pay.

On service charges, the provisions in the Housing and Planning Bill, introduced last week, will provide purchasers of flats with better protection by requiring fuller estimates of charges to be given before sale, and limiting charges for repairs during the early years of the lease by reference to the pre-sale estimates.

On delay, I met representatives of Southwark council last August, expressed concern at their performance and requested changes in their procedures to expedite the handling of right to buy applications. There has since been some improvement in the council's performance, but it is still not wholly satisfactory and my Department is monitoring the situation closely.

Housing Authorities

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the numbers of employees of housing authorities who are housing authority tenants.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not collected by the Department.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 50 housing authorities owning the highest numbers of empty dwellings, giving the figures and an indication of how many of these dwellings have been empty for more than one year.

Mr. John Patten: The 50 English local authorities which, in their housing investment programme returns, reported owning the largest numbers of vacant dwellings, including those which were closed, at 1 April 1985, are as follows:

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing authorities which underspent their housing investment programme allocation in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten: The following authorities' prescribed capital expenditure on housing in 1984-85, as reported in their 1985 HIP2 submissions, was less than their HIP allocations:

Theatres (London)

Mr. Crouch asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has reached a decision on the Greater London council's proposals to dispose of its interests in the Lyric, Garrick, and Lyceum theatres.

Mr. Tracey: As my noble Friend the Minister of State announced today in another place, the GLC applied for consent under section 123 of the Local Government Act 1972 and section 8 of the Local Government (Interim Provisions) Act 1984 to the sale of its freehold interests in these three theatres for the nominal value of £1 each to the Theatres Trust. Consent was also sought for the granting of a 125 year lease on the Lyceum to Mecca Leisure Group Ltd. on commercial terms.

After careful consideration of these applications, we have concluded that the disposal of the freehold interests in the Lyric and Garrick to the Theatres Trust for a nominal sum would be justified. This will ensure that the theatres will continue in theatrical use, and that the Theatres Trust will have the resources necessary to maintain them as such. Consent to these disposals has therefore been given to the GLC today.

We accept also that it would be in the interests of Londoners for the Lyceum to continue in entertainment use, but we are not satisfied that the proposals put forward by the GLC are necessary for this to be achieved, while at the same time being in the best interests of the GLC's successor authorities and their ratepayers. Consent to the council's applications in respect of the Lyceum has therefore been refused.

It is now for the GLC to reconsider its proposals and to put forward alternatives if it wishes to do so. In the event that the council's interest in the Lyceum theatre is retained until abolition day, it will be for successor authorities to consider the future of the theatre. In the expectation that the property will pass into the ownership of the London Residuary Body, we would expect that body to take into account the concerns which have been expressed about the continued use of the theatre in considering its future ownership.

Rents

Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has decided the deemed rent increase, and the increase in reckonable expenditure on management and maintenance of their own housing, for local authorities receiving housing subsidy.

Mr. John Patten: We have considered carefully the views of the local authority associations on the consultation papers which were sent to them in November on the subject of calculating entitlement to housing subsidy for 1986-87.

My right hon. Friend has decided, jointly with the Secretary of State for Wales, to determine an increase in the local contribution of 65p a dwelling a week. It is for local authorities themselves to decide how to finance that contribution. On management and maintenance, it has been decided to increase the expenditure counting towards the subsidy calculated by 4 per cent. over the level assumed for 1985-86.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he or his Department has had any discussions with the London Residuary Body over its interim budget.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 141]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave him on 22 January, at column 224.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the final budget of the London Residuary Body will be published.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 141]: This is a matter for the London Residuary Body, in accordance with the Local Government Act 1985.

Procurator Fiscal (Kirkcaldy)

Mr. Gourlay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the additional building in Kirkcaldy was acquired for the use of the procurator fiscal's department; what is the reason for the delay in making use of the building; and when he expects this additional office will become available for the fiscal's staff.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 339]: The additional building at 3 East Fergus place, Kirkcaldy, was acquired by the Property Services Agency in July 1984. Significant adaptations are necessary to make it fit for occupation by the procurator fiscal. While public expenditure constraints mean that I cannot put these in hand this year, I shall do everything I can to make finance available for this work in 1987. Meanwhile, I deeply regret the problems caused to the procurator fiscal and her staff.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, at 1981-82 prices, how much in each year since 1981-82 the Government have allocated to London boroughs in respect of rate support grant, housing subsidy and housing investment programme allocation.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 24 January, 1986 c. 341]: The information for all London boroughs is as follows:

£ million at 1981-82 prices†

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86

GLC (Property Disposal)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 29,400 sq ft of light industrial units in Monier road for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 17,950 sq ft of light industrial units in Gladstone terrace for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 21,950 sq ft of light industrial units in Heckford street for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 24,100 sq ft of light industrial units in the New Lyndenburg II centre for which the Greater London council applied on 18 July 1985.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 342]: No applications have been received from the GLC for consent to the disposal of these light industrial units. Consent has, however, been given to contracts for development works at Heckford street and New Lydenburg centre.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet in a position to place in the Library the information on rent arrears which he promised to supply on 4 December 1985, Official Report, column 263.

Mr. John Patten: The information on rent arrears in different local authorities will be placed in the Library shortly.

TRANSPORT

British Airways

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, when he next meets the chairman of British Airways, he will raise with him the number of occasions over the last six months on which British Airways has failed to provide an immediate back-up aircraft for the Glasgow to London shuttle when a scheduled aircraft has been unable to meet the passenger demand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. Day-to-day management matters such as this are the responsibility of the board of British Airways.

Drink-driving

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor car drivers involved in accidents resulting in death or serious injury, in each of the last five years have been found to have a blood alcohol content of more than 120 mg. alcohol per 100 ml. blood; and what proportion of the total number of drivers involved in such road accidents this has represented in each year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Information on blood alcohol levels of involved drivers is not available in accident reports. However, data on breath testing were given to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) on 13 January 1986, at column 481.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will outline what new facilities, rolling stock and track will be needed in the British Rail southern region for the Channel tunnel rail link; what are the estimated costs of each; and if he will give an estimate of total extra money he intends to make available to British Rail for Channel tunnel-related facilities and improvements.

Mr. David Mitchell: BR currently proposes that the main items of expenditure will be specialised passenger rolling stock; freight locomotives, terminals and sidings and Freightliner wagons; international passenger facilities at Waterloo and Ashford; track and signalling improvements and connections; and maintenance facilities. BR will consider the investment case for, and the cost of, each of these elements on their commercial merits in the usual way, and whether the returns will be sufficient to service the necessary borrowing.

Rail Electrification (Dorset)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce his decision on British Rail's proposals for railway electrification in Dorset; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 43]: I have today given approval to British Rail for the electrification of the line from Bournemouth to Weymouth at a cost of some £13·5 million, and for new rolling stock to run on principal services between London, Bournemouth and Weymouth at a cost (including associated facilities) of some £30 million. This scheme will bring the total investment we have approved for BR over the last 18 months to nearly £635 million.

ENERGY

North Sea Oil

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, in the light of the current level of oil prices, he will take steps to secure a reduction in North sea oil output.

Mr. Peter Walker: No.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General when he expects to receive a copy of the results of the Manpower Services Commission survey on the community programme and its graduates, carried out last autumn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Returns from the 1985 autumn interview survey of participants on the community programme, which is carried out by independent consultants, are currently being processed. I do not expect to receive this report before April, but I will place a copy in the Library of the House as soon as it is available.

Mr. Millan asked the Paymaster General (1) whether he will increase the average wage of £63 per week for funding under the community programme; and what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission on this matter;

(2) if he will increase the agency fee payable to local authorities for managing projects under the community programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: We keep under review the levels of approved costs which can be reimbursed under the community programme and make changes whenever this would improve the cost-effective use of taxpayers' money. The chairman of the Manpower Services Commission regularly discusses all such issues connected with the efficient administration of the programme.

Trade Unions (Public Funds)

Mr. Evans asked the Paymaster General if he will list the trade unions which have received public money under section 1 of the Employment Act 1980; how much each union received; and what was the year in which it was received.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The certification officer has provided the following information for the period from the introduction of the scheme on 1 October 1980 up to 24 January this year. No payments were made in 1980.

Training Schemes

Mr. Evans asked the Paymaster General if he will provide a breakdown of the number of places covered in the north-west region by the following schemes (a) the community programme, (b) community industry, (c) enterprise allowance and (d) the youth training scheme, showing mode A and B placements.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, East (Mr. Prescott) on 20 January at column 38.

Ethnic Minority Statistics

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General on what criteria areas were selected for inclusion in the pilot tests which have been initiated by his Department to collect information on ethnic minority unemployment statistics.

Mr. Alan Clark: The criteria used for selecting unemployment benefit office areas for inclusion in the pilot testing of the collection of ethnic minority unemployment statistics were:

1. an area of high unemployment and significant ethnic minority concentration;
2. an area of high unemployment and low ethnic minority concentration; and
3. an area of good employment with a significant mixture of minority communities.

Job Start Scheme

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on his policy underlying the taxation of the £20 a week special allowance for people employed in a job paying less than £80 a week within the framework of the job start scheme.

Mr. Alan Clark: Taxation policy is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Income derived from employment is ordinarily subject to tax.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General what has been the change in the percentage of the retail prices index in mortgage interest payments between April 1979 and April 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: The weight attaching to the component of the retail prices index which relates to mortgage interest payments increased from 3·1 per cent. to 4·6 per cent. between 1979 and 1985. The index for mortgage interest payments rose by 158 per cent. between April 1979 and April 1985.

Miss Juliet Kent

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to the reply of 22 October 1985, Official Report, column 121, when he expects the proceedings to recover wages owed to Miss Juliet Kent to begin.

Mr. Trippier: Formal action to institute proceedings for recovery under section 22(5) of the Wages Councils Act 1979 was taken on 30 October 1985, but it is not possible at present to say when the case will come before a court.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Motor Vehicles (Theft)

Mr. Malins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of total recorded crime in London in each of the last three years consisted of motor vehicle theft; and what proportion was cleared up.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is given in the table:

Offences of motor vehicle theft recorded by the Police Metropolitan Police District and City of London — Percentages

	1982	1983	1984
Recorded offences of motor vehicle theft as a percentage of all offences recorded by the police	15	14	13
Percentage of recorded offences of motor vehicle theft cleared up by the police	9	9	9

Mr. Malins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he gives to motor vehicle manufacturers in relation to the prevention of auto crime.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Government believe that motor vehicle manufacturers have a significant role to play in preventing autocrime by designing and producing more secure cars. Last November, I chaired a conference devoted to autocrime, and attended by motor manufacturers, at which both the findings of a Home Office funded research project on design solutions to autocrime and the related report of a working group on car security set up by the Home Office standing conference on crime prevention, were presented. One of the initiatives to emerge from the recent crime prevention seminar held by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister was a British standard for car security to be prepared by the British Standards Institution with the help of motor manufacturers.

Voluntary Services Unit (Grants)

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, in respect of grants given by the voluntary services unit, if he will give the value of grants approved or made for 1985-86, with details of the name, type and purpose of the organisation in receipt of each grant, and the value of each grant.

Mr. Waddington: In the following tables the types of organisation or project in respect of which grants have been made or approved so far in 1985-86 are grouped according to the nature of the organisation or, where more appropriate, the nature of the project which the grant is intended to support. Where the grant is for a specific project, the purpose of the project is shown if that is not evident from the name of the organisation carrying out the project or to which the grant is paid.

Immigration

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the electoral register is currently used by the immigration authorities; and whether there are any plans to use it in that respect when it is available in machine readable form.

Mr. Waddington: The register of electors is consulted by the immigration department in appropriate cases. There are no current plans for machine readable versions of the register to be used.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of visitors from the Indian sub-continent refused leave to enter the United Kingdom, the number of those on whose behalf temporary admission is granted following representations by hon. Members and the number of those who are subsequently granted visitor's visas.

Mr. Waddington: The table below gives the number of passengers from the Indian sub-continent who, having been refused entry, were removed in the year to end-November 1985. It is not possible to say how many of these passengers initially sought entry as visitors.

	Number
Bangladesh	1,062
India	1,948
Pakistan	1,486

The other information requested is not available and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of visitors from the Indian sub-continent who, having been granted temporary entry following representation by an hon. Member (a) fails to comply with an order to be removed within 14 days without representations on their behalf and (b) disappear without further trace.

Mr. Waddington: The information is not available in the form requested.

Sentencing

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) to what factors he attributes the difference in the custodial sentencing rates in 1983 in magistrates courts of adult males found guilty of indictable offences in the petty sessional divisions of Chester (28 per cent.), Ellesmere Port (17 per cent.), and Macclesfield (16 per cent.), respectively; and if he will make a statement;

(2) to what factors he attributes the difference in the custodial sentencing rates in 1983 in magistrates courts of adult males found guilty of indictable offences in the petty session divisions of Brighton (30 per cent.), Hastings (25 per cent.), and Lewes (14 per cent.), respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Sentencing is a complex process, and factors which might account for variations between different areas cannot easily be identified. The choice of sentence in a particular case, within the range provided by law, must remain a matter for the court dealing with the case, subject to the defendant's right of appeal. As to general principles, we take opportunities to draw to the attention of the magistrates relevant guidance of the Court of Appeal, including guidance on the use of custody, and to emphasise the value of using non-custodial sentences wherever appropriate. Fresh guidance on sentencing powers and principles will be given in the new edition of "The Sentence of the Court", due to be published in late February.

Mr. P. Reid

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to answer the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside's letter of 18 October concerning Mr. P. Reid.

Mr. Mellor: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 16 January.

Drink-driving

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motor car drivers charged with drinking and driving offences in each of the last five years have been found to have a blood alcohol content of more than 120 mg. per 100 ml. blood; and what proportion of the total number of drivers charged with such offences this represented in each year.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information relates to findings of guilt for offences of driving or being in charge of a motor vehicle while having a breath, blood or urine alcohol concentration in excess of the prescribed limits (80 mg. per 100 ml. of blood, 35 microgrammes per 100 ml. of breath or 107 mg. per 100 ml. of urine). A breakdown of the alcohol concentration recorded in these findings of guilt is published annually in "Offences Relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (table 16 of the issue for 1984), copies of which are in the Library. In 1984, out of a total of 79,369 findings of guilt for these offences, 78 per cent. (62,290) of those found guilty were recorded as having alcohol in excess of 120 mg. per 100 ml. of blood (or equivalent for a breath or urine test). There were, in addition, 22,100 findings of guilt for the offences of failing to provide a specimen for initial breath test or for evidential test, or being unfit through drink or drugs, while driving or being in charge of a motor vehicle.

Byelaws

Mr. Grylls asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely effect on business of the provisions of the model byelaws recently approved by his Department.

Mr. Mellor: It is not clear to me which model byelaws my hon. Friend has in mind, but if he will write to me I shall be glad to consider the matter further.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the advisory committee on animal experiments will publish its report.

Mr. Mellor: The advisory committee on animal experiments does not publish a regular report on its work, but from time to time its reports to my right hon. Friend on subjects of special investigation are published. The animals procedures committee which is to replace the present committee under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords], will be required to make to my right hon. Friend an annual report on its activities, which will be published.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what organisations the advisory committee on animal experiments has consulted.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend receives advice, which he makes available to the committee on matters in which it is interested, from scientific and professional bodies and animal welfare organisations. Members of the committee also visit places where experiments are carried out.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many laboratories the advisory committee on animal experiments has visited.

Mr. Mellor: This information is given in an appendix to the "Statistics of Experiments on Live Animals, Great Britain" published each year by my right hon. Friend. In 1984, the last year for which statistics are available, members of the committee made three visits to places registered under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876, to see experiments in progress and to have discussions with licensees.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the advisory committee on animal experiments has made in assessing the use of animals in painful psychological and behavioural experiments.

Mr. Mellor: The advisory committee is continuing its examination of psychological and behavioural experiments using live animals, which involve the infliction of stress. The committee expects in due course to report to my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria will be used to choose the veterinary surgeon, and the person responsible for day-to-day care of laboratory animals, in connection with premises registered to perform animal experiments under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords].

Mr. Mellor: Before deciding whether or not to approve the persons nominated for these functions by applicants for certificates my right hon. Friend will take into account, in the light of the views of his inspector, the qualifications, training, experience and character of those nominated.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what number of licences for experimentation on animals in the field of microsurgery he estimates will be applied for under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords].

Mr. Mellor: It is not possible at this stage to make a precise estimate. However, the numbers of applications for personal and project licences authorising the use of live animals for the purpose of training in this highly specialised area is likely to be very small in proportion to the total numbers of applications for each kind of licence.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members and their area of expertise of the advisory committee on animal experiments.

Mr. Mellor: The present membership of the advisory committee is as follows:

Dr. M. Balls — Chairman of Trustees of Fund for the Replacement of Animals in Medical Experiments; reader in medical cell biology, University of Nottingham.
Professor D. Blackman—Professor of Psychology, University College, Cardiff.
J. Brice, Esq.—consultant neurosurgeon, Wessex Neurological Centre.
Dr. C. Coid — Head of Division of Comparative Medicine MRC Clinical Research Centre, Harrow.
Professor A. Dayan — Professor of Toxicology, DHSS Department of Toxicology, St. Bartholomew's Hospital.
Professor the Rev. G. R. Dunstan — Emeritus Professor of Moral and Social Theology, University of London, King's College.
T. Field-Fisher, Esq., QC—Recorder, Chairman of RSPCA Legal Committee.
Dr. J. Hampson — Chief Animal Experimentation Research Officer, RSPCA.
Clive Hollands, Esq. — Director, Scottish Society for the Prevention of Vivisection; Secretary, committee for the Reform of Animal Experimentation.
Sir Andrew Huxley, FRS — Past President, Royal Society; Master of Trinity College, Cambridge.
Professor S. Jennett—Professor of Physiology, University of Glasgow.
Dr. B. B. Newbould — Research Director, ICI Pharmaceuticals.
N. Snodgrass, Esq.—Retired Veterinary Surgeon.

Firearms (Heathrow)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how may foreign nationals, by nationality, not working for or associated with foreign airlines are permitted to carry firearms at Heathrow.

Mr. Hurd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that an operations manager, who is a Zimbabwean employed by the British Airports Authority, holds a firearm certificate in connection with the performance of duties at Heathrow. This authorises the possession of pistols specially designed to scare birds.

Turkish Citizens

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the number of Turkish citizens in inner London, their status, and the authority for their residence within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: Based on information available from the 1981 and 1983 labour force surveys and the 1981 census of population, it is estimated that there were between 10,000 and 20,000 Turkish nationals usually resident in Great Britain in the early 1980s, about half of whom were living in inner London. The other information is not available.

Special Event Radio

Mr. Gale asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about special event radio.

Mr. Hurd: Following the occasional use of low-powered radio at sporting and other events, I have decided to establish a broader-based experiment in the use of such radio to provide information or other services to those attending events such as festivals, county or other shows, motor racing meetings and other sporting events. The experiment will run for two years from 1986, and up to 25 licences for special event radio will be available in each year of the experiment. Licences will be issued by the Home Office, and, subject to the availability of frequencies, will be available for recognised events which are of not more than two weeks duration and which take place within a single site. Depending upon the site, the maximum effective radiated power will be 50 milliwatts, and frequencies will be allocated in the medium wave band. A licence fee of £450 will be payable to cover Home Office and Department of Trade and Industry costs; where, however, a licensee proposes to broadcast on separate occasions at the same site, a fee of £100 will be payable for successive licences, provided that the technical characteristics of the broadcasting station remain the same. It is my intention that special event radio should be subject broadly to the same conditions on the content of broadcasts, advertising and sponsorship as the experimental neighbourhood community radio stations due to begin broadcasting in the near future.

Full details of the general and technical conditions and the licensing procedure for special event radio are set out in notes for the guidance of prospective licencees, available from the Home Office. Applications for licences for events in 1986 should reach the Home Office by 28 February 1986. Consistent with the experimental nature of the scheme, applications will be selected with a view to providing experience of special event radio at a range of different events in different locations.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Private Residential Care (Elderly People)

16. Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to guarantee the continued payment of fees for elderly or disabled people in private residential care who were paying their own fees until 1985 and who are now dependent on supplementary benefit.

Mr. Newton: In most such cases benefit will be payable up to the level of the normal limits laid down by Parliament. However, larger amounts may be payable in a few exceptional cases.

51. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the current requirements for the registration and licensing of all nursing homes and residential care homes for the elderly under the Registered Homes Act 1984 and the Residential Care Homes Regulations 1984; and how many of each were so registered in each of the past three years.

Mr. Whitney: We are satisfied that the Registered Homes Act 1984 and associated regulations which came into force on 1 January 1985 improved and strengthened the registration arrangements for nursing homes and residential care homes. It is too soon to assess their impact but the Department's social services inspectorate is conducting a study over two years to see how local authorities are implementing the new legislation and what effect it is having on standards in residential care homes and we shall consider their report in due course with interest.

The numbers of registered residential care homes in England for elderly and disabled people at 31 March of the last three years was as follows:

	Number
1983	4,509
1984	5,222
1985	*6,443

*Provisional.

Comparable information on nursing homes is not available. The total number of nursing homes registered in England, excluding those with operating theatres, at 31 December each year was:

	Number
1982	1,036
1983	1,127
1984	1,295

38. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the operation of the procedures for placing elderly people in residential homes and nursing homes at his Department's expense.

Mr. Newton: We are currently reviewing the financial limits for payments of supplementary benefit in such cases, as I indicated in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) earlier today, and as I have stated in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) today, we are working with the local authority associations with a view to improved co-operation between the Department and local authorities in this field.

Basildon Hospital (Births)

17. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of babies born at Basildon hospital in each of the last five years.

Mr. Whitney: The total numbers of births at Basildon hospital in the years 1980 to 1984 were as follows:

	Number
1980	2,275
1981	2,211
1982	2,071
1983	2,169
1984	2,278

Information for 1985 is not yet available centrally.

Social Security Reform

18. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what savings he expects to make by replacing the current system of single payments by the social fund as set out in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security".

Mr. Newton: A decision on the resources to be devoted to the social fund will be taken nearer the time when the fund is introduced.

30. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received since the publication of the White Paper on "Reform of Social Security".

Mr. Newton: A number of organisations and individuals have expressed views on various aspects of the White Paper proposals.

50. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how he would allocate extra funding if the social fund budget allocations run out before the end of the financial year under his proposals for social security reform.

Mr. Newton: Realistic budgets and effective monitoring of spending throughout the year should ensure that payments in any period are consistent with the annual budget, and we shall maintain contingency margins to respond to unpredictable levels of demand which put pressure on the allocations of individual offices.

61. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide a breakdown by sex of the figures contained in the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security".

Mr. Newton: I regret that this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services under the proposals in "Reform of Social Security" how payment for residential care and nursing homes will be made.

Mr. Newton: This will be given further consideration in the light of the current review of supplementary benefit financial limits in such cases, and of the outcome of the proposed working party with the local authority associations described in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) today.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide a breakdown by gross income level of the totals illustrated in the bottom line of tables 3(i)B, 3(ii)B and 12(ii)B of the technical annex to the White Paper on the reform of social security, distinguishing, where possible, between couples and single parents, using the following or similar gross weekly income bands: under £50, £50-74, £75-£99, £100-£124 and £125 plus.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1985, c. 697-98]: The number of sample cases is too small to justify a separate income band for under £50, but otherwise the information requested is given in the tables. Gross income has been taken to cover all normal weekly income, including current family income supplement and child benefit and other state benefits, but excluding housing benefit.

As in the technical annex, all numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10,000. As a result the combined totals may not exactly match the totals in the original tables.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what consideration he has given to the effect of his proposals in "Reform of Social Security: Programme for Action", on the medical rehabilitation services; if they will provide any disincentive to treatment; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consideration he has given to the effect of his proposals in "Reform of Social Security; Programme for Action," on the employment medical rehabilitation services; if they will provide any disincentives to rehabilitation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 60]: We do not anticipate that the proposals in the White Paper will discourage those who might avail themselves of either of the services referred to by the right hon. Member. We shall, however, continue to keep the matter in view as the detailed arrangements for the schemes outlined in the White Paper are developed.

Benefits (Uprating)

19. Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to announce the next benefits uprating, and on which date in July it is proposed that this uprating will come into effect.

Mr. Major: The next main uprating of social security benefits will come into effect in the week beginning 28 July. The uprating will be based on the movement of the retail price index from May 1985 to January 1986. The January RPI will be published on 21 February and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, will make a statement shortly afterwards giving the details of the uprating.

Pensioners (Entitlement)

20. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received concerning the position of pensioners who are too young to have built up entitlement under the state earnings-related pension scheme.

Mr. Newton: None. But representations were made during the consultation period following publication of the Green Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9517) about the position of pensioners who are too old to have built up entitlements under the state earnings-related pension scheme.

Social Work Training

21. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to increase the resources for social work training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We shall be taking into account the resources likely to be required when considering with the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work and the other Government Departments and organisations affected, the proposals for qualifying training made by the council.

29. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the existing system of social work training.

44. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to improve social work training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Changes in the present arrangements for social work training have been proposed by the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work which has statutory responsibility for promoting such training and approving its content. It is currently engaged in wide consultations on a proposal to combine the two main qualifications in social work and to extend the training period by a year to enable students to spend more time in supervised practice before qualification; and the resource implications are being examined. Appropriate training for staff already in post is also important: responsibility for meeting their needs rests with employers, who have a wide and regularly updated range of local and national training resources to draw on.

49. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to implement the recommendation of the Jasmine Beckford inquiry report on social work training.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley) earlier today.

Child Care (Research)

22. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what conclusions he draws from the latest research carried out by his Department into the state of child care in Britain.

Mr. Whitney: I recognise the importance to the improvement of social work practice of the findings of the recent research commissioned into aspects of work with children in care. A programme of dissemination has been initiated to bring these results to the attention of social work practitioners and managers. The research suggests that social work with families and children is complex and difficult, and high professional standards and sophisticated social work skills are needed.

Social Security Review

23. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on responses received to the social security review.

Mr. Newton: Final proposals were published on 16 December in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691). A Bill to give effect to these proposals was published on 17 January and will be debated on Second Reading later today.

War Widows

24. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the commitment in the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security", that local authorities will retain the power to apply special treatment to war pensioners when assessing housing benefit entitlement, will apply also to war widows.

Mr. Newton: Yes.

Students (Benefits)

25. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received in respect of the proposals in the White Paper for social security concerning student eligibility to housing and supplementary benefit.

Mr. Newton: Since publication of the White Paper we have received approximately 60 written representations and inquiries regarding these proposals.

60. Sir William van Straubenzee asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans for further withdrawal of social security benefit for students in the long vacation.

Mr. Newton: We have no present plans for changes in social security benefits for students beyond those set out in the consultation paper sent to the Social Security Advisory Committee and the Local Authority Associations on 7 January, which would restrict students' access to housing benefit for unoccupied accommodation in the long vacation but would not otherwise affect long vacation entitlement. The Government's long-term objective however remains as stated in paragraph 3.34 of Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Robert Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on social security benefits payable to students.

Mr. Newton: I understand that the committee plans to submit its report by the middle of March.

Medical Negligence

26. Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set up an inquiry into the possibility of introducing a no-faults compensation scheme to replace actions for medical negligence.

Mr. Whitney: The question of no-fault compensation for victims of medical accidents was examined by the Royal Commission on civil liability and personal injury which reported in 1978. The commission considered there would be serious difficulties in administering such a scheme, for example in distinguishing medical accidents from the natural progression of a disease or injury or from a foreseeable side effect of treatment. They concluded that such a scheme should not be introduced in this country. The Government do not consider that circumstances have changed since the commission reported to the extent necessary to justify a further inquiry.

Tranquilliser Addiction

27. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he plans to renew his Department's grant to the Tranx centre in Harrow and to other bodies combating tranquilliser addiction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: TRANX, Harrow, is funded under the Department's drugs initiative, the purpose of which is to pump-prime local projects. As in other schemes of this kind, three years is the maximum period for which central funding can be provided, after which local projects are expected to look for continued support to their local statutory authorities, which are responsible for the planning and provision of health and social services.

Mentally Handicapped Children

28. Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the objectives of his Department's policy on mentally handicapped children; how he monitors its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We want, as a high priority, co-ordinated health and social services in each locality for mentally handicapped children and adults, and a major shift from institutional health care to a range of community care according to individual needs. The main aims identified for field authorities* include provision of the support and relief services necessary to enable families to care for mentally handicapped children at home, and suitable alternatives for children who cannot live at home, including supported placement with other families. For children who need continuing health care in a residential health setting, our objective is provision outside hospital in small home-like units as near as possible to the child's family and with easy access to and from the community.

The Department's monitoring includes studying the plans of health authorities and the statistics on children in hospital and in NHS units in the community. Regional health authorities have been asked to monitor the action of district health authorities working in consultation with local authorities to get long-stay mentally handicapped children out of hospital. In appropriate cases Ministers raise the question of progress towards this objective with them, and also wider questions of collaboration with local authorities, in our annual reviews of regional health authorities. However, not all aspects of developing services are readily identifiable and measureable, nor is detailed central monitoring appropriate when policy allows for implementation locally, according to local knowledge, circumstances, needs and professional practice.

The national development team for mentally handicapped people examines authorities' self-monitoring arrangements, and informs my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services of the current state of mental handicap services.

* Outlined in the White Paper "Better Services for the Mentally Handicapped" Cmnd. 4683 (1971), recently summarised in the paper "Mental Handicap: Policies and Priorities" appended to the Government response to the Second Report from the Social Services Committee, 1984-85 Session: Community Care, Cmnd. 9674 (1985).

Nursing

31. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has had from the nursing profession in respect of the implementation of the recommendations of the Griffiths report, and if he will make a statement.

37. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received from representatives of the nursing profession about their role in the management of the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: My right hon. Friend has recently received a letter from the general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing.

Crown Immunity

32. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the abolition of Crown immunity in areas for which he is responsible.

Mr. Hayhoe: Representations about the Crown immunity of the National Health Service have been received from a number of right hon. and hon. Members, and from the Association of District Councils, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the British Pest Control Association, the General Municipal and Boilermakers Allied Trades Union, the Institution of Environmental Health Officers, the National Association of Health Authorities and the Royal College of Nursing.

Home Helps

33. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has rescinded the circular recommending 12 home helps per thousand of elderly population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: This guideline figure for home helps was suggested in a circular issued in 1972 in connection with the preparation of local authority 10-year development plans, which have now been discontinued. Simple single indicators for the provision of individual services are no longer recognised as useful. It is for each social services authority to decide on the level and nature of the home help service to be provided, taking into account local need and other factors including the availability of voluntary, private and informal care.

54. Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what instructions about home helps he proposes to give to the social services inspectorate on its monitoring of social services department.

Mr. Whitney: Local authorities are responsible for providing home help services and for monitoring their performance. The social services inspectorate's role is to help local authorities secure the most effective use of professional and other resources, normally by comparing provision in a range of authorities and by identifying good practice and spreading knowledge about it. These are the purposes of the inspection of home help services which is in the inspectorate's work programme for 1986.

Ancillary Workers

34. Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to improve the remuneration of National Health Service ancillary workers.

Mr. Whitney: The pay and conditions of National Health Service ancillary staff are matters for the ancillary staffs Whitley council. The management side of the council is currently considering the pay claim for 1986-87 presented by the trade union side and informal discussions are taking place between representatives of both sides. The next scheduled meeting of the council is on 13 February.

36. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the pay of National Health Service ancillary workers.

Mr. Whitney: Seven hon. Members have forwarded a circular letter issued by the trade union side of the ancillary staffs Whitley council. We have also received 11 other representations from hon. Members and members of the public since the pay claim for 1986-87 was presented to the council on 11 November 1985.

Claimants (Rates)

35. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on his proposal to make claimants pay a minimum of 20 per cent. of their rate bills, contained in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security".

Mr. Newton: The representations received on this proposal, which was first published in the Green Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9517), are summarised in paragraph 3.55 of the White Paper.

Family Credit Scheme

39. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimates he has of the level of co-operation that employers will be willing to give in order to operate the new family credit scheme.

Mr. Newton: We would expect that employers, with whose organisations we shall be continuing to consult on the detailed working of the scheme, will co-operate fully in its operation.

Oral Contraceptives

40. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he now expects to issue new guidelines for the prescription of oral contraceptives to girls aged below 16 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I hope to make an announcement soon.

Unemployment Benefit

41. Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will review the practice of ceasing to pay unemployment benefit whilst investigations are made into the circumstances of an employee leaving his previous employment.

Mr. Newton: We have no plans to change these procedures which are necessary to safeguard public funds.

Limited List Prescribing

42. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the extent to which the limited list of prescribable drugs is achieving its objectives.

Mr. Hayhoe: The savings flowing from the selected list scheme of prescribable drugs are on course for the target of £75 million a year and are already being spent elsewhere in the National Health Service. This initiative has also stimulated pharmaceutical companies to reduce prices of many of their products to the level the National Health Service can afford. The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs has worked hard and effectively to ensure that clinical needs of patients are met at reasonable cost to the National Health Service.

Dental Treatment

43. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he plans to make any changes to the procedures used for investigating complaints about dental treatment.

Mr. Hayhoe: The procedures for investigating complaints are under review.

North-Western Region

45. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the provision of services by the individual district health authorities in the north-west region.

Mr. Hayhoe: The provision of services by district health authorities is monitored by regional health authorities, to which they are accountable. The hon. Member may therefore wish to direct any inquiries about district level services to the chairman of North-Western regional health authority.

Privatisation (Northern Region)

46. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent discussions he had with the chairman of the northern regional health authority on the implementation of the Government's privatisation programme.

Mr. Whitney: We discussed competitive tendering with all regional chairmen on 16 October 1985.

Regional Health Authorities (Funding)

47. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any representations from regional health authorities about proposed levels of funding for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The level of resource allocations is inevitably the subject of discussion from time to time at annual regional reviews and other meetings between Ministers and regional health authority chairmen.

Family Income

48. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies he has conducted into the distribution of income within families with low incomes.

Mr. Newton: Studies in connection with the social security review looked at the difference in income distribution between families as a tax unit and households, which may include other adults, though not into the distribution of family income between all the different members of the family. The Green Paper (Cmnd. 9519) refers to the differences in apparent income if young unemployed adults are treated as members of the household in which they live rather than as individuals.

Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Stanmore

52. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive a report from the Bloomsbury district health authority on the future of the royal national orthopaedic hospital, Stanmore.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that Bloomsbury health authority considered the recommendations in the Le Quesne report on the future of orthopaedic services, and the responses to consultation on the report, at its meeting on 4 December. The authority agreed in principle a number of proposals affecting the Royal National orthopaedic hospital at Stanmore, deferred others for further consideration and agreed that there should be discussions with North-East Thames regional health authority on the report's recommendations, and in particular on the projected funding for the service levels recommended. Any proposals for major changes at Stanmore which arise from any of these discussions will need to be the subject of full public consultation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is already committed to taking the final decisions on any proposals for major change. A formal report would be made to the Secretary of State only if and when that stage is reached.

Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel

53. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel in connection with its claim for recognition for industrial relations purposes.

Mr. Whitney: I met the general secretary and other representatives on 27 November to discuss the association's claim for recognition at both national level and locally in particular health authorities.

Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped People

55. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he can provide about re-admission figures for the mentally ill and the mentally handicapped as a result of the trend towards short-term care.

Mr. Whitney: Information on re-admissions to mental illness hospitals and units up to 1983 is contained in table A1.3 of booklet 1, "Mental illness hospitals and units in England: trends in admissions, discharges and residents", in the DHSS series "Mental Health Statistics for England 1983". Corresponding information for mental handicap hospitals and units is contained in table B1.3 of booklet 2 in the same series. The booklets also contain, at tables A7.2 and B7.2 respectively, information on lengths of stay.

Some more up-to-date, but less detailed, information is included in the DHSS Statistical Bulletins 6/85, "Mental illness hospitals and units in England, results from the Mental Health Enquiry 1984", and 7/85, "Mental handicap hospitals and units in England, results from the Mental Health Enquiry 1984". Copies of these booklets and statistical bulletins are in the Library.

It may be helpful to point out that while some re-admissions represent a further attempt to treat a patient who has already received in-patient treatment and needs it again, a growing number, particularly for elderly mentally ill people and for mentally handicapped people, reflect the trend, which I welcome, towards arranging a succession of brief admissions at regular intervals for people living with their family or other informal carers, primarily or partly to provide respite for the carers. Our figures of course include both groups.

Newcastle Central Office

56. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General in the Appropriation Account, volume 8, clases XI-XII, 1984, dealing with financial discrepancies arising from industrial action at the Newcastle central office of his Department.

Mr. Newton: Certain computer analyses breaking down total expenditure between different types of benefit were not produced during the dispute. As a result, some of the individual figures quoted in the appropriation accounts may be less precise than usual. The report from the Comptroller and Auditor General drew attention to this, but did not suggest any impropriety or irregularity in accounting. It would not be appropriate for me to comment further on the report until it has been considered by the Public Accounts Committee in the usual way.

Social Fund

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received in support of the proposed social fund; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The responses are not generally in a form which can sensibly be used to provide a simple breakdown of numbers for or against this proposal. However, the important points made about it, and the Government's conclusions, are in chapter 4 of the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691), particularly at paragraphs 4.13 to 4.16.

Mucodyne

58. Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has now received to add the drug Mucodyne to the prescribed list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Many letters and other representations about the drug Mycodyne and other oral mucolytics have been received. The Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs has considered this matter as I explained in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle) on 24 October 1985 at column 231. Amending regulations came into effect on 1 December 1985.

Funeral Costs

59. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provision he will make following the implementation of the White Paper on social security reform for funeral costs incurred by those not in receipt of family credit, housing benefit or income support.

Mr. Newton: Our aim, as set out in the White Paper, is to help people on low incomes who are unable to meet the reasonable cost of a funeral for which they are responsible. To minimise detailed questioning of applicants, we intend to take receipt of income support, family credit or housing benefit as an indication of low income. We are at present considering whether it would be possibble to extend help in exceptional cases to any other applicants on comparably low incomes — for example, because they had not claimed one of the qualifying benefits—without introducing a system which entailed intrusive questioning and complex administration.

NHS (Management Reorganisation)

62. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress made in the reorganisation of senior management in the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: Good progress is being made with implementation of the general management function in the National Health Service. All regional and district general managers are now in post, and about two thirds of the expected final number of unit general managers have been appointed. New management arangements for all 14 regional health authorities, and for 168 district health authorities, out of a total of 191, have been approved.

Mentally Ill People (Residential Care)

63. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress has been made in implementing the recommendation on residential care for the mentally ill of the second report of the Social Services Committee on community care.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Members for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) and for Barnsley, East (Mr. Patchett) earlier today. None of the recommendations in the committee's report related specifically to residential care for mentally ill people.

Oldham District General Hospital (Hip Operations)

64. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many senior house officers are at present available to assist the consultant orthopaedic surgeon with hip operations carried out at Oldham district general hospital.

Mr. Whitney: I regret we do not hold such information centrally. The hon. Member may like to make his inquiries of the chairman of Oldham district health authority which is responsible for the management of Oldham district general hospital.

Supplementary Benefit and Residential Care (Report)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he proposes to take on the report of the working party on supplementary benefit and residential care; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Supplementary benefit payments for people in residential care were among the matters considered by a working party, set up by my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Social Security, the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Secretary of State for Wales in conjunction with the local authority associations, which examined the scope for improving collaboration between the Department and local authorities over financial support for residents of private and voluntary residential care homes. A copy of the working party's report has been placed in the Library.

The working party's main conclusions were:

i. long term solutions should be sought to the problems created by the existing parallel systems of local authority and supplementary benefit support for people in residential care;
and

ii. arrangements should be explored for extending local authorities' existing multi-disciplinary assessment arrangements to anyone in residential care claiming benefit and for local authorities to advise DHSS local offices on an appropriate level of payment for particular homes.

These recommendations have now been discussed with the local authority associations and we have agreed to set up a further joint working party to consider means of harmonising financial support for people in residential care homes. We have also agreed to carry out pilot studies to test the feasibility of the initial working party's recommendations on assessing the need of supplementary benefit claimants for residential home care and on the provision by local authorities of advice on the reasonableness of charges. Consideration is also being given to the position of people in nursing homes who claim supplementary benefit.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Mid Glamorgan he envisages will be affected by his proposed changes in housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is not available. The sample data used for illustrative purposes in the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" are not broken down by counties.

Feldene

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what complaints, representations or comments have been made to his Department about the drug Feldene and its effects upon patients; and if he will describe the nature of the said complaints, representations and comments stating what investigative action his Department is carrying out or is proposing to carry out into or about Feldene;

(2) what advice his Department has given, is giving or is proposing to general practitioners and other doctors and patients about prescribing Feldene or piroxicam;

(3) what information he has about the drug Feldene or its generic equivalent, and its effects upon patients; if he will describe the nature of the information available to him, stating what investigations and action his Department is carrying out or is proposing to carry out into or about Feldene or its generic equivalent;

(4) if he will make a statement on his policy on the prescription of the drugs Feldene and piroxicam following the recent study by the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Mr. Hayhoe: Piroxicam (trade name Feldene) is a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drug licensed for the treatment of gout and pain and inflammation in rheumatic disease and other musculo-skeletal disorders. I am advised that piroxicam, like other drugs in the non-steroidal anti-inflammatory class, can cause adverse reactions; advice to doctors on these is contained in the British National Formulary and in prescribing literature. The Committee on Safety of Medicines has received some 2,440 reports from doctors of suspected adverse reactions to piroxicam since the product was first marketed; an analysis of these reports is available from the CSM to doctors. All such reports are evaluated by the committee, which keeps the safety of the non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs under close surveillance.

I am advised that there is nothing to add at present to the prescribing advice contained in the British National Formulary. The Committee on Safety of Medicines is currently making a further special review of the safety of non-steroidal drug, including piroxicam.

Board and Lodging Payments

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to honour the undertaking given on 2 April 1985, Official Report, column 1186, to review the limits on board and lodging payments; and what form the review will take.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) earlier today.

Dental Charges

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to introduce legislation requiring dentists to advertise charges for private consultations, examinations, fillings, resin dentures and gold soft crowns.

Mr. Hayhoe: I welcome the recommendation of the Director General of Fair Trading that the rules of the General Dental Council on advertising, which prevent dentists from publishing charges for private treatment, should be relaxed. Discussions with representatives of the council are taking place.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to publish the report of the Schanschieff committee of inquiry into unnecessary dental treatment.

Mr. Hayhoe: I will make an announcement in due course.

Women's Hospital (Liverpool)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to visit the women's hospital, Liverpool, to inspect medical facilities.

Mr. Hayhoe: No.

Regional Health Authorities (Membership)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each regional health authority the names of any members who were nominated by trade unions.

Mr. Hayhoe: Nominations for members of regional health authorities are not sought from individual trade unions. In accordance with paragraphs 2*(d)* of schedule 5 to the National Health Service Act 1977, the Trades Union Congress and the managerial, professional and staff liaison group are consulted before appointments to health authorities are made. Current members of regional health authorities appointed by the Secretary of State from amongst the nominations of these bodies are as follows:

REGION AND MEMBER

East Anglian—Mr. M. Upcroft.
South East Thames—Mr. A. P. Robinson.
South West Thames—Mr. M. Ward.
Wessex—Mr. R. Lee.
Oxford—Mr. K. Jerrome.
South Western—Mr. R. E. Heal.
West Midlands—Mr. S. B. Shuttleworth.
Mersey—Mr. E. Bromley.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if his Department issues guidance or minimum standards on how many speech therapists should be employed in relation to population.

Mr. Whitney: The Quirk report recommended in 1972 that there should be an increase to six speech therapists per 100,000 population by 1992. At that time the ratio was 1.76 and had reached 4.6 by 1984, the latest year for which figures in this detail are available.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what reports or research has been undertaken by his Department on speech therapy.

Mr. Whitney: The following research projects have been supported by the Department since March 1980:—

Miss M. E. Wynter and Mrs. S. P. Martin, Central School of Speech and Drama, London: Numerical Classification of Deviant Voice Quality (completed).

Mrs. M. Eversham and Dr. F. Fransella, Hertfordshire Area Health Authority: An Investigation of the Effect of Stuttering Relapse Rate of a Combined Programme of Training in Special Technique and Psychological Reconstruction (completed).

Dr. D. Bainton, Miss R. David, Frenchay Hospital, Bristol: Evaluation of the Levels of Outcome in Stroke Patients with Dysphasia who are treated by either Speech Therapists or Volunteers (completed).

Dr. K. E. Patterson, Dr. J. Morton, MRC Applied Psychology Unit, Cambridge: Efficacy of Cues for Word Finding in Aphasia — Implications for Therapy and Theory (completed).

Dr. M. C. Fairhurst, University of Kent: A User-Orientated and Adaptively Structured Therapy Aid for the Speech-Impaired Child (completed).

Miss M. E. Edwards, Nottingham Health Authority: Criteria of Selection of Children for Speech Therapy (completed).

Dr. P. Grunwell and Dr. J. Connolly, Leicester Polytechnic School of Speech Therapy. Development of Objective Procedures in Assessment and Planning for Phonological Disability in Children 1983-1986 (September).

Dr. M. A. Chamberlain, University of Leeds: Communication Aids Provision 1983-1986 (November).

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to initiate new research into the value and role of speech therapists.

Mr. Whitney: Experience shows that it would not be appropriate to attempt broadly based research into the value of the work of speech therapists; rather, attention needs to be focused on individual treatment techniques dealing with different types of speech and language disability.

We are in the process of commissioning a project to evaluate the work of communication aids centres and this will show the contribution of speech therapists in the fast-developing field of communication aids.

We have no plans at present for initiating further research.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many speech therapist posts have been frozen in the past 18 months;

(2) how many speech therapist posts have been completely withdrawn in the past 18 months.

Mr. Whitney: The complement of speech therapists is a matter for decision by each health authority in the light of its assessment of service needs and available resources. We have no information centrally on the many decisions taken in this context.

Accommodation Charges

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will take steps to bring into line the capital assets disregard arrangements for the assessment of part III accommodation charges with those covering entitlement to supplementary benefit; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) today.

Hospital Kitchens

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services who in the National Health Service has the ultimate administrative responsibility for health and safety standards in hospital kitchens.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health and safety standards in hospital kitchens are the operational responsibility of health authorities. Following the Griffiths report, in discharging this responsibility authorities will expect their general managers to ensure that arrangements are made for securing and monitoring standards in this important area.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many Crown notices have been issued regarding National Health Service hospitals in each of the last five years; and what were the results.

Mr. Hayhoe: The number of Crown notices to health authorities in 1985 are not yet available. The figures for the years 1980-84 are as follows:

Year	Improvement	Prohibition	Total
1980	24	5	29
1981	93	6	99
1982	79	12	94
1983	40	10	50
1984	28	6	34

Health authorities are required to comply with the terms of a Crown notice and there are arrangements for any failure to do so to be brought to the attention of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. This has not been necessary in any case.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set up an investigation into the condition of the kitchens at Kings College hospital.

Mr. Hayhoe: South-East Thames regional health authority has been asked for an urgent report on the allegations of poor hygiene standards in the kitchens at Kings College hospital. According to its interim report, a programme of upgrading work had already been agreed with the local environmental health officer and is being implemented. There are also training schemes for kitchen staff agreed by the environmental health officer. An inspection of the kitchens was carried out by the local environmental health officer on Friday 24 January. The final report by the regional health authority will give its response to the recommendations arising from this inspection.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has on the identity of those hospitals which have kitchens with such low hygiene standards that they could be prosecuted, except for the practice of Crown immunity; and if he will publish such information.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aldridge- Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd) on 24 January at columns 347-48. All allegations of poor food hygiene standards in National Health Service hospitals which are brought to the Department's attention are followed up.

Smoking

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much grant has been paid to the Health Education Council to discourage smoking as the principal known cause of lung cancer in each of the last eight years and in total over that period.

Mr. Whitney: Over the past eight years the Health Education Council (HEC) has spent £9·8 million specifically on its anti-smoking programme, that is:

Year	£ million
1977-78	0·2
1978-79	0·3
1979-80	0·4
1980-81	0·7
1981-82	1·1
1982-83	2·4
1983-84	2·6
1984-85	2·1

In addition, there is expenditure as part of other HEC programmes, in particular the coronary heart disease programme, which is also directed against smoking.

Maternity Wards (Salesmen)

Dame Jill Knight asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to prevent access by travelling salesmen to new mothers in maternity wards in National Health Service hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Representatives of baby milk manufacturers are given access to mothers in maternity wards only with the agreement of the health authority and health professionals. Whilst breastfeeding is undoubtedly best and mothers are encouraged to breastfeed, new mothers who cannot or choose not to should learn about infant formulae and bottle-feeding under the supervision of health professionals.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what evidence he has of any change of attitude among young people towards the misuse of heroin and cocaine following the Government's anti-drugs advertising campaign.

Mr. Whitney: Preliminary results of the independent evaluation of the campaign are now available. They suggest that there has been an increase in awareness of the negative consequences of using heroin; a deflation in the image of heroin and of misusers; an increase in the proportion saying they would reject heroin if offered and that there are indications of a more accurate, realistic basis for rejection of heroin. Cocaine is also seen as dangerous and this view appears to have been unaffected by the campaign. A copy of the full evaluation results will be placed in the Library when they are available.

Benefits

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the savings if all the main national insurance benefits were reduced by £14 for a single person and £28 for married couples, without any offsetting increases in supplementary benefit or housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: If the main national insurance benefits were reduced by £14 for a single person and £28 for married couples the saving to the national insurance fund would be about £9 billion in a full year.

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish tables, similar to those in his Department's tax/benefit model table, showing net weekly spending power for each of a single wage married couple with two children aged four and six years and three children aged three, eight and 11 years earning £60, £70, £80, £90, £100, £110, £120, £130, £140, £150, £160 and £170 (a) under the existing tax and benefit systems and (b) under the benefit system proposed in Cmnd. 9691, using the illustrative benefit figures in the technical annex;

(2) if he will publish figures, similar to those in his Department's tax/benefit model tables, comparing net weekly spending power for a lone mother with two children aged four and six years, under the existing tax and benefit systems and under the benefit system proposed in Cmnd. 9691, using the illustrative figures in the technical annex, and in each of the following circumstances (a) not working, after one year on benefit, (b) earning £20 a week from part-time work, (c) earning £40 a week from part-time working and (d) working full-time and earning £60, £70, £80, £90, £100, £110 and £120 per week.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have replies as soon as possible.

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out a table for the years 1970 and 1984 showing numbers of recipients and dependents in receipt of supplementary benefit, and distinguishing between retirement pensioners, the unemployed, the sick and disabled, national insurance widows with and without dependent children, and lone parents.

Mr. Major: The information is as follows, giving numbers for December 1983, the latest date for which information is available.

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table similar to table 6A in the technical annex to the social security White Paper, Cmnd. 9691 showing (a) the number of people in each client group who will be unaffected by his proposals, (b) the numbers gaining or losing less than £1, (c) the numbers gaining or losing between £1 and £5 and (d) the numbers gaining or losing between £5 and £10, distinguishing in each case between (i) child benefit, (ii) supplementary benefit or income support, (iii) family income supplementary or family credit, (iv) free school meals, (v) free welfare milk and (vi) housing benefit, assuming a minimum 20 per cent. rates contribution.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Earnings-related Pensions

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Kensington, Official Report, 17 December 1985, columns 147-48, if he will now publish comparable figures showing entitlement to earnings-related pensions under the proposals in Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton: The following table shows the amount of earnings-related pension a contracted-in single man or woman retiring in April of each year with a full contribution record would receive under the scheme proposed in "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691) and the Social Security Bill 1986. The amounts are on exactly the same basis as those shown in my hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend on 17 December 1985 at columns 147-48, but exclude the basic flat rate pension of £38·30. As earnings-related pensions to people retiring in this century are unaffected by the proposed changes set out in the Social Security Bill, the amounts up to and including 1998 are identical with those given earlier. The amounts shown for 2003 and 2008 do, however, reflect these changes. It should be noted that these figures are unlikely to replicate any individual's actual experience, since they assume that earnings remain constant at a given level throughout a person's working life.

Prescriptions

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of prescriptions dispensed each year for the past five years, broken down to show the number of items and the number of actual prescriptions; and how much has been paid to pharmacists for the items prescribed.

Mr. Hayhoe: The numbers of prescriptions broken down to show the number of items as well as total costs in the last five years in England were:

Year ending	Number of prescription forms	Number of items dispensed	Total costs (including net ingredient cost) £
1980	183,690,348	303,333,862	898,099,067

1984	190,809,484	320,542,611	1,408,743,185

Disabled People

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of totals and age ranges for (a) registered disabled persons and (b) registered mobility allowance holders; and what projections of future trends have been made in each case.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of wheelchairs currently issued by the Department of Health and Social Security by type, manual or electrical; and what projections have been made of future demands.

Mr. Newton: In 1985, 141,400 non-powered and 8,200 powered wheelchairs were issued to users in England bringing the totals in use (at 30 September 1985) to 425,000 non-powered and 19,200 powered wheelchairs.

Recent trends indicate that the number of non-powered wheelchairs in use is likely to increase by 7 to 10 per cent. each year and that of powered wheelchairs by 4 to 5 per cent. each year.

Disease Statistics

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has, broken down by numbers, ages, sex, regional basis, etc. of polio victims, brittle bone sufferers, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, Parkinson's disease and spinal injuries.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have whatever information is available as soon as possible.

Income Disregard

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current figure for income disregard in respect of old people admitted to local authority homes; when this figure was last changed; how it compares with the income disregard for supplementary benefit; what representations he has received in respect of the case for adjusting it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 392]: The income disregards for assessing ability to pay charges in local authority (part III) residential homes have been effective in their present form since November 1975. The following table compares them with those related to supplementary benefit:

Constant attendance allowance paid with war pension	*A	†A

A Complete disregard.
B Discretionary disregard up to full amount.
C Disregard up to maximum of £4 in total.
D Disregard of £1 but not more than £4 together with disregard at C. No more than £1 can be disregarded in total of payments from any of these sources.
E Taken fully into account.
* This does not apply to certain claimants in residential care and nursing homes.
† Payment ceases after four weeks' residence in part III.

The responses to the consultative document on part III assessment published in January 1984 were broadly in favour of aligning the treatment of both income and capital with the supplementary benefit arrangements. Possible means of harmonising financial support for people in residential care, including residents in part III homes, are among the matters to be examined by the proposed working party with the local authority associations described in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) today.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. Malins asked the Attorney-General what was the average time between receipt of application for civil legal aid and determination thereof in England and Wales in each year from 1979-80 to 1984-85.

The Attorney-General: The average time taken to issue legal aid certificates was as follows:

	Days
1979-80	48
1980-81	51
1981-82	50
1982-83	49
1983-84	55
1984-85	56

Further information, giving a breakdown of these figures, is contained in appendix 2G to the Law Society's report for 1984-85, published in the 35th Legal Aid Annual Report page 94.

Mr. Malins asked the Attorney-General what proportion of the total criminal legal aid bill in each of the last five years in England and Wales has been recovered from defendants through contribution orders.

The Attorney-General: The proportion of the total criminal legal aid bill recovered in contributions in each of the last five years is set out in the following table:

£ million	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85
Expenditure	85·9	97·0	108·3	121·1	136·1

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authority Services (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the savings which resulted from competitive tendering for local authority services for each of the past three years; and what are the total estimated savings that can be extrapolated from this information for the current financial year.

Mrs. Rumbold: Although some information is available about the savings estimated to accrue from the award of work to contractors, it is impossible to estimate the total efficiency gains which have resulted from exposure of in-house services to competition.

Direct Labour

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to use his powers under part 3 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 relating to local authority direct labour organisations which have made less than five per cent. return in each of the past three years.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has to date used his powers under section 17(4) of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 to direct five local authorities to submit special reports on construction work carried out by their direct labour organisations. In one case he has decided to take no further action. In the other four cases he has not yet decided what action to take.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses have been received from (i) individuals, (ii) church bodies, (iii) conservation organisations and (iv) others in reply to his Department's consultation paper, The Ecclesiastical Exemption From Listed Building Control, published in 1984; and if it is intended to publish an official reply to them.

Mr. Tracey: 136 responses have been received, as follows:—

(i) individuals: 34
(ii) Church bodies: 38
(iii) conservation organisations: 25
(iv) others: 39, of which 29 were from local authorities or their associations.

The Government are continuing discussions with Church bodies and other interested organisations. My right hon. Friend will make an announcement after these discussions have been completed.

Waste Management

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the conclusions and recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Environment, report No. 11: Managing Waste: the Duty of Care: and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply of 22 January from my hon. Friend the Minister for Environment, Countryside and Local Government to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) at columns 293-4.

Local Authority Housing Stock

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest total capital value of local authority housing stock; and how this compares to five and 10 years ago.

Mr. John Patten: The market value of the local authority housing stock in England at present is estimated to be in the region of £75 billion, on the basis of hypothetical vacant possession. Estimates are not available for five years ago or ten years ago.

Commonwealth Games (Welsh Participation)

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in view of the implications for Welsh participation in the Commonwealth Games, he will intervene following the selection of six South African rugby players for the world fifteen squad to play the British Lions in Cardiff on 6 April.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I have been asked to reply.

The possible implications of sporting contacts with South Africa for participation in the Commonwealth games have been made clear to the Welsh Rugby Union on a number of occasions.

Local Government Finance

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish changes in the overall make-up of (a) total, (b) current and (c) relevant expenditure in each year from 1981-82 to 1986-87, taking account of changes in definition and service transfers from year to year.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [pursuant to his answer, 9 December 1985, c. 473]: The following table gives the level of current, relevant and total expenditure as set out in annex A of Rate Support Grant Reports (England) for the relevant years. Changes in definition and service transfers are explained in the notes.

Notes:

Changes in current expediture

(these changes are also reflected in relevant and total expenditure)

* In 1985-86 Education provision reduced because of the transfer of non-advanced further education to central government (£62 million).
† In 1985-86 Local Transport provison reduced because of the transfer of London Region Transport out of the local authority sector (£132 million).
‡ Prior to 1982-83, Local Environmental Services (LES) excluded urban programme current expenditure (in 1981-82, £3·9 million for urban programme).
‖ Prior to 1984-85, LES included administration costs of rate rebates. For 1984-85 onwards these costs shown within a separate Housing Benefit line (see •).
¶ Prior to 1983-84, all agricultural services shown within LES. From 1983-84, provision for land drainage and flood protection shown separately from LES (transfer from LES of £84·5 million).
• In 1986-87, agricultural services includes in addition to land drainage and flood protection, smallholdings and coast protection previously included in LES (transfer from LES of £0·7 million).
■ Prior to 1984-85, non Housing Revenue Account (HRA) housing included administration costs of rent allowances. From 1984-85 onwards, these costs shown within a separate Housing Benefit line (see •).
• For 1984-85 onwards, Housing Benefit administration provision shown separately and including additional discretionary rent rebates and allowances, and discretionary rate rebates. (In 1984-85, £82 million).
In 1986-87 current expenditure total reduced because of transfer to central government of various functions consequent on the abolition of the Greater London Council and the Metropolitan County Councils (£23 million).

Changes in relevant expenditure
(these changes are also reflected in total expenditure)

 From 1982-83 onwards loan charges include certain leasing payments previously classified as running expenses.
†† Prior to 1984-85 Rate Fund Contributions to HRA included administration costs attributable to rent rebate scheme. From 1984-85 onwards, these costs shown within a separate Housing Benefit line (see •).

Changes in total expenditure

‡‡ From 1983-84 onwards, the total of specific and supplementary grants includes new in-service teacher training grant (£40 million in 1983-84). From 1984-85 onwards, the total of specific and supplementary grants includes new housing benefit administration grant (£44 million in 1984-85).
 From 1985-86 onwards, the total of specific and supplementary grants includes new education support (£21 million in 1985-86) and public tranport infrastructure grants (£9 million in 1985-86).
•• From 1982-83, the definition of total expenditure was changed by the addition of the cost of interest paid on temporary borrowings for revenue purposes together with the cost of any discounts granted for prompt payment of rates. Also from 1982-83, the amount of interest receipts on rate fund revenue balances was no longer an item added to relevant expenditure to reach total expenditure.

PRIME MINISTER

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the question of the United Kingdom's deficit in manufactured trade with other EEC members.

The Prime Minister: I have no present plans to do so, but these topics are often raised generally at meetings of the European Council.

Law Centres

Mr. Knowles asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the co-ordination between the Home Office, Lord Chancellor's Department and the Department of the Environment of current responsibilities for the operation and funding of law centres; and if she will take steps to assign these responsibilities to a single Minister.

The Prime Minister: Law centres are independent local bodies (depending on local initiative and support at first instance) and are managed accordingly. The Government as such are not responsible for their operation. Financial assistance is currently provided to a number of individual law centres by the Department of the Environment under the urban programme in accordance with its general principles, priorities and procedures, and seven law centres currently receive support from the Lord Chancellor's Department. The Home Office voluntary services unit has general co-ordinating responsibilities within Government for relations with and support for the voluntary sector as a whole. There are no current plans to alter the present arrangements.

Westland plc

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government will institute proceedings against Collette Bowe under the Official Secrets Act for the unauthorised disclosure of official information in relation to the Westland affair.

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the statement which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made to the House on 23 January.

EMPLOYMENT

Health and Safety at Work etc. Act

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General what plans he has to introduce legislation to strengthen section 6 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act; and in what respect.

Mr. Trippier: Legislation to amend section 6 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act will be introduced as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits. This will take account of comments received on the proposals set out in the Health and Safety Commission's consultative document issued in August 1984.

Mr. Meacher asked the Paymaster General if he will publish the views of the member of the Health and Safety at Work Executive responsible for operation of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 in the National Health Service on the lessons learnt from the seven years' experience of Crown notice operation.

Mr. Trippier: The Health and Safety Commission has recently reviewed standards of health and safety in Crown premises. I am expecting its advice shortly.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Meacher asked the Paymaster General if he will publish the Secretary of State for Employment's letter to the General, Municipal, Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union dated 27 November 1985 regarding Crown immunity and the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974; if he will identify the cases referred to; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The General, Municipal and Boilermakers Allied Trade Union wrote on this matter to the Secretary of State for Employment's predecessor. I have arranged for a copy of my right hon. and noble Friend's reply to the GMBATU to be placed in the House of Commons library. The hon. Member should ask the GMBATU for any further information on its report which he requires.

TRANSPORT

Channel Fixed Link

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications of the decision on the fixed Channel link for the future of container ports in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The potential diversion of containers from lift-on, lift-off shipping services to rail services using a fixed link was taken into consideration when assessing the proposals for a fixed link. As I made clear in my reply on 20 December at column 345 to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hall Green (Sir R. Eyre), the Government will not seek to influence banks and other institutions by publishing information about the Government's assessments of the traffic that will use the link.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to increase from 50 per cent. to 80 per cent. the allowance given to private industries to create new railway sidings in preparation for the completion of the fixed Channel link.

Mr. David Mitchell: No.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the chairman of British Rail with a view to developing throughout the United Kingdom an electrification programme in preparation for the completion of a fixed Channel link.

Mr. David Mitchell: The chairman is already aware that I am ready to approve proposals from him for worthwhile investment in the railways.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instigate a series of trans-shipment centres in preparation for the completion of a fixed Channel link.

Mr. David Mitchell: We have no plans at present for any trans-shipment centres other than those already in the CTG proposal.

Public Transport (Expenditure)

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will show estimated expenditure in 1985-86 and planned expenditure in 1986-87 by local authorities, London Regional Transport and public transport joint boards on (a) revenue support, (b) concessionary fares, (c) public transport investment and (d) public transport administration.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information requested which is available is as follows:

	Revenue support		Concessionary fares		Public transport investment
	Estimated 1985-86 £ million	Planned 1986-87 £ million	Estimated 1985-86 £ million	Planned 1986-87 £ million	Estimated 1985-86 £ million	Planned 1986-87 £ million
London Regional Transport	*109	*79	¶ n/a	¶ n/a	230	261
Metropolitan areas (passenger transport authorities)	†259	‖273	†116	‖234	‡65	‡40
Other local authorities	¶ 97		¶ 137		‡10	‡10

Notes:

* Revenue deficit.

† Budgets: a further £40 million spending being financed from reserves.

‡ 1986-87 provision, not strictly comparable with 1985-86 estimated outturn because it excludes internally financed expenditure by public transport undertakings.

‖ PE provision, local authority budgets not yet available.

¶ Excluding expenditure in metropolitan areas, but concessionary fares includes expenditure of £72 million by London local authorities.

Information on public transport administration is not separately identifiable.

British Rail

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the chairman of British Rail a possible review of the policy of moth-balling locomotive power.

Mr. David Mitchell: The deployment of locomotives is a management matter for the British Railways Board.

MOT Test Certificates

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to require the chassis number of motor vehicles to be recorded on Ministry of Transport test certificates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I will consider requiring vehicle identification numbers to be recorded on test certificates when a greater proportion of vehicles of testable age have them. Only since 1982 have all vehicles had to be marked with a readily accessible identification number.

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to require motorists to display insurance and Ministry of Transport test certificates on vehicle windscreens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A windscreen display would not give conclusive evidence of insurance — where, for example, policy conditions were breached. It would be open to abuse and, for vehicle testing purposes, I would have to be convinced that instituting such a system would be cost-effective.

Laker Airways

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether Her Majesty's Government will apply for the coupons offered in the recently announced provisional settlement of the United States anti-trust class action which arose out of the collapse of Laker Airways.

Mr. Ridley: No. As my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry explained to the House on 11 December, the Government's view is that the unilateral application of United States' anti-trust law to air services operated under the United Kingdom-US Air Services Agreement (Bermuda 2) is not compatible with the United Kingdom's rights under the agreement and is damaging to the trading interests of the United Kingdom. Since the Government therefore consider that the bringing of the class action is incompatible with our rights under Bermuda 2, there can be no question of Government Departments benefiting from the settlement.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Illegal Fishing

42. Sir Hector Monro asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what was the number of prosecutions in 1984 and 1985, respectively, for illegal fishing in the sea.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The respective figures are 50 and 55. The figure for 1984 has been revised.

Cigarettes (Illegal Sale)

43. Mr. Foulkes asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how many prosecutions for illegal sale of cigarettes were made in 1985.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: There are no available statistics in relation to contraventions of the relevant provision which is section 18 of the Children and Young Persons (Scotland) Act 1937.

Policemen (Prosecutions)

44. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how many policemen were prosecuted for breaches of discipline during 1985.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: My Department does not prosecute policemen, or any other person, simply for breaches of discipline. Prosecutions are only undertaken in respect of breaches of the criminal law. Breaches of police discipline are a matter for chief constables or, in the case of officers above the rank of chief superintendent, police authorities. Should the case be reported to the procurator fiscal and Crown Office and reveal no criminal conduct, but a possible disciplinary breach, it may be referred to the deputy chief constable for such action, if any, as he considers appropriate.

Children and Young Persons (Prosecutions)

45. Mr. John Home Robertson asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will keep a record of prosecutions under section 18 of the Children and Young Persons (Scotland) Act 1939.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: No.

Dangerous Driving

46. Mr. Pollock asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how many prosecutions were undertaken in each of the last five years in respect of causing death by dangerous driving; and how many of those prosecutions resulted in convictions.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Figures are available for 1980 to 1984 and are as follows:

	Persons proceeded against	Persons against whom charge proved
1980	47	34
1981	35	25
1982	31	27
1983	31	26
1984	22	20

Bankhead Incident (Report)

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland when he expects to receive reports on the cause of the explosion and subsequent loss of life which occurred recently in the Bankhead area of Rutherglen; and if he will make it his policy to ensure that these reports are made available to the public.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The procurator fiscal at Glasgow has been making inquiry into the death of five persons arising from the incident at Kingsbridge drive, Rutherglen on 29 November 1985 to which the hon. Member refers, and I expect to receive his report during the course of next month. Also, I am informed that the Health and Safety Commission has directed the Health and Safety Executive in terms of section 14(2)(a) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 to investigate the incident and to make a special report to the commission. I understand that a copy of this report will be made available next month to the procurator fiscal. Recognising that this is an issue of public interest there is a likelihood that my noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate, will wish to instruct a fatal accident inquiry. The final decision will be taken once my noble and learned Friend has had an opportunity to consider the reports to which I have referred.

Death report which are prepared and submitted by procurators fiscal to Crown Office are confidential and in accordance with the normal practice the report of the procurators fiscal in this case will not be made available to the public. It is a matter for the Health and Safety Commission to decide whether the report by the Health and Safety Executive should be published.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drug Misuse

Mr. Rathbone asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his latest estimate of the number of drug misusers in Britain, by county or by health authority area.

Mr. Mellor: Since drug misuse is usually a covert activity, it is not possible to give a reliable estimate of the total number of drug misusers in Britain. Information on the number of drug addicts notified by medical practitioners to the chief medical officer at the Home Office in 1984 is given, by police force area, in tables 3.11-3.13 of "Statistics of the Misuse of Drugs, United Kingdom, Supplementary Tables, 1984". Some research carried out in two urban areas in England in 1981 suggested that the number of notified addicts was only one fifth the number of opioid addicts in the local population at that time. The research also indicated that the number of opioid addicts may have been matched by a similar number of people misusing other drugs. However, it is likely that the number of drug misusers varies greatly, according to the locality and over time.

Television Licences

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the electoral register is currently used in conjunction with the administration of television licences; and whether there are any plans to use it in that respect when it is available in machine readable form.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The electoral register is currently used by the National Television Licence Records Office to assist in identifying addresses occupied by more than one household. No decision has yet been taken on the use of the electoral register when it is available in machine readable form.

Prison Sentences (Reviews)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what review is currently taking place into the claim that those sentenced to long terms of imprisonment for their part in the Birmingham bomb outrage of the early 1970s can now prove their innocence.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend is examining the case carefully in order to determine whether material which has been sent to him contains new evidence of a kind which would make it appropriate for him to refer the case to the Court of Appeal.

Mrs. Cherry Groce

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects the investigation by the police complaints authority into the shooting of Mrs. Cherry Groce to be completed.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the report of the investigation into the shooting of Mrs. Groce is with the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Detention Centres

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number and proportion of boys received into detention centres in any recent convenient period who were assessed as being unfit and removed from the regime or transferred to another establishment.

Mr. Mellor: The information is not available currently. However, the prison department recently initiated a three-month monitoring study to determine the incidence of cases where, on reception, an inmate was assessed as unsuitable for detention in a detenction centre because of his physical or mental condition and the action taken in each case. I will write to the hon. Member when the results of the study are available.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the percentage of juveniles and young adults, respectively, received into detention centres who (a) have been in the care of a local authority and (b) have been in residential care.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not recorded centrally.

Youth Custody (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentages of (a) detention centre trainees and (b) youth custody trainees in any recent convenient period were from ethnic minorities.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 18 December 1985 at column 170.

Youth Custody (Suicides)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many actual and attempted suicides there were in detention centres and youth custody centres, respectively, in any recent convenient period.

Mr. Mellor: Between 1 January 1984 and 31 March 1985, the latest period for which full information is available, there were 110 instances of non-fatal self-injury with apparent suicidal intent in youth custody centres and five such instances in detention centres. There were no suicides in either youth custody or detention centres during this period. There has been one suicide in a youth custody centre since.

"Red Herrings"

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department's broadcasting division made any representations to the British Broadcasting Corporation about the television programme, "Red Herrings", due to have been shown on 23 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The broadcasting department made no representations to the BBC about this programme. I understand that the BBC withdrew the programme because advertisements encouraging people to watch it had been placed in the press by interested parties in advance of the broadcast. It is a long-standing policy of the BBC not to show programmes in such circumstances, in order to avoid the dangers of political or commercial manipulation.

Police (Entry Requirements)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the minimum entry requirements necessary for males and females to enter the Metropolitan police service.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The statutory qualifications for appointment as a police officer are set out in regulation 14 of the Police Regulations 1979, which provides a minimum height requirement of 172 cm (about 5′ 8″) for men and 162 cm (about 5′4″) for women. These are the minimum height requirements for the Metropolitan police, but the Commissioner uses the discretion provided by regulation 14 to accept certain candidates below the minimum height who possess special qualities or skills.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from chief constables as to the minimum entry requirements for males and females to enter their police forces.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The statutory qualifications for appointment as a police officer are set out in regulation 14 of the Police Regulations 1979, but the minimum height and eyesight requirements vary from one force to another. I am sending details to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Bryan Hubbard

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list his reasons for refusing entry into the United Kingdom to Mr. Bryan Hubbard, founder of the Church of Scientology; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Mr. Hubbard applied through his solicitors in 1982 for an entry clearance to visit the United Kingdom but declined to attend an interview with an entry clearance officer. His application was therefore refused because we could not be satisfied that he qualified for admission under the relevant provisions in the immigration rules.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to prohibit the use of animals in cosmetic tests.

Mr. Mellor: No, but under the proposed new legislation all applications for project licences for the testing of cosmetics will be referred to the new Animal Procedures Committee.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take into account the therapeutic necessity of a new product when issuing licences for experiments on animals under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords].

Mr. Mellor: Under clause 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords] my right hon. Friend is required to weigh the likely adverse effects of scientific procedures on animals against the likely benefit of the work. He will take into account, where it is relevant, the possible therapeutic effect of a product.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inspections were made by his Department's inspectors, employed under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876, between 1980 and 1985; and what proportion of these visits were unannounced.

Mr. Mellor: The information available on the number of visits made by the cruelty to animals inspectorate to Departments within places registered under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876, and to other places, relates to the years 1980 to 1984 and is given in table 24 of the "Statistics of Experiments on Living Animals, Great Britain 1984" (Cmnd 9574). The majority of these visits were made without notice.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inspectors are currently employed under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876.

Mr. Mellor: One chief inspector, two superintending inspectors and 12 inspectors.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the estimated number of licences in the substantial severity category of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords] that are expected to be applied for;

(82) what is the estimated number of licences in the moderate severity category of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords] that are expected to be applied for;

(3) what is the estimated number of licences in the mild severity category of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords] that are expected to be applied for.

Mr. Mellor: It is not possible to give reliable estimates in advance of the new licensing system coming into operation. It is likely that most work will fall into the mild or moderate categories.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are regulations ensuring that suffering experienced by animals during the LD50 test is kept to a minimum.

Mr. Mellor: The pain condition imposed under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 requires any animal in severe and enduring pain to immediately and humanely killed. Similarly, under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill [Lords], all personal licences will contain a condition requiring the immediate humane killing of any animal found to be in severe pain or severe distress which cannot be alleviated. There will also be a condition in every personal licence requiring the holder to take precautions to reduce to the minimum consistent with the purposes of the procedure any pain, distress or discomfort to the animals used.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are regulations to ensure that animals undergoing the LD50 test are anaesthetised.

Mr. Mellor: No. LD50 tests are not normally performed under anaesthesia, unless an anaesthetic agent is itself the subject of the test. The purpose of an LD50 test is to determine the toxicity of a particular substance and the administration of an anaesthetic, which is itself toxic, would be likely to invalidate the result.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average number of animals used in each LD50 test.

Mr. Mellor: The specific information requested is not available a LD50 tests are not separately identified in the current returns of statistics of experiments performed on living animals. The number of animals necessary for toxicity studies varies widely. A formal LD50 test employs five dose levels with 10 animals in each group. Other determinations in use might require as few as 10 animals in all.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information he has as to the breeds of dogs, other than greyhounds and purpose-bred animals, used in experiments in laboratories in each of the years between 1980 and 1985, and as to where these dogs were obtained;

(2) what information he has as to the number of greyhounds used in experiments in laboratories in each of the years from 1980 to 1985, and as to where they were obtained.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available, as data on individual breeds of dogs and the sources from which animals are obtained are not collected in the current returns on statistics of experiments performed on living animals. Information on the number of experiments started on all breeds of dogs in the years 1980 to 1984 is given in table 14 of "Statistics of Experiments on Living Animals, Great Britain, 1984" (Cmnd 9574); the corresponding figure for 1985 will not be available until the summer.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many animal experiments have been conducted since 1980 in connection with forensic studies; and what species of animals were used for this purpose.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the number of experiments performed and species of animal used for this purpose under licences granted by the Secretary of State is not available. Section 12 of the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 empowers a High Court judge to grant a licence or give a certificate authorising experiments on living animals where this is essential for the purposes of justice in a criminal case. We believe that this power is rarely exercised.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which drugs intended for the treatment of cancer require the LD50 test.

Mr. Mellor: I take it that the question refers to the testing of new drugs. The testing requirements for these will depend on the precise nature of the drug concerned and are determined, in the light of this, by the appropriate regulatory authorities.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which regulations currently demand either a precise or approximate LD50 determination in laboratory animals.

Mr. Mellor: The specific information requested is not collected centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Acute toxicity studies, including LD50 values to varying degrees of precision, are required by regulatory authorities in the United Kingdom, the European Community and in other countries as part of the safety testing of a wide range of products, including vaccines, industrial, agricultural and household chemicals, pesticides and some medicines, as well as other products in daily use.

Special Branch

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to amend the Home Office guidelines on the work of the special branch, published on 19 December 1984, so as to prohibit the offer by any police officer of any money to a student in higher or further education in exchange for information in relation to any special branch responsibilities.

Mr. Hurd: No.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 21 November 1985 Official Report, column 272, whether he is now in a position to give the information requested in relation to any of the squads and units referred to; if he expects consultation to be completed and decisions made before the districts are abolished; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 10]: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the squads and units mentioned are still the subject of consultation and no decisions have yet been taken as to their future roles and organisation. I understand that consultations are likely to have been completed and decisions reached on the special patrol group, the district support units and district crime squads before the abolition of districts. However, the future of district juvenile bureaux (youth and community sections) may not have been decided by that time, and in this event the bureaux will continue to operate as at present (but reporting to area headquarters rather than districts) until their future is determined.

Robbery squads and intelligence and surveillance units operate on an area basis, so decisions on their future will not be affected by the timetable for the abolition of districts.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the practice of the community relations branch of the Metropolitan police to maintain lists of the party political affiliations of London borough councillors.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 13 January, c. 459]: The Commissioner informs me that it is not his practice to maintain such lists. Information of this nature was sought on one occasion recently in connection with the commissioner's duty under section 106 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to establish community-police consultative arrangements throughout the Metropolitan police district. I understand that a number of local political parties had represented that his policy of opposing the affiliation of political parties as such to community-police consultative groups was effectively excluding them from the consultative process in areas where, as minority parties, they were not represented among council nominees to the local consultative group. Information about the political affiliation of councillors was requested from borough councils, as a one-off exercise to help in considering these representations. This information is, of course, publicly available. I understand that most councils have already provided it and that none has objected to the request.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Co-operative College Lusaka

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the recent intensive training course held at the Co-operative college, Lusaka, and the assistance contributed by the Plunkett foundation.

Mr. Eggar: The course, which took place in November, was concerned with the marketing and distribution of agricultural produce. The students were nominated by the co-operative unions in Zambia, and the instructors included four tutors from the Plunkett Foundation; the cost of their services was met from the British aid programme. I am grateful to the foundation for its contribution to the success of the course.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Select Committees

Mr. Greenway asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will detail visits, home and overseas, made by each Select Committee since 1979, indicating the number of members involved, the place and purpose of the visit and the cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I shall reply as soon as possible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Revenue Statistics

Mr. Alexander asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage and amount of national income derived from taxation for each year since 1979, in total and broken down between taxes on income and expenditure, national insurance and rates.

Mr. Moore: The figures are as follows:

	*Total taxes and national insurance etc contributions		Taxes on personal incomes		Taxes on other incomes		Taxes on expenditure other than rates		National insurance etc contributions		local authority rates

European Community

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the European Economic Community Council has received a report from the European Economic Community Court of Auditors about the recent intergovernmental agreement to provide additional finance to the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Yes. The Court of Auditors referred to the 1984 intergovernmental agreement in paragraphs 1.10 to 1.13 of its annual report on the Communities' accounts published in the Official Journal on 16 December 1985 (OJ c326). The report is under discussion in the Council's Budget Committee. Copies are available in the Library of the House. An explanatory memorandum on the report was submitted on 17 January 1986.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the £117,917,000 being paid to the European Economic Community under article 10(2) of Council regulation 2891/77 represents an actual increase in European Economic Community contributions by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 410]: No. The sum of £117·917 million is that part of the advance payment of £134 million of non-VAT own resources announced on 21 November 1985 at columns 248-249 which could not be financed from the provision remaining in class II, vote 9. It was financed initially from the Contingencies Fund and the Government are now seeking supplementary provision to repay the fund. Advance payment of the £134 million in November, rather than in December, represented a change in timing but not in the level of our contributions.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's policy on the latest developments in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: We remain deeply concerned about the internal situation in South Africa. We shall continue to use our influence and contacts, including our contacts with the South African Government, to press for fundamental reforms and emphasise the need for the widest possible dialogue about the political future of South Africa.

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the South African Government on behalf of the seven prisoners in South Africa currently sentenced to death and awaiting execution, in particular, Clarence Payi and Theresa Ramashula; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We consider such representations on compelling humanitarian or human rights grounds. There are no such grounds in the case of Clarence Payi. Her Majesty's Embassy in South Africa is investigating the case of Theresa Ramashula and others convicted with her.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 20 January to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing), Official Report, columns 34-5, what were the reasons why he considers that public statements by foreign Governments on matters which are both internal to the United Kingdom and the concern of the private sector are not helpful; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: As we have made clear on a number of occasions, this is a matter to be decided by the board and shareholders of Westland plc.

British Council

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his plans to develop the work of the British Council following Britain's withdrawal from UNESCO.

Mr. Eggar: There are no plans to develop the work of the British Council as such, as a result of Britain's withdrawal from UNESCO, but as my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development indicated in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Lindsey, East (Sir P. Tapsell) on 23 January, the volume of work done by the British Council on behalf of the ODA in support of education, will increase.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government have taken in respect of human rights violations in El Salvador; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have repeatedly made clear to the Salvadorean Government our concern over human rights violations. Most recently my right hon. and learned Friend raised the matter with the Salvadorean Foreign Minister in November 1985. But, we and many other countries recognise the improvements that have taken place under President Duarte. We are also concerned about increasing human rights violations committed by the guerrilla forces active in El Salvador.

Uganda

Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received about the latest developments in Uganda.

Mrs. Chalker: We have received regular reports from our high commissioner in Kampala about the situation in Uganda during the recent outbreak of fighting. He has informed us that the National Resistance Army led by Mr. Yoweri Museveni has effective control of the capital and of the southern half of the country including all major routes into Uganda. Life in those areas is returning to normal and it is hoped that the airport at Entebbe will soon be open to scheduled airline flights. It is already open to charter flights. The high commission has no reports of any British citizens being harmed in the fighting and only a small number have indicated any wish to leave.

We are in contact with Mr. Museveni and the National Resistance Army in Kampala.

We hope that Uganda will at last achieve a stable administration which puts into practice full respect for human rights and brings about a reconciliation of the factions which have been at war. Britain is ready to support such a process with aid and training for the rehabilitation of this country, which has suffered so much.

WALES

A5 (Bypasses)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to make a statement of his intentions following receipt of the final report of consulting engineers into the need for and feasibility of providing bypasses for communities on the A5 on Anglesey.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The report was received last month and is now being studied. I hope to be able to indicate my views on the need for improvements in the late spring.

Drinking Water (Lead Pollution)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Wales if there are any areas within the Welsh water authority's remit where levels of lead in drinking water exceed limits stipulated in European Community directive (80/778/EEC) relating to the quality of water intended for human consumption.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Yes, there are areas within the Welsh water authority's remit where the maximum acceptable concentration for lead can from time to time exceed the limit stipulated in the European Community directive (80/778/EEC).

The Welsh water authority's lead in water indentification survey has given rise to a programme of modifications and additions to existing treatment processes to reduce plumbo-solvency. This programme will enable the Welsh water authority to meet the Government's target date of December 1989 for reducing lead concentrations in drinking water to acceptable levels. This is in line with the Government's application to the European Commission for an article 20 delay in respect of the lead parameter.

Tourism

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the future of the Wales tourist board in the light of the recommendations of the first report from the Trade and Industry Committee into tourism in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: In accordance with normal practice the Government will be considering the recommendations of the Trade and Industry Committee and will respond in due course. Full account will be taken of the importance of the industry to the Welsh economy.

DEFENCE

Greenham Common

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he remains satisfied with security at Greenham common.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 27 January, c. 356]: Security at Greenham common remains under close and continual review.

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications for security at Greenham common of the lessons learnt from exercise Brave Defender.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 27 January, c. 356]: Exercise Brave Defender successfully tested plans and procedures for the ground defence of vital installations in this country against attack by enemy special forces during a period of tension or war. A first impressions report was placed in the House of Commons Library on 22 October 1985 and detailed analysis is continuing. My hon. Friend will understand that I cannot refer to the details of the security plans for specific RAF stations.

Royal Air force (Aircrew)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 46 navigators and 89 pilots who have expressed a desire to leave the Royal Air Force on premature voluntary retirement, are currently serving with Royal Air Force Germany.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1985, c. 100-101]: Four navigators and two pilots.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Voluntary Export Restraint Agreements

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has carried out any studies of the effect and cost of voluntary export restraint agreements.

Mr. Howard: My Department keeps all restraints which have an effect on trade under careful scrutiny.

Trade Marks

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he plans to allow the Patent Office Trade Marks Registry to accept applications for registration of service trade marks under the Trade Marks (Amendment) Act 1984.

Mr. Pattie: It is the Government's intention to implement the Trade Marks (Amendment) Act 1984 one year early, namely on 1 October 1986, but this is contingent on the passage of the Patents, Designs and Marks Bill. Under the commencement provisions of that Bill, an application for registration of a service mark which is received before the date on which the 1984 Act comes into force will, while having no legal status before that date, become a valid application on that date. It is not possible to give a precise indication at this stage of how long before that date the Trade Marks Registry will be able to accept such applications, but it should be several weeks and will I hope be at least two months.

Amateur Radio

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he intends to make available for publication details of amateur radio licensees' call signs and addresses.

Mr. Butcher: All applicants for amateur radio licences are asked whether they are prepared for their call signs and addresses to be published. For many years, details of those who have agreed have been published by the Radio Society of Great Britain. Recently, I have received a number of requests for this information to be made more widely available. With effect from 1 January 1987, I intend to make it available to any person or organisation on payment of a fee which covers the cost of producing the necessary computer tapes and makes a small contribution to the costs involved in amateur radio licensing.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any applications have been received for licences for the export of any defence equipment to El Salvador.

Mr. Howard: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to make public information of this kind.

CR6 Taxi

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to whether, following the takeover of the Carbodies company, it is the new company's intention to continue with the development and production of the CR6 taxi cab: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: Manganese Bronze plc., which acquired Carbodies Ltd. in 1973, set up London Taxis International in April 1984 to co-ordinate its various taxi interests. With regard to the CR6 taxi, my Department has been monitoring progress on the project and is currently discussing its future with LTI.

Cosmetics

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to ban cosmetics that require experimentation on animals.

Mr. Howard: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

EC (Trade Statistics)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what have been the average annual percentage changes in United Kingdom exports to and imports from the European Economic Community for total visible trade and for manufactured goods, respectively, since 1972.

Mr. Butcher: The average annual increases in the value of United Kingdom trade with the European Community, excluding Spain and Portugal, between 1972 and 1985 are as follows:

Exports: 21·5 per cent. (total) and 18·4 per cent. (manufactures).
Imports: 20·2 per cent. (total) and 21·3 per cent. (manufactures).

Weights and Measures (Examiners)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many examiners are in post at the national weights and measures laboratory; what are their grades; what is the average annual salary in each grade; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the total salary bill of the laboratory in each year since 1979, together with his best estimate for the years 1985 to 1986-87.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 383]: There are 10 examiners currently in post at the national weights and measures laboratory of which six are in the senior professional and technology officer grade and four are in the higher professional and technology officer grade. The average annual salary for these grades is £15,610 and £13,570 respectively.

Because of organisational changes, it is not possible to give strictly comparable figures for the laboratory's salary bill over the requested period. Approximate figures are as follows:

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what are the operational costs of keeping butter stored in intervention in Norfolk per year compared with the market value of the butter stored;

(2) what are the operational costs of keeping butter stored in intervention in Lincolnshire per year compared with the market value of the butter stored;

(3) what are the operational costs of keeping butter stored in intervention in north Yorkshire per year compared with the market value of the butter stored;

(4) what are the operational costs of keeping butter stored in intervention in Humberside per year compared with the market value of the butter stored;

(5) what are the operational costs of keeping grain stored in intervention in Norfolk per year compared with the market value of the grain stored;

(8) what are the operational costs of keeping grain stored in intervention in Humberside per year compared with the market value of the grain stored.

Mr. Gummer: Storage costs are not recorded separately for different areas. The average annual costs of storage and handling are about £13 per tonne for cereals and £77 per tonne for butter. The current average market prices are £112 per tonne for feedwheat and barley and £1,845 per tonne for butter.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the level of butter stored in intervention, and where it was stored, within Humberside in January as compared with the same date in 1979, 1984 and 1985;

(2) what was the level of grain stored in intervention, and where it was stored, in Humberside in January compared with the same date in 1979, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Gummer: The following stocks of intervention butter and grain were stored in Humberside as at 1 January 1984, 1985 and 1986. Records of storage locations in 1979 are no longer available.

Food Prices

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the rate of increase of food prices in the United Kingdom since May 1979 and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: Between May 1979 and December 1985, the food component of the retail price index rose at an average annual rate of 6·5 per cent. In contrast, during the period February 1974 to May 1979 when the previous Administration held office, retail food prices rose at an average rate of 16·4 per cent. per annum.

EC (Social Butter Scheme)

Mr. Oakes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer on 9 December 1985, Official Report, columns 485-486, to the right hon. Member for Halton, if his Department has held any further discussions with the dairy trade about extending the existing Community social butter scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My Department is in continuing contact with the dairy trade and other interested parties about the suggestion that the United Kingdom should seek an extension to the existing Community "social butter" scheme. Work on assessing the various implications of this is nearing completion and I hope soon to be able to consider the results.

Lime Subsidy

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider the re-introduction of the lime subsidy in respect of land where liming may be expected to improve soil condition or fertility.

Mrs. Fenner: Under the capital grant schemes assistance is available for liming as a capital improvement in the less favoured areas or for part of an approved programme of grassland reseeding and regeneration, excepting on heathland and moorland.

The use of lime for routine maintenance is regarded as a cost-effective operation of normal good husbandry and I have no plans to introduce a general subsidy. Such a measure would be contrary to the European Community rules on state aids.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Further and Higher Education (Statistics)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the age distribution of students in (a) further and (b) higher education according to the following ranges: 18 to 21 years, 22 to 25 years, 26 to 35 years, 35 to 45 years and 45 plus years.

Mr. Walden: The table shows the readily available information on student numbers in the 1984-85 academic year by age. Evening only figures in further education have not been shown because of difficulties over multiple enrolments.

Further and Higher Education (Finance)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what amendments he proposes to make to his plans for financing further and higher education during the next five years.

Mr. Walden: The Government's plans for public expenditure on further and higher education for the financial years 1986-87 to 1988-89 were published earlier this month in the Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702). My right hon. Friend has no plans to amend them, but they will be subject to review in the normal way as part of the yearly review of public expenditure.

Maintained Schools (Waltham Forest)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the numbers of pupils in maintained schools in the London borough of Waltham Forest (a) who went on to further and higher education in 1981-82 and 1983-84 and (b) who gained A levels, O levels and CSE, respectively.

Mr. Dunn: Information is given in the table:

Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next intends to meet the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend expects to meet representatives of the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals in the next few weeks to discuss a number of matters of common concern.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the latest pupil-to-teacher ratios for England and for each local education authority, including and excluding head teachers, in (a) nursery schools, (b) primary schools, (c) secondary schools, (d) special schools and (e) sixth form colleges.

Mr. Dunn [pursuant to his reply, 17 January 1986, c. 713]: The information is shown in the table. It relates to January 1985. The pupil-teacher ratios including head teachers and, exceptionally, excluding head teachers, in maintained nursery, primary, and secondary schools, including sixth form colleges, special schools and sixth form colleges in each local education authority are as follows:

NORTHERN IRELAND

Smear Tests

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will consider granting additional funding to Northern Ireland health authorities to meet the increased demand for smear tests.

Mr. Needham: I can assure the hon. Member that I shall take account of the pressures on cervical screening services in considering the financial allocations to health and social services boards for 1986-87.

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to clear the backlog of smear tests at the Eastern health board; and what steps will be taken to prevent a similar backlog from developing.

Mr. Needham: At the beginning of January the board introduced an eight-week moratorium on the taking of routine screening smears. It now intends to recruit additional staff to assist with the processing of cervical smears. In the longer term the decentralisation of laboratory services from the eastern area will reduce the work load on the laboratories concerned.

Housing Standards

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the housing in Northern Ireland falls below statutory fitness levels.

Mr. Needham: The Northern Ireland house condition survey 1984, published by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, states that 10·4 per cent. of the total dwelling stock was recorded as statutorily unfit in 1984. Copies of the survey are being made available in the Library.

Housing Finance

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will explain the £44 million reduction in Northern Ireland housing finance.

Mr. Needham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Wantage (Mr. Jackson) on 19 December 1985, at columns 267-68, which indicated that the public expenditure allocation for housing in Northern Ireland in 1986-87 will be £355 million. This compares with £357 million in the current financial year. I understand that the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has estimated that, in order to maintain its expenditure at current levels in real terms, the resources available to it in 1986-87 from all sources would have needed to be some £44 million higher to take account of falling capital receipts and increasing loan repayments. It is not possible to increase the public expenditure allocation given other pressures on the Northern Ireland block.

Housing (Construction Jobs)

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how many construction jobs will be lost due to the £44 million cutback in housing funding.

Mr. Needham: Until the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the other housing agencies have determined the distribution of resources available to them in 1986-87 over their capital and revenue programmes, it will not be possible to estimate the number of jobs in the construction industry being supported by the housing programme.

Lignite Mining (Lough Neagh)

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the environmental impact of opencast lignite mining on the Tyrone shores of Lough Neagh.

Dr. Boyson: There are at present no proposals to mine lignite in County Tyrone. Whilst it is believed that a substantial deposit exits in the area, the drilling programme already undertaken is too limited to establish the economics of mining or to permit the development of a mine plan which would reveal the extent of any environmental impact on the area. to enable these issues to be addressed the Department of Economic Development has given notice of its intention to award a prospecting licence which would allow the deposit to be fully investigated.

Short Brothers

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of workers employed at Short Brothers for each month in 1984 and 1985.

Dr. Boyson: The information is as follows:

	1984	1985
January	6,047	6,549
February	6,053	6,581
March	6,080	6,683
April	6,085	6,724
May	6,179	6,888
June	6,264	6,935
July	6,292	6,948
August	6,328	6,980
September	6,410	7,033
October	6,482	7,131
November	6,506	7,177
December	6,524	7,186

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Government have given any undertaking to Short Bros. of Belfast in respect of any losses arising from cancellation of the agreement between Shorts and Sikorsky in respect of co-operative helicopter production.

Dr. Boyson: No.

Belfast (Road Scheme)

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the cost of the new road scheme in Belfast, the number of new jobs created by the project and the estimated date of completion.

Mr. Needham: It is assumed that the hon. Member is referring to the Dublin road-Great Victoria street link, a central Belfast road scheme for which tenders were invited in mid-January. The cost estimate of the scheme, inclusive of land acquisition costs, is around £700,000 providing about 10 man-years of employment. The estimated date of completion is February 1987.

SCOTLAND

Rating System

10. Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is satisfied with the present system of rating in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: No. The Government's dissatisfaction with the present rating system in Scotland is made clear in our Green Paper, published yesterday.

16. Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to introduce measures to reform the rating system in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: I cannot forecast what will be the results of the consultation period which began yesterday, nor can I anticipate the Queen's speech next Session, but our Green Paper says that we are at present planning to find room for a Bill in 1986-87.

37. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what further progress has been made on proposals for reform of the rating system.

Mr. Ancram: I invite the hon. Gentleman to read our Green Paper "Paying for Local Government", published yesterday.

Coal Industry

11. Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet the Scottish area of the National Union of Mineworkers to discuss employment in the Scottish area of the coal industry.

Mr. Allan Stewart: No.

Employment

12. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many young people under the age of 25 years are currently unemployed in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: At 10 October 1985, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants in Scotland under the age of 25 years was 140,021.

Steel Industry

13. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next meet the General Secretary of the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the steel industry in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: I met representatives of the Scottish Trades Union Congress on 23 January, when we discussed their views on the steel industry in Scotland.

23. Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will pay an official visit to the Ravenscraig steel complex to discuss with workers and management the social and employment aspects of steel making in west central Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans for such a visit at present.

Nature Conservation

14. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy on the Nature Conservancy Council's report, "Afforestation and Nature Conservation".

Mr. John MacKay: The Nature Conservancy Council has produced a draft report on afforestation and nature conservation and has sought and received comments on it from interested Government Departments and other bodies. It has not yet published a final report, and I am not therefore in a position to make a statement.

Fuel and Transport Costs

15. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland to what extent, in formulating regional aid and development policies for Scotland, he takes account of regional variations in fuel and transport costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The statutory requirements for the designation of the assisted areas are in section 1(3) of the Industrial Development Act 1982. In establishing the current structure of assisted areas in 1984 those requirements were followed.

Policy Initiatives

17. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what new policy initiatives he has introduced since his appointment as Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: Where I conclude on due assessment of the issues that new initiatives are required, they will be announced.

Detoxification Centres

18. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is Government policy on the construction of detoxification centres in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The provision of facilities and services for people with alcohol-related problems is a matter for local authorities and health boards.

Voluntary organisations wishing to provide facilities of this nature may be eligible for grant under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968.

Teachers (Dispute)

19. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the teaching unions in Scotland to discuss their campaign for an independent pay review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: At his invitation my right hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger) and I met representatives of the teachers' unions on 27 September 1985.

21. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what further representations he has received on the teachers' dispute.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend and I continue to receive many representations about the teachers' dispute.

22. Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what fresh initiatives he intends to take in the teachers' dispute.

38. Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he plans to introduce any new initiative to settle the teachers' dispute.

Mr. Rifkind: I am carefully considering all options, but I believe the immediate need is for the teachers and their employers to get into negotiation on a realistic basis.

26. Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any new proposals to protect Scottish schoolchildren from the consequences of the current industrial action by members of the Educational Institute of Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The interests of schoolchildren can best be served by a speedy settlement of the dispute. The management of the education service is the responsibility of the education authorities and it is their paramount duty to do all they can to maintain efficient schooling pending such a settlement.

34. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy relating to a solution of the current dispute in Scottish education.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I refer to the answer given earlier today by my right hon. and learned Friend to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell).

Rate Support Grant

20. Sir Hector Monro asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Confederation of Scottish Local Authorities on the rate support grant for 1985-86; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: None. My predecessor the right hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger) had regular meetings with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on rate support grant including grant for 1985-86.

SSHA (Rents)

24. Mr. Lambie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will hold an inquiry into the affairs of the Scottish Special Housing Association, in view of its recent decision to increase rents by 11 to 28 per cent.

Mr. Rifkind: I understand that the range of percentage increases in rents is in fact 9 to 13 per cent. and the average 11·2 per cent. I can see no grounds for an inquiry on the lines suggested by the hon. Member.

Economy

25. Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress and the Confederation of British industry to discuss the Scottish economy.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to have an informal meeting with both the Confederation of British Industry and the Scottish Trades Union Congress in the near future. He is also to meet representatives of the Confederation of British Industry on 10 February and expects to meet representatives of the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the Scottish economy on a date to be arranged.

Agriculture (Review)

27. Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to meet leaders of the Scottish National Farmers' Union to discuss the 1986 annual review of agriculture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I am aware of the union's concern about the results of the 1986 annual review of agriculture and its desire to discuss this matter with me. I am making arrangements to have my first meeting with it and other agricultural interests very soon.

Falkirk

28. Mr. Ewing asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to make an official visit to Falkirk; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no plans in the immediate future to visit Falkirk.

Skoal Bandits

29. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assurances have been given to him concerning the sale of the tobacco product Skoal Bandits to young persons under the age of 16 years.

Mr. John MacKay: The manufacturers of this product have entered into a voluntary agreement with the Government by which they have undertaken that the marketing of Skoal Bandits will be specifically directed to adult tobacco users and that it will not be promoted to young people. The voluntary agreement further provides that retail outlets will be restricted to those where tobacco products are normally sold, and that it will not be offered to retailers who do not normally sell tobacco.

Islands (Agricultural Development)

30. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the European Commission's proposals for an agricultural development programme for the Scottish islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend and my noble Friend the Minister of State have received a number of representations, including those from the hon. Gentleman, encouraging the Government to look favourably on the European Commission's recently-published proposals for the Scottish islands, excluding the Western Isles.

Our evaluation of the proposals which the Commission has tabled, and to which I referred in my written reply to the hon. Gentleman of 13 January, at column 482, is still proceeding.

Forestry

31. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the latest figures for the Forestry Commission's stocks of broadleaf woodlands.

Mr. John MacKay: At 31 March 1985 the Forestry Commission managed some 60,000 hectares of broad-leaved woodland.

33. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will review his forestry policy in Caithness and Sutherland.

Mr. John MacKay: All applications for forestry grant in Caithness and Sutherland are subject to the Forestry Commission's consultation procedures, and the arrangements for consulting the Nature Conservancy Council over proposals falling within sites of conservation importance in that area have recently been reviewed and extended. My right hon. and learned Friend does not, therefore, see any need to consider a change in forestry policy.

Garden Festival (Glasgow)

32. Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of Scottish Development Agency moneys being transferred from the Glasgow eastern area renewal and wider East End areas of Glasgow to the garden festival project; and if he will list the individual projects and costs involved.

Mr. Allan Stewart: There has been no direct transfer of funds to the Glasgow garden festival project from funds previously allocated to the east end of Glasgow. In the light of many competing demands for its funds, the agency has reassessed the priorities attaching to particular projects. I am advised that the following projects in the east end of Glasgow are now unlikely to be carried out in 1985-86 or 1986-87: Parkhead rail line (cost £800,000); Barrowfield improvement (£90,000); Green View school stonecleaning (£60,000).

Cooling Towers (Cleaning)

35. Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland why the advice and guidance on cleaning cooling towers issued by his Department to health boards has not also been issued to Scottish local authorities.

Mr. John MacKay: This guidance was in fact conveyed to local authority directors of environmental health as well as health boards, and I regret that the reply of 25 November 1985, at column 435, did not make this clear.

Epilepsy

36. Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to implement the recommendations of the Hutchinson report in relation to the treatment and care of epilepsy in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The report entitled "the Medical Care of Epilepsy in Scotland" (known as the Hutchinson report) was published in 1968 and was generally well received by the then regional hospital boards. There are no plans to give further consideration to the report.

Death Statistics

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures to show the number of deaths in Scotland with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate in (a) 1984 and (b) 1985; and if he will break the figures down by age group and month of the year.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Deaths with any mention of hypothermia, by age group and month, Scotland

SOCIAL SERVICES

Statutory Sick Pay Scheme

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the overall financial effects on employees of the operation over a complete financial year of the statutory sick pay scheme.

Mr. Major: In 1983-84, the first year of the scheme, £431 million was paid in statutory sick pay. It is estimated that this would have attracted some £130 million in tax and national insurance contributions from employees. Information is not available that would enable precise estimates to be made of the amounts of sickness benefit that would otherwise have been payable to SSP recipients in 1983-84; but on the basis of the financial estimates made when SSP was introduced, it is estimated that about £280 million in sickness benefit would have been payable to them in that year.

Ophthalmic Surgery

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current average waiting time for ophthalmic surgery in (a) the Bolton area and (b) in the regional health authority areas in the United Kingdom, listed by area.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend all the information he seeks. Some of it is not available centrally and statistics for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The estimated median interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to departments of ophthalmology in National Health Service hospitals in England is given in the table for the latest year for which information is available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the chairman of Bolton district health authority who may be able to provide information in respect of Bolton.

Specialist Claims Control

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has completed the consideration of the study of specialist claims control undertaken by his Department; what conclusions the study reached on the position of those whose benefits are stopped following an investigation and subsequently restored; if he will publish the study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Malone) on 12 June 1985 at columns 482-483, and to the statement and copy report placed in the Library on that date.

Audiological Rehabilitation Services (North-East Thames)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has on the plans of the North-East Thames regional health authority for the future development of audiological rehabilitation services within its area following the pending departure of the current consultant physician from the royal national throat, nose and ear hospital.

Mr. Whitney: The planning of audiological services within North-East Thames regional health authority is a matter for that authority and the relevant district health authorities. We have no information on how planning might or might not be affected by the departure of an individual consultant. The general position for the Royal national throat nose and ear hospital remains that Bloomsbury health authority, as part of its strategic planning of services, is considering the future role of the hospital in conjunction with the regional health authority in relation to the services the hospital provides Bloomsbury and the services it provides to a wider area, and its role as a postgraduate hospital. If there are any proposals for major change, they will be the subject of formal consultation in the usual way.

Hearing Aids

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in the Wolverhampton area have been waiting to obtain a hearing aid for (a) six months, (b) one year, (c) two years and (d) two and a half years or more.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information she seeks. It is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairman of Wolverhampton health authority direct.

Mr. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many people in Great Britain wear hearing aids and as to how many of these are supplied on the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: It is estimated that over 1¼ million hearing aids are in use, and that 80 per cent. of these are supplied by the National Health Service.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether under 16-year-old mothers will be entitled to help with maternity expenses under the proposed social fund.

Mr. Newton: Under our proposals in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security", maternity payments from the social fund would be awarded to those in receipt of income support or family credit. Where a mother under the age of 16 was in a family receiving one of those benefits, the family would be eligible for a maternity payment.

Drug Misusers (AIDS)

Mr. Rathbone asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has of the proportion of drug misusers in each county or health authority who are also acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Rathbone asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has of the number of acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers who are also drug misusers.

Mr. Hayhoe: Up to the end of December 1985, two cases of full clinical AIDS had been reported in the United Kingdom where injecting drug misuse was the main risk factor.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many two-earner couples currently receive family income supplement; and how many two-earner couples he estimates will receive family credit.

Mr. Newton: There are 10,000 couples receiving family income supplement where both have earnings; this includes cases where one of the couple has some earnings but is working less than the qualifying number of hours for family income supplement. In family credit, on the basis of the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691), we estimate that the number would be in the range of 20,000 to 30,000.

Sponsored Immigrants

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many complaints he has made to magistrates' courts under section 18 of the Supplementary Benefits Act 1976 against people liable to maintain sponsored immigrants in each of the last 10 years; how much money has been recovered as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Departmental statistics do not show the types of cases in which complaints under section 18 of the Act are made but, as far as I am aware, no action has so far been taken in a case involving a sponsored immigrant. Proceedings would be brought only where it appeared that the sponsor was financially able to meet his responsibilities in whole or in part but satisfactory arrangements for him to do so could not be reached out of court. The statutory provision (which has existed only since the passing of the Social Security Act 1980) provides the necessary support for agreement to be reached with the sponsor out of court.

Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel

Mr. Cyril Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy for the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel to be represented on wages and conditions of service negotiating committees; what information he has as to the proportion of ambulance personnel who are now members of that union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney By long-standing convention, membership of the staff sides of the NHS Whitley Councils is a matter for determination by the staff sides themselves. Staff ought to be able to be represented by organisations of their own choice. The association claims that its audited membership in England and Wales at 31 March 1985 was 3,642—about 18 per cent. of ambulance personnel at 30 September 1984.

Social Security Fraud

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the electoral register is currently used in conjunction with the investigation of fraud by Department of Health and Social Security claimants; and whether there are any plans to use it in that respect when it is available in machine-readable form.

Mr. Major: Electoral registers are freely available to the general public and are on occasion referred to by the Department's fraud investigators in the course of their inquiries. There are no plans to introduce information from the electoral register into any of the computer systems currently in use or being developed by the Department.

Mental Health Act 1983

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to amend sections 2 and 3 of the Mental Health Act 1983.

Mr. Whitney: I have no such plans.

Food Irradiation (Report)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the advisory committee's report on food irradiation has yet been presented; and if he will announce the date on which the report will be published.

Mr. Whitney: We have received the advisory committee's report and publication is planned for the spring.

Mrs. Barbara Bentley

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the hon. Member for Warwick and Leamington may expect a reply to his letter of 10 April in connection with Mrs. Barbara Bentley of Leamington Spa.

Mr. Major: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 27 January.

Benefits

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress of the discussions currently in progress between officials of his Department and interest groups relating to arrangements for the provision of localised information regarding the availability of advice and information about social security benefits.

Mr. Major: As I said in my reply to the hon. and learned Member of 20 January at column 64, officials are currently discussing with interested groups whether it would be possible to provide social security claimants with more detailed information about local advice centres and agencies. I will let the hon. and learned Member have a further reply about the outcome of the discussions.

Residential Homes

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he intends to review the permitted scale of charges made to residents by (a) nursing homes and (b) residential homes and which are met by public funds to allow for regional differences in costs of living and also for inflationary pressures.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) on 28 January at column 782.

Medical Accidents

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will recommend to health authorities that they make available a patient's hospital records to either the patient or a third party, if more appropriate, whenever there is a medical accident;

(2) if he will take steps to make available to the victims of medical accidents all the relevant information they request.

Mr. Whitney: Current guidance from the Department asks health authorities to be as helpful as possible when they are asked to release information voluntarily except where there is a good reason for withholding records either bearing on the defence of a claim or when the request is made without substantial justification. It is usual practice for case notes to be made available to the applicant's medical adviser, to ensure that they are correctly interpreted for the applicant's benefit.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has of the number of medical accidents that occur annually according to (a) their severity and (b) the specialty of the consultant in charge of their case.

Mr. Whitney: Information on which to base such an estimate is not collected centrally.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has had, or intends to have, any discussions with the British Medical Association about establishing a no fault liability scheme for the victims of medical accidents.

Mr. Whitney: No such discussions have been held or are in prospect.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he takes to monitor the number of medical accidents in the National Health Service, and the procedure used by complainants.

Mr. Whitney: The monitoring of medical accidents and complaints procedures are, in the first place, matters for health authorities whose aim must be to prevent recurrences. Health authorities are required to report to the Department any accidents due to defects in medicinal products, buildings and plant, equipment and medical and non-medical supplies to enable departmental advice on the problems revealed to be widely promulgated. Summaries of the reports of the Health Service Commissioner are also circulated to health authorities to ensure as far as possible that mistakes are not repeated.

The Department collects information on the number of written complaints received each year about the hospital and community health services and more detailed information about the clinical complaints procedure.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services approximately how many cases referred to the ombudsman in each of the last three years which had to be rejected by him because of clinical judgment are cases of medical accidents.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration he has given to the suggestion by the deputy Parliamentary Commissioner that there should be an independent body assessing cases alleged to be medical accidents with powers to pay compensation on a no fault basis.

Mr. Whitney: This suggestion has not so far been referred to us for consideration.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many cases of medical accidents in each of the last three years, regional medical officers have refused to take the cases to stage 3 of the procedure when requested to do so.

Mr. Whitney: Information on the number of cases rejected for stage 3 of the clinical complaints procedure or withdrawn by the complainant was given in my reply to the right hon. Gentleman on 18 December 1985 at column 233. Cases involving medical accidents cannot be separately identified.

Doctors (Unprofessional Conduct)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in each of the last three years, how many general practitioners have been reprimanded or penalised by family practitioner committees for unprofessional conduct; and what proportion this is of all general practitioners.

Mr. Hayhoe: Investigations by family practitioner committees may lead to general practitioners being found in breach of their terms of service and warned. The numbers in England and the proportion to all general practitioners in England are as follows:

	1983	1984	1985
Number	170	178	291
Proportion	1 in 137	1 in 133	1 in 83

The 1985 figure is higher than it would have been because administrative difficulties led to some cases being concluded in 1985 which otherwise would have been concluded in 1984. Family practitioner committees are not concerned specifically with unprofessional conduct.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in each of the last three years, how many doctors have been reprimanded or penalised by the regional health authorities employing them because of unprofessional behaviour; and what proportion these figures represent of all doctors with contracts held by regional health authorities.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information requested is not collected centrally.

Doctors (Incompetence)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in each of the last three years, how many cases of professional incompetence were investigated by the General Medical Council; in how many cases doctors were found guilty; what was the nature of the incompetence; and what was the sanction applied.

Mr. Hayhoe: It is not for Government to account for the General Medical Council's independent exercise of its functions under the Medical Act 1983 but I have passed the right hon. Member's question to the council.

Pearson Report

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many of the Pearson report's recommendations, which were relevant to his Department, have been implemented; and if he will list them in the Official Report.

Mr. Whitney: Many of the 30 recommendations relevant to the Department have been overtaken by, for example, the Government's proposals in the recent White Paper "Reform of Social Security," the 1981 White Paper on the reform of the industrial injuries scheme (Cmnd. 8402), and the current consultation exercise on the industrial injuries scheme. To give a detailed reply reflecting the current position in each of the recommendations concerned would involve disproportionate cost. However, if the right hon. Member has any specific recommendations in mind I shall be happy to provide the information he seeks.

Doctors (Complaints)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) in how many cases of complaints against hospital doctors in each of the last three years clinical judgment was involved;

(2) how many complaints against hospital doctors have been made in each of the last three years.

Mr. Whitney: The only available information about complaints against hospital doctors relates to complaints which are wholly or partially clinical, and is as follows:

Written complaints, wholly or partly clinical, relating to National Health Service hospital services, England.

1982	1983	1984
7,005	8,191	*9,407

* Provisional.

Complaints Procedure

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions in each of the last three years the Health Service Commissioner has criticised the whole or parts of the complaints procedure; and in which cases.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress has been made since July 1985, following commissioners' decisions on claimants' rights of appeal and reference of decisions back to the medical boards in identifying claimants wrongly denied mobility allowance and making repayments to them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have now completed a special exercise which has identified a total of 40 cases where mobility allowance was incorrectly withdrawn on appeal against the length of the award. Arrears are outstanding in 28 of these cases and action is in hand to resolve these. Fourteen of these cases are currently receiving the allowance. As regards those cases where a reference back to the medical board was incorrectly made, identification of the cases from examination of hundreds of thousands of claim files is still proceeding.

NHS (Crown Notices)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to institute the operation of Crown notices for food hygiene in the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: As my right hon. Friend made clear in his statement on the Stanley Royd hospital inquiry report on 21 January at columns 190-202, this is one of the proposals in the report which is being given urgent consideration.

Limited List Prescribing

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give a breakdown by product type of the estimated savings which have ensued to the National Healh Service through the implementation of the limited list prescribing system.

Mr. Hayhoe: Actual savings in each of the therapeutic categories of drugs covered by the selected list scheme are unlikely to be available for some months.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many letters he has now received expressing criticisms of the limited list prescribing system; and how many of this total have been received since the implementation of the scheme.

Mr. Hayhoe: This information is not readily available in the form requested and could be retrieved only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has now received about the exclusion of mucolytic preparations from the list of drugs now available through the limited list prescribing system.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. King) on 28 January at columns 499-500.

Heating Additions

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what rates of heating additions are presently available; and if he will list the criteria for receiving them.

Mr. Newton: The detailed criteria for receiving heating additions are contained in regulations 11 to 12 and schedule 4 (part 1) to the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1983 (S.I. 1983, No. 1399). The rates of addition presently available are shown in the following table. Where a claimant is receiving the long-term rate, the available scale margin is offset against the value of additional requirements (including heating additions with the exception of that paid in respect of children under 5) when deciding the extra benefit paid.

Rates of heating addition (November 1985)

Heating Allowance

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the present level of notional fuel element within supplementary benefit; and within the fuel element, what sums are allowed for (a) heating, (b) lighting, (c) hot water and (d) cooking.

Mr. Newton: There is no specific element for fuel in the supplementary benefit scale rates. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 2 December at column 132.

Contraceptives

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he intends to agree to the request of the Northern Ireland Assembly that the new guidelines on the issuing of contraceptives to minors currently being revised by his Department will not apply to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hayhoe: These guidelines do not apply to Northern Ireland.

Sallah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether Mr. Sallah Abdessalem Ben Rabha is currently in receipt of any social security benefits.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 27 January at column 399.

Patients' Rights Leaflets (Translations)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration he has given to publishing in the major ethnic minority languages the patients' rights leaflets which must be provided to those patients compulsorily detained under the Mental Health Acts.

Mr. Whitney: Section 132 of the Mental Health Act 1983 requires managers of hospitals or mental nursing homes with detained patients to inform such patients orally and in writing of the reasons for their detention and their rights under the Act. To assist NHS authorities and others to discharge this responsibility when the Mental Health Act was introduced, the Department produced and distributed a set of 13 standard leaflets which could be used to meet the requirements of the Act. Authorities were reminded that the leaflets would need adaptation to meet particular circumstances and that translation or use of an interpreter might sometimes be required.

The Mental Health Act Commission has since proposed that the Department should make a general distribution of translated leaflets, initially in 12 languages other then English. We know of no firm evidence of any difficulties on a scale which would justify central action by the Department of the kind proposed. We have, however, invited the Mental Health Act Commission, whose members regularly visit these hospitals and mental nursing homes, to let us know if they are aware of evidence of such need on a scale which would justify central action.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the annual cost of printing and publishing those patients' rights leaflets which must be provided to patients compulsorily detained under the Mental Health Acts; and what would be the cost of providing translations in the major ethnic minority languages.

Mr. Whitney: There is no provision in the Mental Health Act specifically requiring the issue of leaflets to detained patients. We issued standard leaflets to National Health Service authorities and others when the Mental Health Act was introduced, to help them meet certain obligations in the Act to provide advice and information to detained patients.

The information requested about annual costs is not available. There are 13 standard leaflets, some of which are used more than others, and reprints are ordered from time to time as required. Four of the leaflets were reprinted during 1985 at a total cost of £1,716. It has been estimated that translation of six of the 13 standard leaflets into six of the 12 languages suggested by the Mental Health Act Commission would cost £1,570. Printing and distribution costs would be additional.

Patients (English Language)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he makes of the number and proportion of patients detained under the Mental Health Acts whose first language is not English and who lack full comprehension of English.

Mr. Whitney: No such estimates can be provided from information available centrally. We have, however, asked the Mental Health Act Commission whether it knows of any evidence which indicates that there are any significant difficulties of this kind.

Departmental Local Offices

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state for the inner and outer areas of Greater London, respectively, the approximate turnover of staff in grades of clerical assistant and clerical officer, respectively, in social security offices open to the public, together with maximum and minimum rates of turnover naming the offices concerned.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 17 January 1986, c. 740]: Following is the information for the year ending 31 December 1985.

Turnover is defined as those staff who leave the Department (including those who retire), change offices within the Department or are promoted within an office. The number of staff who leave the Department (including those who retire) is lower. Both sets of figures are set out in the table:

ENERGY

Low-income Households

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Energy why he has not complied with the request made in the eighth report of the Select Committee on Energy, Session 1984-85, HC 87, to place a Government review of measures to increase energy efficiency in low-income households in the Library.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend will cover this point in his reply to the Committee, which will be made as soon as possible.

Nuclear Safety (Member's Questions)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy why it took his Department 23 working days to respond to certain priority written questions on nuclear safety which had been tabled by the hon. Member for Yeovil; and if he will now ask the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board to provide a substantive response within 10 working days.

Mr. Goodlad: The information required was detailed and highly technical. The CEGB expect to write to the hon. Member this week.

Higher Education (Advisory Body)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the terms of reference given to the working group set up by the board of the Welsh advisory body on higher education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Wales Advisory Body was asked in March 1985 by the then Minister of State for Wales to give "consideration to the scope for rationalisation of initial teacher training in the public sector in terms of both larger minimum group sizes and of viable units which are likely to have a continuing future in the 1990s and which will secure high quality, cost effective provision."

The WAB established the working group to comply with this request and, with the agreement of the University Grants Committee, the group is taking account of initial teacher training provision in the university sector as well as in the public (ie, local authority and voluntary) sector.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members and, where appropriate, their academic institutions of the board of the Welsh advisory body on higher education at the time the board set up the working group.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The working group on rationalisation of initial teacher training was set up in accordance with the decision of the WAB committee at its meeting on 26 April 1985 that a rationalisation exercise be carried out. The board approved the membership of the working group at its meetings of 11 June 1985 and 26 September 1985. The membership of the board at that time was as follows:

Senior Management (Housing)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales who drew his attention to the possible disincentive to business people of the absence of a pool of houses in Wales attractive to and suitable for senior managers referred to in his draft circular, "Housing for Senior Management".

Mr. Mark Robinson: Organisations concerned with inward investment of business and industry.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what evidence he has of the absence of a pool of houses attractive to, and suitable for, senior managers in Wales, referred to in the draft Welsh Office circular, "Housing for Senior Management".

Mr. Mark Robinson: The evidence derives from statements to that effect by representatives of industry and house builders, supported by the views of the Land Authority for Wales and by professional advice in the Welsh Office. The consultations now in progress provide the opportunity for additional evidence to be given.

Circulars (Consultation)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is his practice on the time allowed for local authorities to respond to draft circulars issued for consultation.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Draft circulars are not normally issued to local authorities for consultation, but when they are sent to local authority associations for that purpose it is my policy to give the associations as much time to respond as circumstances permit.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

University Grants Committee

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the University Grants Committee; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend last met the University Grants Committee on 1 November 1984, when they discussed the committee's published advice "A Strategy for Higher Education into the 1990s". My right hon. Friend, my predecessor the Member for City of London and Westminster South and I have had several meetings with the chairman of the UGC since then.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report table 3.12 of the public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9702-II, with all figures converted to 1984-85 prices.

Sir Keith Joseph: The table revalues table 3.12 of Cmnd. 9702 to 1984-85 prices by application of the Treasury GDP deflator (which is assumed to increase by 4·5, 3·5 and 3 per cent. respectively in the years 1986-87 to 1988-89). The components may not always add exactly to the totals shown because the totals in table 3.12 in Cmnd. 9702 were derived from unrounded figures and the figures in the last two years (1986-87 and 1987-88) were rounded to the nearest £10 million and in earlier years to the nearest £1 million.

As explained in part 4, paragraph 10, of Cmnd. 9702, pending decisions on total local authority current expenditure in 1987-88 and 1988-89, the 1986-87 cash total and its distribution, including the figures for local authority education shown in table 3.12, have been rolled forward for a further two years. The Government will review the figures later this year in the light of the situation and prospects then.

Cambridge Science Park

Mr. Rhodes James asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to visit the Cambridge science park.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so.

ILEA Schools (Admission of Police)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the names of those Innder London education authority schools which are refusing to admit police officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I understand that the Inner London education authority does not keep systematic information on this matter. However, I am informed that a survey conducted by the Metropolitan police in April 1985 showed the following schools as not admitting the police:

North Westminster Community School, NW1 and W9 (Lower Houses) and W2 (Upper House)
Daubeney Infants School, E5
De Beauvoir Junior School, N1
De Beauvoir Infants School, N1
Gainsborough Junior Mixed and Infants School, E9

Clapton School, E5
Hackney Downs School, E5
Stoke Newington School, N16
Skinners' Company School, N16 and E5 (Upper and Lower School)
Hurlingham and Chelsea School, SW6
Ecclesbourne Junior Mixed and Infants School, N1
William Tyndale Junior Mixed and Infants School, N1

Young people need to know about the law and about the rights and responsibilities of citizens. They need to know, too, about the role of the police in maintaining law and order, about crime prevention and about road and other dangers. The action of certain schools in refusing to allow police in school is not in the interests of their pupils and can only hinder good relations between them and the police.

Mendocino Book Company

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking to warn the public against paying for diplomas and degrees offered for sale by the Mendocino book company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The Government have no knowledge of this company's activities. We deplore the practice of selling bogus qualifications but believe that no solution is possible without legislation. Proposals for legislation are under consideration.

Postgraduate Certificate of Education Courses

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what reply he has sent to the Secondary Heads Association in response to the letter he has received from it about the decrease in the current year in the number of applications for postgraduate certificate of education courses.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend replied to this letter today. The hon. Member may wish to approach SHA to see whether they are willing to release its contents.

Higher Education (Staff-student Ratios)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the total staff-student ratios for universities and polytechnics in each academic year since 1978-79.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Staff/Student Ratio	Academic Years 1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85
Universities* (Great Britain)	9·3	9·3	9·4	9·7	10·1	10·2	—
Polytechnics† (England)	8·3	8·4	8·9	9·7	10·3	11·1	11·5

Information for universities for 1984-85 is not yet available.

* The staff-student ratio for universities is defined as the full-time equivalent of undergraduate and postgraduate students divided by full-time academic staff funded wholly from university funds.

† The staff-student ratios for polytechnics are calculated as full-time equivalent student load divided by the full-time equivalent number of lecturers who are involved in teaching.

University of London

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to improve levels of financing for the paediatrics, psychiatry and general practice academic departments at the university of London.

Mr. Walden: Grant allocations for individual universities are a matter for the University Grants Committee.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what would be the salary, at 1 April 1985, 1 November 1985, 1 April 1986 and 1 November 1986, including the rise in public sector pay assumed by the 1986-87 rate support grant settlement, for teachers (a) entering the profession as new graduates, (b) at the top of scale 1, (c) at the mid-point on scale 2, (d) at the bottom of scale 3, (e) at the top of scale 2, (f) at the top of scale 3; and for heads (g) of group 2 primary schools and (h) of group 12 secondary schools if (i) the formal offer of 12 September 1985, (ii) the informal offer of 14 October 1985 or (iii) the agreement of 24 January 1986 were implemented; and, for each of (a) to (h), what is the salary at present actually received.

Sir Keith Joseph: The attached table shows the salary rates, excluding allowances, that teachers who on 1 April 1984 were in the categories listed would have received under all the formal offers, and the informal one of 14 October 1985, made by the employers since January 1985 —so far as this can be determined from the terms of the offers made. The salary rates shown assume normal incremental progression but do not take account of the annual pay increase from 1 April 1986. This has yet to be negotiated.

Teachers' salary rates at 1 April and 1 November 1985, and 1 April and 1 November 1986, on the basis of pay offers for 1985 made by the management panel of the Burnham Committee

3. Mid-point scale 2 taken as point 7.
4. Head teachers assumed to be at their salary maximum throughout.

5. All examples assume assimilation without promotion to the new scales envisaged in the September package.
6. Examples assume that the 14 October informal offer comprised 6·9 per cent. on all scales from 1 April 1985 rising to 7·5 per cent. on all scales on 31 March 1986.
7. The January agreement consists of a 6·9 per cent. increase on all scales with effect from 1 April 1985 and an additional 1·6 per cent. on all scales from 31 March 1986, calculated on the 31 March 1985 base.

Student Numbers (Scotland)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if his Department has incorporated the latest projection of student numbers published by the Scottish Education Department, in November 1985, into its projections for demand for higher education on a United Kingdom basis.

Mr. Walden: The Department hopes to publish revised projections of higher education student numbers for Great Britain, later this year. These will take account of the latest SED projections of qualified leavers from schools and colleges in Scotland and their projections of student demand.

PRIME MINISTER

Lewisham

Q35. Mr. Moynihan asked the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Lewisham.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Rail Travel

Q68. Mr. Snape asked the Prime Minister if she will publish details of the number of occasions she has travelled by British Rail since forming her first Administration in May 1979.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the rely I gave on 22 January, at columns 189-90, to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick).

Higher Education

Q74. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on Government policy on the age participation rate of 18-year-olds in higher education.

The Prime Minister: The Government's policy is to provide places in higher education for those who wish to enter, are able to benefit from it and have the necessary intellectual competence, motivation and maturity. The age participation index (for 18 to 19-year-olds) has risen from 12·4 in 1979 to 13·7 in 1984 and is expected to go on rising to reach at least 15·5 by 1995-96. Similar proportionate increases have taken place, and are expected, in the number of mature entrants to higher education.

Ministers (Appointments)

Q113. Mr. Ashton asked the Prime Minister how many Ministers of the Crown have been appointed since May 1979.

The Prime Minister: Since 3 May 1979, 171 Ministers (including Whips) have been appointed.

Engagements

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 January.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 January.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 January.

Mr. Yeo asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

NHS (Resources)

Mr. Best asked the Prime Minister what are the differences in the formulae for allocation of resources for the National Health Service in Scotland and in Wales, respectively; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The provision for the National Health Service in Scotland and in Wales reflects the respective priorities of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales. In both countries there are formulae for calculating the annual relative funding positions of health boards authorities. A copy of the report on which the Scottish formula is based (Scottish health authorities revenue equalisation) is available in the Library of the House. I have also arranged for copies of the latest Welsh revenue and capital formulae to be placed there.

Westland plc

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister why the Solicitor-General was not consulted regarding the public disclosure of extracts of his letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my statement to the House on 23 January, at column 450, and my speech on 27 January, at columns 651-58.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if she discussed with the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan) the public disclosure of extracts from the Solicitor-General's letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) before the leak inquiry was completed; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to what I told the House on 27 January.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister whether her staff at 10 Downing street participated in the drafting of the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Westland plc

Mr. Williams asked the Prime Minister on what occasions between 6 January and 22 January she met, telephoned or wrote to the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the right hon. and learned Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan).

The Prime Minister: It is not the practice to give details of exchanges between Ministers.

Mr. Williams asked the Prime Minister when she became aware of the letter of 7 January from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); what steps she then took to bring this information into the public domain; and when the letter was released.

The Prime Minister: I saw the letter some hours after it was sent. As I said in the House on 27 January, the Government made clear to Westland plc on 13 January that there was nothing to add to my letter to the company of 1 January. The Solicitor-General's letter was placed in the Library of the House on 27 January.

Mr. Madden asked the Prime Minister if she will make it Her Majesty's Government's policy that all Departments and the Cabinet Office make available all papers, documents and persons requested of them by any Select Committee of the House inquiring into any aspects of the affairs of Westland plc; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Ministers will decide who should represent their Departments before Select Committees inquiring into the circumstances surrounding Westland, and will observe the normal conventions about the disclosure of documents.

Private Office

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister if she intends to make any changes in the staffing of her private office; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister which Ministers she met on Saturday 4, Sunday 5 and Monday 6 January.

Miss Maynard asked the Prime Minister which Ministers she met on Saturday 4, Sunday 5 and Monday 6 January.

The Prime Minister: It is the practice not to give details of exchanges between Ministers.

Schoolchildren (Dietary Survey)

Dr. Marek asked the Prime Minister if she will ask the Office of Population Surveys and Censuses to publish an interim report of the dietary survey of schoolchildren in 1983 as soon as possible.

The Prime Minister: The survey was commissioned by the Department of Health and Social Security and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently considering whether to publish an interim report.

Staff

Mr. Madden asked the Prime Minister if any member of staff in the Cabinet Office or her press office has sought to tender their resignation in the current year; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Pawsey asked the Prime Minister if she will list the total amounts paid in grants by Government Departments to voluntary bodies during the financial year 1984-85; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The information requested is shown in the table. The total amount of grant paid in 1984-85 represents a cash increase of 23 per cent. (in real terms just over 17 per cent.) on the total paid in the previous year. In the period between 1979-80 and 1984-85 the level of Government grant giving and payments to voluntary bodies has risen by 140 per cent. (or, in real terms, by 57·8 per cent.).

† ODA's total (£24,026,902) consists solely of grants to various British charities and educational institutions for work in overseas relief and development.

The total figure excludes payments to voluntary bodies by the Manpower Services Commission. These are for services provided and, for the year 1984-85, they are estimated to be as follows:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Television Licences

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many disclosures of names and addresses took place from the television licensing computer system in 1985; for what purpose those disclosures took place; and which organisations received those names and addresses.

Mr. Waddington: The general principle governing the computer and other records of the National TV Licence Records Office is that personal information (including names and addresses) is not disclosed to third parties. There are, however, various circumstances concerning the effective administration of the licensing system in which the disclosure of such information may take place, including: (a) disclosure to the courts (and in Scotland the prosecuting authorities) for the purposes of a prosecution for licence evasion; (b) to a financial institution or a person's estate in connection with arrangements for the payment or refund of his licence fee; and (c) for the purposes of approved research. I very much regret that two previous replies to the hon. Member on the question of disclosure from these records, on 9 March 1984 at column 721 and on 30 October 1984 at column 891, did not refer to these circumstances. Information about the number of occasions on which names and addresses have been disclosed in any year and to whom is not collected; but personal data maintained by the National TV Licence Records Office will be subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984.

Gas Appliances

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions resulted, in each year since 1980, in cases concerning the installation and maintenance of gas appliances.

Mr. Mellor: The information available to me, which may be incomplete, relates to proceedings under the Gas Acts 1965 and 1972 and is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (Volume 1, table S1.1(a)(iii) in the 1984 issue). In the years 1980 to 1984 there were respectively 46, 50, 38, 33 and 28 such prosecutions.

Airports

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list those United Kingdom airports where there is not a separate channel for the admission of United Kingdom passport holders;

(2) why some United Kingdom airports have separate channels for United Kingdom arrivals and why others direct United Kingdom passport holders to the European Economic Community channel;

(3) whether it is permissible for United Kingdom passport holders to use the European Economic Community entrance channel at United Kingdom airports when there is a long queue at the United Kingdom only channel.

Mr. Waddington: The arrangement of the immigration control at United Kingdom airports is determined by the type of passenger traffic arriving at each port, by the accommodation available and by the number of immigration officers available to clear passengers. The object of chanelling is to clear passengers in the shortest possible time, and the arrangements are reviewed in the light of changes in traffic and staffing levels. At some ports these factors have led to providing a single channel for United Kingdom and European Community passport holders and at others to the provision of separate channels. In the latter case, British citizen passengers may choose to use the separate European Community channel if they wish, and immigration officers are instructed to clear such passengers without delay.

The airports at which immigration service officers are stationed and at which there is no permanent separate channel for the holders of United Kingdom passports at the immigration control are:

Aberdeen	Glasgow
Belfast	Leeds/Bradford
Birmingham	Lydd
Bournemouth (Hurn)	Newcastle
Bristol	Norwich
Cardiff (Wales)	Prestwick
East Midlands	Southend
Edinburgh	Stansted

Police Houses

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of police houses is empty; and if he will take steps to encourage local police authorities to sell to police officers and other tenants of local councils all those that are not specifically required for operational purposes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Our latest information is that some 1,700 police houses—11·6 per cent. of the total police housing stock in England and Wales—have been empty for three months or more. Police authorities are already encouraged to dispose of houses which are surplus to operational requirements and many have given effect to the Police Advisory Board's recommendation that arrangements should be made to sell surplus police houses to police officers.

Civil Defence

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total expenditure on civilian defence in Great Britain and in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in the last three years for which statistics are available on a comparable basis.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The total expenditure on civil defence in Great Britain was:

	£ Million
1982-83	55·9
1983-84	69·8
1984-85	84·7

Figures for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are not available.

West Midlands Police

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the west midlands as to the cost of policing the county in each of the last six years, in constant terms.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The net revenue expenditure of the West Midlands police authority for the period requested, calculated in constant terms using 1979-1980 as the base, is as follows:

	£ Million
1979-80	72·964
1980-81	74·261
1981-82	79·681
1982-83	82·096
1983-84	84·768
1984-85	86·281

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the west midlands incorporating comparative figures as between 1979 and at the latest available date for the borough of Solihull showing (a) the number of police officers per head of population, (b) the number of hours per man worked by the police, (c) the amount of off-duty time and holiday entitlements, (d) the average rates of pay and (e) the priority of tasks upon which police time was spent.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The ratio of police officers to population in Solihull was one to 684 in December 1979, compared with one to 651 in December 1985.

The standard number of working hours for ranks from constable to chief inspector has remained 40 per week since 1979, normally consisting of five eight hour shifts and two rest days although overtime is commonly worked. Superintending ranks have no fixed hours, being expected to be available on a 24-hour basis.

Superintendents are allowed eight days "monthly leave" per 28 days period, and more senior ranks 1½ days. In addition to public holidays, all officers have an annual leave allowance, as set out below:

1979	Under 10 years' service	10 or more years' service	17 or more years' service
Constable	18 days	21 days	23 days
Sergeant	20 days	23 days	23 days
Inspector	23 days	26 days	26 days
Chief Inspector	26 days	29 days	29 days
Superintendent	30 days	30 days	30 days
Chief Superintendent and above	Not less than 42 days	Not less than 48 days	Not less than 48 days

1986	Under 10 years' service	10 or more years' service	15 or more years' service	20 or more years' service
Constable	20 days	23 days	25 days	26 days
Sergeant	20 days	23 days	26 days	26 days
Inspector	23 days	27 days	28 days	28 days
Chief Inspector	26 days	30 days	30 days	30 days
Superintendent	31 days	31 days	31 days	31 days
Chief Superintendent and above	Not less than 42 days	Not less than 48 days	Not less than 48 days	Not less than 48 days

It would be difficult to calculate the average rates of pay of police officers. The minimum and maximum rates are set out below:

Rates of pay: provinces

	1979		1986
	minimum £	maximum £	minimum £	maximum £
Constable	4,086	6,471	7,212	12,033
Sergeant	6,186	7,095	11,508	13,203
Inspector	7,095	8,058	13,203	14,991
Chief Inspector	8,058	8,969	14,991	16,677
Superintendent	11,124	11,973	20,394	22,143
Chief Superintendent	12,258	13,110	22,671	24,072

I understand from the chief constable that priorities in the use of divisional manpower were not precisely formulated in 1979. Current priorities in the Solihull division are to reduce crime, particularly house burglaries, and improve public tranquility without abrogating responsibility for enforcement of the law. Deployment is a matter of the chief constable.

Community Radio

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community radio stations he expects to authorise for London on an area or special interest basis; and when he expects to do so;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 625, when he expects to receive the report of the advisory committee on community radio on the allocation of licences for the operating of area and special interest community radio stations.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The experiment in community radio announced on 25 July 1985 by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Home Secretary envisaged five stations in London (three neighbourhood, two community of interest) out of a total of 21. As to timing, I would refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to a Question from the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Carwright) on 17 January at columns 715-716.

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Brent, East on 16 January, Official Report, column 625, if he will list the persons and groups from ethnic minorities with whom the advisory committee on community radio has met.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A comprehensive record has not been maintained of meetings between members of the advisory panel, individually and collectively, and interested individuals and groups from the ethnic minority communities.

Passports

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to provide for a joint passport to continue to be valid in the event of the demise of the holder for all other persons named on the passport over the age of 16 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: It would be contrary to international passport practice to permit the spouse, or anyone else, to continue to use a family passport after the death of the holder. Moreover, as my right hon. and learned Friend the then Home Secretary informed the House on 24 July 1984 at columns 566-7 the Government's plans for the introduction of a new format machine readable passport mean that the issue of a passport containing particulars of the holder and his or her spouse will have to be discontinued.

Vandal Patrols

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police on his plans to promote, in collaboration with the Manpower Services Commission in the county, vandal patrols and victim support projects.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The chief constable of West Midlands tells me that his support for crime prevention work funded under the community programme, including vandal patrols and victims support schemes, will depend on a careful assessment of each project, and consultations with statutory and voluntary agencies and discussions within the local community.

Burglaries (Wolverhampton)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the number of burglaries which have been reported on housing estates in the Wolverhampton area in each of the last six years; and what information he has as to in how many cases a conviction was obtained.

Mr. Mellor: The information collected centrally relates to police force areas. The number of burglaries recorded and the number of persons found guilty of burglary in the west midlands are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables Volume 3" (tables S3.1, S3.2(A) and S3.4(A) of the issue for 1984).

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the number of neighbourhood watch schemes which have been initiated in the Wolverhampton area.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable of West Midlands that 46 neighbourhood watch schemes are operating in the Wolverhampton division, and that a further 15 are planned.

Immigration Procedures (Disclosure of Information)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 455, whether the investigation into the disclosure of information on immigration procedures in the Daily Telegraph on 3 December is now complete; what information has been produced to date; if he will now ask the Director of Public Prosecutions to look into the matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The investigation is well advanced and is expected to be completed shortly.

Rape

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and the chief constable of the West Midlands constabulary as to the number of cases of rape which have been reported to their officers during the last six years; and how many of these did not result in criminal proceedings being instituted against the accused.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested on allegations of rape reported, but not recorded as offences, is not available. The numbers of offences of rape recorded by the Metropolitan police and the West Midlands police force are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (table S3.1 of the issue for 1984). Information on the proportion of recorded rapes cleared up in each police force area was given in reply to a Question from the hon. Member for Knowsley North (Mr. Kilroy-Silk) on 23 January 1986 at columns 261-2.

Libyan Nationals

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the immigration and nationality status of those Libyans working for Libyan airlines at British airports; what information he has as to the numbers of Libyans working at each airport; and what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that their presence does not constitute a threat to security.

Mr. Waddington: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any other Libyans who left Britain after the Libyan embassy siege (a) have since returned to the United Kingdom and (b) have applied to return but were refused leave to enter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Apart from Mr. Ben Rabha, none of the Libyans who were in the Libyan People's Bureau on 17 April 1984 and left the United Kingdom on 27 April 1984 has applied to return.

Data Protection

Mr. Grylls asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 January to the hon. Member for Surrey, North-West, if a copy of the report of the Data Protection Registrar on the impact of the Data Protection Act on businesses will be placed in the Library; and when he expects to receive the report.

Mr. Waddington: The report has been requested after the Act has come fully into force on 11 November 1987, and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Pub Bombings (Birmingham)

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give the names of the police officers appointed to examine the case of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings;

(2) when he will report on the result of inquiries into the case of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend is examining the case carefully in order to determine whether material which has been sent to him contains new evidence of a kind which would make it appropriate for him to refer the case to the Court of Appeal. In doing so he is considering whether there is any need to ask the police to undertake further inquiries. Examination of the case is being carried out as quickly as possible, but I cannot yet say when my right hon. Friend will be in a position to reach a decision.

Paul Hill

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why Paul Hill, a prisoner at Her Majesty's prison, Gartree, is currently in a 28-day lie-down at Lincoln.

Mr. Mellor: Mr. Hill has been transferred temporarily (known in prison slang as a lie-down) to Lincoln prison in the interests of maintaining good order and discipline at Gartree.

Dr. Frank Skuse

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Dr. Frank Skuse, a forensic scientist at the Home Office laboratories in Chorley, is still employed on criminal cases.

Mr. Hurd: Dr. Skuse retired from the Home Office on 31 October 1985.

Sri Lankan Tamils

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of Sri Lankan Tamils who have been granted admission on a temporary basis to the United Kingdom since 1 January 1985; how many of these have successfully applied to continue their temporary leave to remain; how many have been removed from the United Kingdom; and what was their destination.

Mr. Waddington: I will reply as soon as possible.

Foreign Visitors (Non-admission)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of non-United Kingdom citizens stopped and refused admission to the United Kingdom from 1 January to 21 January at (i) Dover, (ii) Gatwick, (iii) terminal 1 of Heathrow, (iv) terminal 2 and (v) terminal 3; and what were the comparable figures for 1985.

Mr. Waddington: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrivals from Sri Lanka, Bangladesh and India have been refused admission to the United Kingdom between 1 January and 21 January; and what are the comparable figures for 1985.

Mr. Waddington: I will write to the hon. Member.

Horse Racing

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider the introduction of legislation to seek to permit horse racing on Sundays.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We have no present plans for legislation on this subject.

Prevention of Terrorism

Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will seek the renewal of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: A draft order was laid today under section 14(10) of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984. If the draft order is approved by Parliament, the Act will continue in force for a further 12 months. I have received Sir Cyril Philips' report on the operation of the Act in 1985 and copies of both the report and my response to it have been placed in the Library and in the Vote Office.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid (Publications)

Mr. Irving asked the Attorney-General whether the Lord Chancellor's Department intends to publish "Getting Legal Aid", "Legal Aid Guide", "Legal Aid Financial Limits" and "Legal Aid for Criminal Offences" in Welsh, Greek, Turkish, Chinese, Punjabi, Bengali, Gujerati, Hindi and Urdu; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Responsibility for civil legal aid publicity rests with the Law Society. It is understood that the Law Society is planning to mount a pilot scheme in a limited number of languages to test the level of demand and that decision will be reached in the light of the outcome.

Westland plc

Mr. Dobson asked the Attorney-General when the Solicitor-General first knew that (a) the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry had carried out and (b) the Prime Minister's Office had authorised the disclosure of his letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence.

The Attorney-General: My hon. and learned Friend first knew on 22 January, when he saw the report by the head of the Civil Service, that my right hon. and learned Friend, the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, had himself authorised the disclosure. It was at the same time that he learned of the part played in this matter by officials on the staff of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, as she described it to the House in the statement which she made on 27 January.

Mr. Williams asked the Attorney-General when he was first informed of the direct involvement of the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the right hon. and learned Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan) in the leak of the Solicitor-General's letter.

The Attorney-General: On 22 January, when I was given a summary shortly before receiving the report of the inquiry carried out by the head of the Civil Service.

Mr. Williams asked the Attorney-General when he first learnt that officials at No. 10 Downing street had been consulted about the leak of the Solicitor-General's letter.

The Attorney-General: On 22 January, when I was given a summary shortly before receiving the report of the inquiry carried out by the head of the Civil Service.

Mr. Williams asked the Attorney-General whether he recommended any alternatives to a formal inquiry as a method of resolving the controversy about the Solicitor-General's letter.

The Attorney-General: No.

Mr. Williams asked the Attorney-General on what date and at what time he first directly communicated to the Prime Minister his advice that a formal inquiry should be initiated into the publication of part of the Solicitor-General's letter.

The Attorney-General: I had no communication on this matter with my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, until after I had a summary of the report of the inquiry on 22 January. My views on the desirability of holding an inquiry were communicated to the head of the Civil Service, as my right hon. Friend made clear to the House on 27 January.

Mr. Winnick asked the Attorney-General by what means the Solicitor-General first learnt that the Prime Minister wished him to write to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); how this communication determined the content of the letter; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: As to the first part of the question, I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the House on 27 January at column 652. The communication in no way determined the decision of my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General to write the letter, nor did it determine the contents of that letter.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Seed Peas (Cultivar Belinda)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Luton, North of 27 January, he expects to make an announcement regarding the release of stocks of the pea seed Belinda that are free of pea bacterial blight.

Mrs. Fenner: On the basis of scientific tests on samples of these stocks, I cannot regard the pea seed held under statutory notice as free from pea bacterial blight. As to an announcement, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 27 January at column 406.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Gould asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 344, what proportion of the 29,994 tonnes of feedwheat held in intervention in Dagenham docks has been treated so as to render it unfit for human or animal consumption; and what plans there are to subject it to such treatment in future.

Mr. Gummer: No grain at the store has been treated in this way, nor are there plans to do so in future.

Untreated Milk Sales

Mr. Nicholls asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the restrictions on sales of untreated milk by farmhouse caterers.

Mr. Gummer: We have received many representations about the new untreated milk regulations. Generally speaking, I think our regulations strike a reasonable balance between various conflicting considerations, but I have looked again at the position of farm house caterers. In the light of this review, we propose to amend the regulations to allow registered dairy farmers to provide untreated milk to farm visitors provided they tell them what they are drinking. My Department will issue the necessary consultation documents next week with a view to making the changes before the holiday season.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Lyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council in Brussels this week.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made on 30 January.

Palinauris Investment Ltd.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the majority shareholding of Palinauris Investments Ltd. the owners of Table Bay Marine of Cape Town buying agents for general merchandise for Tristan da Cunha.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that the majority shareholding in Palinauris Investments is held by Field Nominees Ltd. of Bermuda, who hold 11,393 of the 12,000 shares.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the size of the cut in the basic rate of income tax required in 1985-86 to reduce the total tax payments (income tax, national insurance contributions, indirect taxes less child benefit where applicable) for those on 50 per cent., 75 per cent., 100 per cent., 150 per cent. and 200 per cent. of national average earnings for single people, married couples and married couples with two children to the same proportion of gross earnings as in 1978-79; and if he will give an equivalent estimate for 1986-87 on the basis of the conventional assumptions of index-linked allowances and duties;

(2) what is his estimate of the size of the cut in the basic rate of income tax required in 1985-86 and 1986-87 financial years to reduce total tax payments (income tax, national insurance contributions, indirect taxes less child benefit where applicable) for those on 50 per cent., 100 per cent., 150 per cent. and 200 per cent. of average earnings for single people, married couples and married couples with two children to the same amount in constant prices as in 1978-79.

Mr. Moore: The available information is in the table. Figures for 50 per cent. and 200 per cent. of average earnings are not given, because indirect tax payments cannot reliably be estimated at these levels.

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the marginal tax rate (defined as the proportion of additional earnings absorbed in income tax, national insurance contributions and indirect taxation) for each year since 1978-79 on average and for single people, married couples and married couples with two children at 75 per cent., 100 per cent., 150 per cent., 200 per cent. and 500 per cent. of average earnings.

Mr. Moore: Estimates of marginal tax rates defined in the way requested are in the table. Figures for 200 per cent. and 500 per cent. of average earnings are not given because indirect tax payments cannot reliably be estimated at these levels. An estimate of the marginal tax rate on average is not readily available.

Channel Fixed Link

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will instigate a programme of regional customs clearance warehouses to provide direct freight facilities in conjunction with the completion of the fixed Channel link.

Mr. Brooke: There is already a national network of inland customs clearance facilities. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, in consultation with British Rail and other trade interests, is studying the question of how best to facilitate traffic generated by the Channel fixed link. The provision of further inland clearance facilities will be considered in this context.

Printing

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide details, by value and by quantity, of the geographical distribution by the four constituent parts of the United Kingdom of all printing carried out by or on behalf of Her Majesty's Stationery Office, in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Brooke: The value of printing including paper during the year ending 31 March 1985 is assessed at:

	£ million
England	114·4
Scotland	4·7
Wales	1·4
Northern Ireland	2·2
	122·7

I regret that information by quantity is not available.

Police Officers (Travel Warrants)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response he has made to the police negotiating board's request of 30 November 1985 that police officers serving in the Scottish outer islands should not be subject to income tax on the travel warrants they receive each year for travel to and from the mainland.

Mr. Moore: I replied to the chairman of the police negotiating board's letter on 14 December 1985 explaining why a taxable benefit arises and why in the Government's view it would not be appropriate to exempt these warrants from income tax.

Whitbread Poacher Bitter

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the original gravity of Whitbread Poacher bitter on which tax was levied when the beer was launched; what is the procedure for notifying changes in original gravity; and whether any such changes have been notified to his Department in respect of Poacher bitter.

Mr. Brooke: The original gravity of each brew is declared to customs and excise as the basis for calculating beer duty. I regret, however, that the Department cannot disclose such information relating to an individual taxpayer, which has been received in confidence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Assembly

16. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the future of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

18. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the future of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Solihull (Mr. Taylor) a few moments ago.

Security

17. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security position.

27. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

29. Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the security situation in the Province.

31. Mr. Portillo asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the latest security situation in the Province.

Mr. Tom King: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mr. Proctor) earlier today.

Labour Statistics

19. Mr. Dorrell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total number of employees in employment in Northern Ireland at the latest date for which figures are available.

Dr. Boyson: At September 1985 there were 463,250 employees in employment in Northern Ireland. Although this level is 1,490 down on the corresponding September 1984 estimate, recent information points to a stabilisation after five years of decline.

Tourism

20. Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the action he is taking to stimulate opportunities for tourism in the Province.

Dr. Boyson: The Government are supporting an expanded programme of marketing and promotional campaigns at home and abroad by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and also provides grant assistance to encourage the development of tourist amenities and accommodation in the Province.

Cross-border Co-operation

21. Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to enhance cross-border co-operation in security matters since the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) earlier today.

Foreign Industrial Investment

22. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Labour Relations Agency report on the experience of foreign industrial investors in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) earlier today.

Divis Flats

23. Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it is his policy to demolish the Divis flats and replace them with low-rise housing, in the light of a report submitted to him by the Town and Country Planning Association.

Mr. Needham: The Divis complex is structually sound. The Housing Executive has put forward proposals for extensive refurbishment starting with the rehabilitation as a pilot exercise of one block which would enable a full evaluation to be made. If the site were cleared, more than half of the residents could not be rehoused there in traditional houses.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

24. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in implementing the Anglo-Irish agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Sir J. Biggs-Davison) earlier today.

26. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further representations he has received concerning the operation of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow) earlier today.

30. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if there is any evidence to date that the Anglo-Irish agreement has had any effect on the number of terrorist offences in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott: I am optimistic that our discussions with Irish Ministers at the intergovernmental conference, which have already set in train as a first step a programme of work between the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Commissioner of the Garda Siochana, will lead to an improvement in the co-ordination of security activities on both sides of the border so as to deal more effectively with the threat from cross-border terrorism.

Anglo-Irish Parliamentary Body

25. Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any further consideration has been given to the establishment of an Anglo-Irish parliamentary body.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Lord Privy Seal, I refer the hon. Member to the answer he gave on 27 January at columns 638-39.

Baker Report

28. Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he proposes to implement in full the recommendations of the Baker report on the operation of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act.

Mr. Scott: A number of the recommendations in Sir George Baker's report have already been implemented, some by means of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 (Amendment) Order 1985 which came into force on 21 January 1986. It remains the intention of the Government to put legislative proposals before the House during the lifetime of this Parliament which would give effect to those recommendations which we have accepted and which would require the further amendment of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978.

Building Regulations

33. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has plans to change the scope and format of building regulations.

Mr. Needham: Following a full review, I have decided that the present scope and format of the Northern Ireland building regulations should remain although ways of simplifying them will be explored. Their technical standards will continue to be in harmony with the rest of the United Kingdom while making allowance, whenever necessary, for local factors.

Belfast Rally

34. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the police estimate for the number of people attending the rally against the Anglo-Irish agreement in Belfast on 23 November 1985.

Mr. Scott: No official estimate of the number of people present was prepared.

Paramilitary Organisations

35. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has about the sources of funding of paramilitary organisations in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The main sources of finance for paramilitary organisations from within Northern Ireland are the profits gained from paramilitary-controlled social clubs and gaming machines; extortion and protection rackets; and fraud, particularly in the construction industry. The Royal Ulster Constabulary has established a special unit to draw together all police activity against organised crime and the Government have also introduced legislation to help cut off these sources of finance. Further legislation is under consideration.

NORAID also raises money for PIRA in the United States of America and in some instances engages in gun-running on its behalf. It has been found by the United States' courts to be an "agent" of PIRA and leading NORAID figures have been implicated in gun-running.

Employment Opportunities

32. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the effects of his Department's policies to promote fairness in employment in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: The Government are fully committed to equality of employment opportunity in Northern Ireland. They practice this within the Northern Ireland Civil Service, and funds independent agencies charged with its promotion. The Fair Employment Agency promotes equality of opportunity and the elimination of unlawful discrimination on the grounds of religious belief or political opinion. Tenders for Government contracts are accepted only from those who have been awarded the agency's certificate of fair employment.

Recently officials presented a comprehensive report on how our approach to equality of employment opportunity could be made more comprehensive, consistent and effective. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering that report in detail with a view to publishing proposals for discussion.

Pasture Reseeding

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions have been made to assist farmers in reseeding pastures damaged by the summer's wet weather.

Dr. Boyson: Grants for reseeding of grassland are available under the agriculture improvement scheme throughout the United Kingdom at the rates of 30 per cent. and 15 per cent. in the less favoured areas and lowland areas, respectively. Under the agricultural development programme for Northern Ireland, which applies in the original less favoured areas, the reseeding of pasture land is eligible for 45 per cent. grant: this programme is under review. The Grassland Scheme (Northern Ireland) 1985 made available a grant of 27·5 per cent. for grassland reseeding in the lowland area; while this scheme ends on 31 March 1986, my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State is giving consideration to its extension as one of the measures funded under the special aid package for Northern Ireland in 1986.

Wet Weather Compensation

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, in light of the loss of earnings due to last summer's wet weather, he will consider renewing the £4 million Government aid package that has now expired.

Dr. Boyson: No; the United Kingdom-wide package of measures designed specifically to provide some help for those livestock farmers who had been most seriously affected by bad weather in 1985 was not designed to meet all losses.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) in what proportion the cost of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference will be borne by the two Governments;

(2) if Her Majesty's Government will request the Government of the Irish Republic to report to the next meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference on progress made towards the implementation by the Irish Government of its intention to accede to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism as stated in paragraph 7 of the joint communiqué of the Anglo-Irish summit meeting at Hillsborough;

(3) how many United Kingdom civil servants, and how many Northern Ireland civil servants, are posted in the secretariat of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference;

(4) if it is intended that Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers from time to time should attend the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference; and whether the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been represented at official level;

(5) whether it is intended that the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference should sometimes meet in Dublin;

(6) if he will raise at the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference under article 7 of the Anglo-Irish agreement, direct cross-border contacts between the British and Irish armed forces;

(7) if he will list the proposals considered in respect of Northern Ireland by the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference which have been found to have application by the Irish Government in the terms of article 2 of the Anglo-Irish agreement; and what action followed;

(8) if he intends urgently to raise at the Anglo-irish Intergovernmental Conference extradition and extra-territorial jurisdiction in the terms of article 8 of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. friend as soon as possible.

Civil Servants

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government regarding the employment in the Province of officials not of the Northern Ireland public service.

Mr. Tom King: The Northern Ireland Office is a United Kingdom Department of state staffed by the Home Civil Service and the Northern Ireland Civil Service. There is a close working relationship between the two services; officers are interchanged wherever appropriate, in the interests of increasing mutual understanding and of extending the range of skills and experience of individual officers.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the officials of, and seconded from, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office now serving in Northern Ireland, together with their duties.

Mr. Tom King: It has been regular practice to second to the Northern Ireland Office officials from other Government Departments, including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. However, it is not our practice to name such officials and to indicate their parent Departments or the specific duties to which they have been assigned.

Mackies plc

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether financial assistance is being given to Mackies plc in moving from its Springfield road site to a factory in Woodvale.

Dr. Boyson: No application for assistance in respect of such a move has been received by the industrial development board.

Aid

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects United States and European Economic Community aid anticipated at the time of the Hillsborough agreement to reach Northern Ireland; in what form; and on what conditions.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Republic of Ireland (Ministerial Meeting)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what subjects he discussed at his last meeting with representatives of the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Member to a reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Sir J. Biggs-Davison) earlier today.

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next intends to seek to meet Mr. Peter Barry, Foreign Minister of the Irish Republic; and what he intends to discuss.

Mr. Tom King: For security reasons, dates of meetings are not normally released in advance. However, I expect the next meeting of the intergovernmental conference, jointly chaired by Mr. Barry and myself, to take place in February. It has not been our practice to release in advance the agenda for meetings of the conference. But the joint statement issued after our last meeting made it clear that at our next meeting we will consider a progress report from the Chief Constable and the Garda Commissioner on enhancing security co-operation.

Wages Councils

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to introduce changes in respect of the payment of wages, the operation of wages councils and rebates for employers under the contracts of Employment and Redundancy Payments Act (Northern Ireland) 1965.

Mr. Tom King: I intend to bring forward legislative proposals to simplify the wages council system, to modernise methods of paying wages and to give new rights to all workers concerning deductions from pay.

The proposed legislation, which will parallel proposals for Great Britain, will take those aged under 21 out of the wages council system and limit councils to setting a single minimum hourly rate and a single overtime rate. Provision will also be included to repeal the Truck Acts, in so far as they apply to Northern Ireland, and to introduce new controls to protect employees from unlawful deductions from their pay and to provide a mechanism for complaint to an industrial tribunal concerning unlawful deductions from wages.

I also propose to bring forward legislation to abolish the statutory redundancy rebate (now 35 per cent.) to employers other than those with fewer than 10 employees, in line with similar proposals in Great Britain.

SCOTLAND

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Scottish local authorities not participating in youth training schemes.

Mr. Rifkind: There are five Scottish local authorities not participating in the present one year YTS. These are Gordon, Moray, Strathkelvin, Badenoch and Strathspey and Annandale and Eskdale District councils. The Manpower Services Commission is currently in negotiation with local authorities over participation in two-year YTS which begins on 1 April. Only Clydebank district council has notified the MSC that it will not be participating.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he proposes to take to seek to encourage Scottish local authorities to employ people in youth training schemes.

Mr. Rifkind: Local authorities in Scotland have been major participants in and have contributed greatly to the success of the existing one-year YTS. The arrangements governing the structure and funding of two-year YTS which begins on 1 April were arrived at after wide consultation with all the relevant national interests including those representing local authorities. Many local authorities have already decided to participate in the new YTS and I am confident that, following detailed discussions with the Manpower Services Commission, many others will do likewise.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what reasons are given by Scottish local authorities for not participating in youth training schemes.

Mr. Rifkind: Participation in the YTS by employers, local authorities and other sponsors is voluntary and is for these bodies alone to decide. I understand, however, that reasons for not participating can include such diverse considerations as adequacy of alternative provision and failure to secure trade union support. In relation to two-year YTS, Clydebank district council has indicated that the decision it has reached not to participate arises principally from concern about the new funding arrangements. However it will monitor developments and the decision does not preclude possible participation in YTS at a later date.

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on youth training schemes in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: Since YTS was launched in 1983 in partnership with employers, trade unions, local authorities and others, it has helped well over 100,000 young people in Scotland to make the transition from school to the world of work. On 1 April, the new two-year YTS will be introduced in which the Government will be investing over £1 billion by 1987/88 — the highest investment ever made in youth training in this country. Reaction in Scotland to the new YTS has for the most part been very supportive and encouraging and I am confident that the necessary places will be secured.

Rates

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to take steps to reduce the level of rates currently falling on rugby football clubs in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: We have taken effective measures to reduce the burden of rates on those ratepayers most severely affected by the overspending of local authorities and by the 1985 rating revaluation, which may include rugby clubs. Rating authorities have discretion to reduce or remit the rates payable on premises occupied by clubs not established or conducted for profit and which are wholly or mainly used for purposes of recreation. The Secretary of State cannot intervene in authorities' exercise of this discretion, nor in the appeals against rateable values which some clubs have lodged with assessors. The Government's proposals for the reform of the whole system of local government finance are set out in the Green Paper (Cmnd 9714) published on 28 January.

Tranent Bypass

Mr. John Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Tranent bypass will be open to traffic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: I propose to open the Tranent bypass to traffic on 27 March 1986.

Musselburgh Bypass

Mr. John Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of construction of the Musselburgh bypass.

Mr. Ancram: Work is on target to meet the completion date of November 1986.

Housing Action Area, Glasgow

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what further information he required from Glasgow district council in respect of the draft housing action area for improvement, the Woodlands, Maryhill road No. 1; and when he requested this information.

Mr. Ancram: On 18 December, the Scottish Development Department requested that Glasgow district council provide an outline of its developing expenditure plans for 1986-87 in the light of the notified provisional non-housing revenue account allocation of £43 million. The council was asked to provide information regarding its prospective expenditure programme in as much detail as possible, although information was not requested in respect of individual draft housing action area resolutions.

Higher Education

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the number of students entering degree courses in each sector of higher education in each of the years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The numbers entering full-time first degree courses in Scotland are given in the following table. Information for 1985-86 is not yet available.

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any recent representations in favour of an independent review of teachers' salaries and conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend and I continue to receive many letters making representations of various kinds about the teachers' dispute. As my right hon. and learned Friend said on 29 January at column 941, in reply to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, a resolution of this dispute can only be found through negotiation between teachers and employers on the basis of the resources already available.

EMPLOYMENT

Dairy Industry

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently employed in the dairy industry; and what was the equivalent figure in 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: In November 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were an estimated 41,000 employees in employment in the milk and milk products industry, (activity heading 4130 of the 1980 standard industrial classification) in Great Britain.

Enterprise Agencies

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General what arrangement has been provided by his Department for the formation of enterprise agencies in Hertfordshire; what areas are now covered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The formation of local enterprise agencies is primarily a matter for local interests, including particularly representatives of the private sector; they can determine local needs and the level of potential support. The Government are anxious to see viable and effective local enterprise agencies established; our new grant scheme is designed to that end. There are currently four local enterprise agencies in Hertfordshire covering the areas of Letchworth, Stevenage, Watford and St. Albans.

Health and Safety

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General if he will give a breakdown of (a) the number of premises registered under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 and (b) the number of visits by inspectors for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Trippier: There are some 670,000 premises on the registers of the inspectorates of the Health and Safety Executive. This figure excludes an unknown number of sites subject to inspection by HSE inspectors, but not recorded on the registers — for example, construction sites, very small agricultural holdings and tips and landfill sites. Health and safety inspectors made some 240,000 visits in both 1983 and 1984. Figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General if he will give the average time between planned visits by Health and Safety Executive inspectors to various types of premises, distinguishing between high and low risk premises.

Mr. Trippier: Each inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive determines its own priorities for planned visits. The frequency of visits depends on a number of factors, including the degree of risk. The average number of visits to individual nuclear installations is between one and two a month. Figures for the other inspectorates are not readily available.

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General how many convictions there were, and what was the average fine, under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Trippier: The information available on prosecutions brought by Health and Safety Executive inspectorates and agencies of the Health and Safety Commission is as follows:

Year	Number of convictions	Average fine per conviction £
1983	1,954	251
1984*	1,916	315

* Data for 1984 is provisional
Data for 1985 is not yet available

Information on prosecutions taken by local authorities could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General how many cases were taken on indictment under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, with the average fine per conviction.

Mr. Trippier: The following table gives information on prosecutions taken on indictment by inspectorates of the Health and Safety Executive and agencies of the Health and Safety Commission.

Year	Number of convictions	Average fine per conviction £
1983	4	2,125
1984*	9	3,522

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General if he will list (a) the number of persons sentenced to imprisonment under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, (b) the number and average level of fines against employers under the Act for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 and (c) the number and average fines against employees for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Trippier: One person was given a suspended prison sentence in 1985. No prison sentences were imposed in 1983 or 1984.

The available information on recorded convictions following prosecutions taken by inspectorates of the Health and Safety Executive and agencies of the Health and Safety Commission is as follows:

Data for 1985 is not yet available

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General how many prosecutions and applications to tribunals, with the relevant section of the legislation, were taken under the Safety Representative and Safety Committee Regulations 1977 for the years 1984 and 1985; and what were the results of these actions.

Mr. Trippier: No prosecutions under the Safety Representatives and Safety Committees Regulations 1977 were taken by inspectors of the Health and Safety Executive in 1984 and 1985.

During 1984 six applications to industrial tribunals were registered under regulation 11(1)(a) and four under regulation 11(1)(b). The figures for 1985 were four and two, respectively. Information on the results of these applications could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Woodall asked the Paymaster General how many appeals were made to industrial tribunals against (a) improvement notices and (b) prohibition notices, with the results of these appeals, for the years 1974 to 1985 inclusive, issued under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

Mr. Trippier: The table gives the available information for England and Wales.

Staff Training

Mrs. Peacock asked the Paymaster General what percentage of his Department's annual budget is spent on staff training; and if he will give details for each of the last five years.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 360]: In the Department of Employment Group, which includes the Manpower Services Commission, the Health and Safety Executive, and the Advisory Conciliation and Arbitration Service, we estimate that 1·4 per cent. of 1985-86 administrative expenditure will be spent on staff training. Comparable figures are not available for earlier years.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Balance

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current deficit in trade between (a) the United Kingdom and the European Economic Community and (b) the United Kingdom and the non-European Economic Community countries in (i) manufacturing, (ii) steel, (iii) motor vehicles and (iv) textiles; and if he will give equivalent figures for 1972 and 1979.

Mr. Butcher: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Distillers (Bid)

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading on the Guinness bid for the Distillers Company; and if he will now refer this bid to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Howard: The Director General's advice has not yet been received. A decision will be taken on whether the bid should be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in the light of that advice, as soon as practicable.

ENVIRONMENT

Urban Housing Renewal Unit

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the list recently compiled by his Department's urban housing renewal unit of developers wishing to refurbish local authority housing stock for sale; which local authorities have been sent copies of it; and if he will explain on what basis such a list has been compiled.

Sir George Young: The Department's urban housing renewal unit can provide local authorities on request with a list of builders and developers interested in undertaking joint venture schemes in their areas. This list is provided for information and the unit does not endorse or recommend the services of these firms. The list has been compiled from firms who have indicated their interest to UHRU and it can be added to at any time.

The full list comprises:

Ackroyd and Abbot Ltd
Barratt Urban Renewal Ltd
Bellway plc
Costain Homes Ltd
Countryside Properties plc
Cruden Constuction Ltd
Fairclough Building Ltd
Foilgrange Ltd
P Hassall Ltd
Ideal Homes Holdings plc
William Irwin and Co Ltd
Laing Homes (London)
PROBE Ltd
Regalian Properties plc
Summit Homes Ltd
Taylor Woodrow Homes Ltd
Watkin Starbuck and Jones Ltd
William Davis Ltd
George Wimpey plc
Cecil M Yuill Ltd

At their request, the following authorities have received a list of developers named above who are interested in joint venture housing in their areas:

Birmingham
Bolton
Bradford
Gateshead
Harrow
Kingson-upon-Hull
Leeds
Manchester
Solihull
South Holland
Stafford
Wandsworth
Westminster

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to alter his Department's arrangements for the employment of the consultant to the urban housing renewal unit who also sits on the board of the firm PROBE; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No, the urban housing renewal unit does not offer its consultants' services to local authorities where any possible conflict of interest might exist. All the unit's consultants are bound by the terms of their appointment to declare any possible self-interest in any matters on which they might be asked for advice.

Housing Defects (Expenditure)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last reviewed the expenditure limit under the Housing Defects Act 1984 for the repair of defective homes; and when he expects the next review to take place.

Sir George Young: The current expenditure limit of £14,000 was prescribed by order when the Housing Defects Act 1984 came into operation on 1 December 1984, and was based on evidence on the cost of repairing Airey houses available at that time. The costs of repair methods for houses of various types designated under the Act are now being reviewed by my Department, to provide evidence for any revisions of the expenditure limit that may be needed.

Asbestos (Faslane)

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the consultations with the Health and Safety Executive and Dumbarton district council referred to in the answer of the hon. Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) of 2 July, Official Report, column 97, regarding asbestos removed from the construction site at Faslane have now been completed; if he continues to plan to decontaminate the site without removing the asbestos from it; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: These consultations have been completed and a contract has been let by the Property Services Agency to decontaminate the site without removing from it any of the asbestos waste, including that collected last year under the phase 1 contract. Work will start on 3 February. Separate consideration is still being given to action as necessary to deal with asbestos on the loch bed. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) on 6 June 1985 at column 207.

GLC Property Disposals

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of the site at the rear of 8 Kellner road for which the Greater London council applied on 31 October 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 18 Wellington street, for which the Greater London council applied on 25 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on Tuesday 21 January 1986 at column 141.

Local Authority Flats (Defects)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest estimate known to his Department of the cost of making good structural defects in local authority flats.

Mr. John Patten: The Department's recent inquiry into the condition of the local authority housing stock in England showed that local authorities estimated that the flats they owned required expenditure of £613 million on structural repairs (that is to foundations and to load-bearing walls, frames, floors and roofs).

Housing Benefit

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the numbers and percentage of local authority flat dwellers in receipt of housing benefit.

Mr. John Patten: The latest available figures are for November 1983, when it is estimated that housing benefits were being received by about 72 per cent. (1·1 million) of the tenants of local authority and new town flats in England and Wales.

Campaign for Fair Play

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Luton, North on Monday 27 January, regarding the campaign for fair play, what matters were discussed at the meeting; which member of the campaign attended the meeting; when the meeting took place; and whether any further meetings are planned.

Mr. Tracey: At their request, I met Messrs Derek Wyatt, John Goodbody, John Taylor, Patrick Cheney and Steven Hellman, representing the campaign for fair play, on 21 November 1985. We discussed matters relating to the Government's policy on sporting contacts with South Africa, particularly in relation to the then proposed British Lions tour of South Africa this year. I have no plans at present for a further meeting.

Sporting Organisations (Grants)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in pursuance to his reply to the hon. Member for Luton, North of 27 January, he will make it his policy that funds will be granted to sporting organisations on the Sports Council without recourse to him in any case.

Mr. Tracey: Decisions on the allocation of funds to sporting organisations are made by the Sports Council. Only funding in excess of £0·2 million is referred to the Secretary of State as required by the Council's financial memorandum. However, the Sports Council is required under article 3 of its royal charter to have regard to any statements of Government policy which the Secretary of State may issue.

Housing and Planning Bill

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has anything to add to the explanatory and financial memorandum to the Housing and Planning Bill.

Mr. John Patten: Part III of the Bill extends to Wales and the powers it contains will be available to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. I regret that the appropriate references to his Department were in error omitted from the explanatory and financial memorandum prefaced to the printed Bill. The relevant paragraphs in the memorandum should have read as follows:

Financial Effects of the Bill

Financial Assistance for Urban Regeneration

It is envisaged that in England and Wales Part III of the Bill will initially be used in a limited number of localities to assist programmes carried out by consortia and other private sector interests concerned with urban regeneration. It is estimated that in 1987-88 there will be voted expenditure in the range £10 million-£20 million by the Department of the Environment and £2 million by the Welsh Office. Some preliminary expenditure is likely to be incurred in 1986-87. The expenditure in these years will not require any increase in the planned total of public expenditure given in Cmnd. 9702. The level of expenditure in later years will depend on the success of the initial programmes and the public expenditure provision that can be made.

Effect of the Bill on Public Service Manpower
Financial Assistance for Urban Regeneration
It is estimated that as a result of part III of the Bill the equivalent of eight additional staff will be required in the Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has chosen to revise the other services block capital expenditure allocations to shire district councils for 1986-87.

Mr. Waldegrave: Before determining the allocations for the Other Services block, my right hon. Friend invites recommendations from the local authority associations. As for previous years, his initial allocations for 1986-87 were in line with their recommendations. It has subsequently been drawn to his attention that the allocations for some shire district councils fell short of an earlier assurance that each authority would receive at least 70 per cent. of its allocation for 1984-85. The Secretary of State has accordingly revised the allocations to shire districts in such a way as to fulfil the assurance.

Derelict Land Reclamation

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources are being made available for derelict land reclamation in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The funds provided for derelict land reclamation in 1986-87 are £78·38 million compared with £76·36 million at the beginning of 1985-86 and only £23·5 million in 1979-80. These figures include resources for reclamation on Merseyside.

In December 1985 my Department issued a circular restating the priorities for reclamation and making a number of significant changes. This was widely welcomed. It set out the Government's agreement to consider three year rolling programmes in areas of extensive dereliction. These would enable local authorities to tackle dereliction on an area basis more effectively than could be achieved on a scheme by scheme basis under an annual bidding system. £24 million will be made available in 1986-87 to enable 13 rolling programmes to be supported in Cleveland, South Tyneside, Workington ironworks, Preston docks, Salford quays, Hyndburn-Rossendale, Wigan, Liverpool, Ellesmere Port, Wirral, Normanby park steelworks, Lower Don valley Sheffield and the black country.

Local authorities will be required to identify the after use for all reclamation proposals and the terms on which they will dispose of the reclaimed land. Priority will be given to schemes designed to reclaim urban, especially inner city land for a hard private sector end use, particularly housing. The scheme to be supported in 1986-87 fully reflect these priorities. Some £17 million will be made available to support the continuing reclamation of the former Consett and Corby steelworks, the reclamation of coal tips following the report, "Coal and the Environment" (1981) investigation and remedial work on limestone subsidence in the black country, reclaiming the sites for the Stoke and Gateshead garden festivals and good quality groundwork schemes to tackle dereliction on the urban fringes.

Money is also available for the private sector and nationlised industries to undertake reclamation on their own behalf without the involvement of the local authority. I am allocating about £5·5 million for such schemes next year of which about £2·6 million will be accounted for by projects which have already been approved.

Homelessness

Mr. Jeff Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment to what factors he attributes the rise in homeless households housed as secure tenants as a percentage of all new secure tenancies in England as set out in his answer of 18 November 1985, Official Report, column 58.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 468]: The main factors are as follows:

People become homeless for a variety of reasons. For those accepted as being in priority need under the provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977, social factors which have become more significant in recent years are mortgage default and marital disputes. For example some 20 per cent. of those accepted as homeless last year became so as a result of marital disputes compared with only around 15 per cent. in 1978. A major factor has always been the unwillingness or inability of families and friends to continue to provide accommodation.

The percentage of new secure lettings held by such households depends on two separate figures — the number of homeless families housed in this way in any year and the number of new lettings. The number of homeless households housed in secure tenancies varies from local authority to local authority according to the policies of the particular authority, the number of households accepted as homeless in any given period, the particular needs of the households and the availability of suitable accommodation. But across the country as a whole the overall number of homeless households given such tenancies has risen, reflecting increases in the number of homeless for the reasons set out above. At the same time there has been a smaller annual number of new secure lettings. This is partly offset by the provision of non-secure lettings under schedule 3 to the Housing Act 1980. But such lettings are not taken into account in the percentages given in the earlier answer.

TRANSPORT

Grain Exports

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information Her Majesty's Goverment have as to how much grain has been exported to Libya from ports in East Anglia in each of the last five years.

Mr. Ridley: The information available is as follows:

Exports of Grain (unmilled cereals) to Libya from East Anglia

	'000 tonnes
East Anglia
1984	12·1
1985	*27·7

* Estimate.

No unmilled cereals were exported to Libya between 1980 and 1983. Complete data by port and commodity for 1985 are not yet available.

Fishermen (Deaths and Injuries)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the number of (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries to fishermen in each of the last 10 years (i) in total and (ii) per 1,000 employed in the fishing industry; and if he will give similar figures for deaths and injuries per 1,000 employed for the (A) mining, (B) construction and (C) farming industries for the same period.

Mr. Ridley: The number of deaths and accidents to fishermen on vessels of 24 m or more in length and the number of deaths on vessels under 24 m are published annually in the Department's booklet "Casualties to Vessels and Accidents to Men". Figures for accidents to fishermen on vessels under 24 m are not available. Since October 1985, however, serious accidents involving fishing vessels of 10 m or more in length have to be reported to my Department under the Fishing Vessels (Reporting of Accidents) Regulations 1985.

The following tables set out the information required for the years 1976 to 1984 (comparable figures for 1975 are not available and the figures for 1985 have not been finalised). The figures for the coal mining, construction and farming industries are based on information obtained from the Health and Safety Executive.

Addington Square, SE5 (Access)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he has had any correspondence with the Greater London council about the closure of the south-east access to Addington square, SE5;

(2) if he has approved the Greater London council's proposal to close the south-east access to Addington square, SE5.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Greater London council applied for an order under section 209 Town and Country Planning Act 1971 to authorise it to stop up a length of Addington square. A public inquiry was held into the application in June 1985. Subsequently, the Department and the Greater London council have been in correspondence on the question of providing for the needs of cyclists. The Secretary of State's decision on the council's application will be announced shortly.

Radioactive Materials

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to seek to ensure that local authorities are made aware of, and are actively consulted on, all movement of all radioative materials through their areas.

Mr. Ridley: All movements of radioactive materials are governed by the regulations of the International Atomic Energy Agency. The required design of the packaging ensures safety both in normal transport conditions and in accidents. There is therefore no need to make special routeing arrangements, or to involve local authorities.

Motor Cycle Test

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the current average waiting time for a part II motor cycle test in each of the regional road traffic areas and comparable figures for the last two years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The waiting time for a part II motor cycle test is the same as for L-tests. The table gives average waiting times in weeks for each of the traffic area offices.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Sick Dependent Relatives (Allowances)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many men have been granted social security allowances in each of the last six years after giving up a job to care for an ill dependent relative.

Mr. Major: As regards invalid care allowance, the available information is as follows. I regret that information before April 1981 is not available.

Invalid care allowance—awards to men caring for a relative with attendance allowance

Year	Number
*1981	545
1982	1,697
1983	1,816
1984	2,105
1985	2,211

* From April.

As regards supplementary benefit, the available information relates to the number of men receiving benefit at any one time who were not required to be available for work because they were caring for a sick or disabled person, as follows. Information later than 1983 is not available.

Year	Number (estimated)
1978	8,000
1979	7,000
1980	7,000
1981	6,000
1982	6,000
1983	6,000

It is estimated that from 1982 about 1,000 of these men were also receiving invalid care allowance. Information is not available about the number of men receiving supplementary benefit who had given up work to care for a sick or disabled person, or the number caring for a dependent relative. The figures do not include male carers who were not required to be available for work for reasons other than caring.

Housing Benefits

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many unemployed and retired citizens in the Wolverhampton area have been in receipt of housing benefits assistance in each of the last six years.

Mr. Major: This information is not available centrally. However, on the basis of information supplied by the metropolitan borough council of Wolverhampton, it is estimated that the total numbers receiving rent rebates, rent allowances and rate rebates were as follows:

Year	Rent rebates	Rent allowances	Rate rebates
1980-81	7,100	850	20,550
1981-82	9,330	850	25,700
*1982-83	21,760	1,000	37,500
1983-84	26,670	5,060	44,770
1984-85	27,380	4,020	44,590
1985-86	28,600	5,000	47,900

* Includes from November 1982 for some and from April 1983 for all cases, assistance with rent and rates formerly met through supplementary benefit.

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to introduce legislation to extend his powers to pay housing benefit direct to the landlord to cover prevention of misappropriation by tenants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We are still considering the future arrangements for safeguarding the payment of benefit.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any proposals to seek the improvement of adjudication standards prior to the introduction of the income support scheme in 1988.

Mr. Major: There is a continuing programme to improve economy and efficiency in the administration of social security including adjudication standards.

In 1983 we introduced legislation which overhauled and improved the first two tiers of the social security adjudication system. The Health and Social Services and Social Security Adjudications Act 1983 created the post of Chief Adjudication Officer who has a statutory duty to keep under review the standards of adjudication. The Chief Adjudication Officer's first annual report was published recently (HMSO) and we are actively considering his recommendations. The HASSASSA Act also created the office of the president of Social Security Appeal Tribunals and Medical Appeal Tribunals to administer the tribunal system. The president is strongly committed to improving the standards of adjudication within his jurisdiction and, I understand, he has already embarked on an ambitious training programme for tribunal members and chairmen to enhance their legal and procedural skills.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what records are kept by the Mersey regional health authority detailing the cervical cancer smear tests being undertaken in that area; what records are kept of call-back arrangements for those so tested; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. It is not collected centrally. He may therefore wish to contact the chairman of Mersey regional health authority.

Young People (Housing)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the housing problems confronting young people leaving care; and what proposals he has to deal with these problems.

Mr. Whitney: I am not aware that any specific representations on this subject have been received in the Department in the last 12 months. I accept that accommodation is an important need for a number of young people leaving care, as was identified by the second report of the Social Services Committee. The "Child Care Law Review", published last September as a consultative document by the Government, proposes (paragraph 10.9) that local authorities should have a revised power to make contributions, including loans, to the cost of accommodation of those who are in care or who have left care; the Government are currently considering responses to that document. Questions on housing matters are primarily the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library a copy of the directions which the Attendance allowance board has given to delegated medical practitioners under paragraph 5 of schedule II to the Social Security Act 1975.

Mr. Newton: I regret that I am unable to assist the hon. Member. The Attendance Allowance Board is an independent body and I understand that the guidelines it issues to its delegated medical practitioners are not published.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide the latest estimate of the number of regular family income supplement payments in the north-west and show what proportion of the eligible population this represents.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, East (Mr. Prescott) on 20 January at column 58.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current rate of notional fuel element contained within family income supplement.

Mr. Newton: The prescribed amounts for family income supplement do not contain a separate element for fuel. They have been increased annually at least in line with increases in the retail prices index, which includes elements for heating and fuel costs.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants were awarded family income supplement in Scotland in (a) 1984 and (b) 1985.

Mr. Major: The number of families in Scotland in receipt of family income supplement at the end of 1984 and the end of November 1985, the latest date for which information is available, was as follows.

December 1984	25,000
November 1985	24,000

Tranquillisers

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the names and addresses of those local groups providing services for persons addicted to tranquillisers that have received financial assistance from his Department, and, in each case, the amount of aid given and the reason it was given.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is as follows:

Organisation and address	Service provided	Amount of allocation £
TRANX 17 Peel Road, Harrow, Middlesex, HA3 7QX	To promote a self-help group approach to minor tranquilliser dependence	89,183
TRANX-Release 14 Moorfield Square, Southfields, Northampton NN3 5BD	To reduce dependency on prescribed drugs through education and self-help.	29,892
West Cumbria MIND (Copeland) 29a Duke Street, Whitehaven, Cumbria	To assess and reduce the size and scope of tranquilliser dependence, to reduce pressure on family practitioners and promote co-operation and communication between relevant services.	85,442
North East Council on Alcoholism (formerly Newcastle Association for Mental Health) 1 Mosley Street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne NE1 1YE	To support and counsel patients withdrawing from tranquillisers and promote co-operation with general practitioners and other health workers.	96,213

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of legionnaire's disease have been reported in the United Kingdom in each year since that disease was identified; and how many and what proportion of such cases in each of those years occurred among patients in hospitals or other institutions to which Crown immunity against prosecution under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 applies.

Mr. Hayhoe: It is not always possible to identify the source of infection, and information is therefore incomplete. The available details are as follows:

Year	Total number of reported cases	Number of reported cases contracted in NHS hospitals	Percentage of reported cases contracted in NHS hospitals
1979	129	4	3·1
1980	181	24	13·3
1981	143	7	4·9
1982	138	4	2·9
1983	160	9	5·6
1984	151	3	2·0
1985*	199	77	38·7

* Figures for 1985 are provisional.

Community Care

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria are used to prioritise applications for funding under the helping the community to care scheme.

Mr. Whitney: The Department explored with a variety of organisations the possibility of their participation in the management of the dozen different elements of this programme. The bodies with which agreement has been reached, indicated in my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 27 January at columns 397-98, are those which seemed most likely to achieve the objectives we had in mind.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons he estimates provide care in the community on a full-time or semi-full-time basis to elderly or disabled persons; what is the breakdown of this group by sex, marital status, age, region, and income; what financial assistance they receive at present; and what would be the cost (a) of extending the invalid care allowance to all married women carers and (b) of providing all carers with an allowance at current (i) short-term and (ii) long-term benefit rate levels.

Mr. Newton: Information is not collected centrally on a regular basis to enable us to provide the information required, but in 1985 we estimated that to extend invalid care allowance to married women would cost an additional £85 million a year net of savings from other benefits.

Benefits (Draught-proofing)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy on people in receipt of social security benefits being able to obtain free draught-proofing of their homes.

Mr. Newton: Under regulation 18 of the Supplementary Benefit (Single Payments) Regulations 1981 (SI 1981 No. 1528) supplementary benefit claimants may receive a lump sum payment of benefit to meet the cost of materials to carry out simple draught-proofing measures in their homes. So far as the future of these payments is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 19 December at column 315.

NHS (Computer-related Posts)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service computer-related posts in the west midlands region have been unfilled during the last year; and what salaries were being offered for the posts.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not held centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the chairman of the west midlands regional health authority, who may be able to help her.

NHS (Computer Services)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to contract out National Health Service computer services to the private sector.

Mr. Whitney: The National Health Service already makes considerable use of the private sector in developing computer services and we expect this to continue where it is cost-effective to do so. It would not be practicable to contract out all the planning, development and operation of National Health Service computer services.

Primary Care

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish a Green Paper on primary health care.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Green Paper is expected to be published later this year.

Piroxicam (Member's Questions)

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why he has not yet replied to the four questions tabled by the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe for answer on 20 January concerning the drug Piroxicam; if he will now do so; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I replied to my hon. Friend on 28 January.

Midwives

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what levels of pay have been awarded to midwives, ward sisters, nursing auxiliaries and staff nurses each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: The two main midwifery grades, midwifery sister and staff midwife, are paid on the same pay scales as ward sister and staff nurse, respectively. The table shows, therefore, for the period from April 1979 to February 1986, the minimum and maximum points of the pay scales for ward sister, staff nurse and nursing auxiliary.

Pay rates from April 1986 will be determined in the light of the recommendations of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many qualified midwives there have been, and what proportion of them practised, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: Information of this nature is collected by the United Kingdom Central Council (UKCC) for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting and its predecessor the Central Midwives Board (CMB). However, the register of midwives, which records those who have obtained the midwifery qualification includes some midwives who have emigrated, returned abroad, retired, are not in the current employment field or required the qualification for another purpose. For example, a study by the Department's central management services in 1981 showed that 21 per cent. of those entering midwifery training did not intend to practise and a further 26 per cent. were uncertain about their intentions. A ratio of practising midwives to people with a midwifery qualification is not therefore meaningful.

Information as to the number of midwives on the CMB roll/UKCC register and the number declaring their intention to practice is given in the table.

Year ending 31 March	Total Number on Midwives Roll/ Register	Number notifying intention to practice
1979	102,998	21,413
1980	107,121	22,304
1981	110,887	23,117
1982	114,690	24,082
1983	n/a	n/a
1984	n/a	n/a
1985*	167,750	32,585

* The figures for 1985 relate to the United Kingdom and those for earlier years to England and Wales.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many staff midwife and staff midwifery tutor jobs are vacant at the present time.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not collected centrally.

Arthritis Drugs

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the numbers of deaths each year due to the effects of all anti-arthritic drugs.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many adverse reactions, and how many deaths, have been reported to the Committee on Safety of Medicines concerning the drug Piroxicam since 1980; and what is his estimate, having regard to the acknowledged under-reporting of adverse reactions, of the total numbers of adverse reactions and deaths likely to have occurred over this period;

(2) if he will send a specific warning to doctors about the dangers to old people from the arthritis drug Piroxicam;

(3) if he intends to ban the use in the over 60s of the arthritis drug Piroxicam.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Hickmet) on 28 January at columns 501-502. I will decide whether any action is needed when I have considered the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

The adverse reaction reports to the committee referred to in the reply were all received since 1980; of that total, the reported deaths were 77. It is very important to bear in mind that a report does not necessarily indicate a causal relationship between a product and a reported reaction. I am advised that the rate of under-reporting adverse reactions cannot be specified and therefore the estimate requested cannot be given.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the annual cost of making a weekly payment to all pensioners equal to half the difference between £10 and any additional component, guaranteed minimum pension, or graduated pension they may have.

Mr. Major: The estimated additional annual cost of this proposal to public expenditure is £2,250 million.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the average level of state earnings-related pension scheme additional component and of the guaranteed minimum pension each year since 1978; and what has been the level at 1985-86 prices for each of these years and for each year to 1998 on the basis of the Government Actuary's current assumptions; what has been, and what will be, the number of pensioners involved for each of these years; and what has been, and what is forecast to be total public expenditure on both these criteria.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Supplementary Benefit

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people claimed supplementary benefit in Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the years 1979 to 1985; and what percentage this represents.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many, nationally and for each social security region, of (a) 16-year-olds and (b) 17-year-olds are in receipt of supplementary benefit for the latest available year and (i) how many live in their parents' household and (ii) live independently; and how many of them have (1) claimant parents and (2) non-claimant parents.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 434]: Estimates of the number of 16 and 17-year-old claimants in each social security region at December 1983 are as follows:

(thousands)

Region	16-year-olds	17-year-olds
North Eastern	9	21
London North	10	14
London South	6	13
Wales and South West	7	14
Midlands	9	20
North Western	7	19
Scotland	7	18

Source: Annual Statistical Enquiry.

Information is not available about the number in each region who were householders; but, as I indicated in my earlier reply, nationally it is estimated that at the same date 1,000 16-year-olds and 7,000 17-year-olds receiving supplementary benefit were householders.

Fraud Investigators

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many fraud investigators his Department employs; and what is his estimate of the amount of public money they saved in 1985.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 399]: In the financial year 1984-85, the latest period for which information is available, the equivalent of 2,195 staff were employed full-time on fraud investigation and benefit saving was estimated to be £103 million.

Medicines (Adverse Reactions)

Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received the second report of the Committee on Safety of Medicines working party on adverse reactions.

Mr. Hayhoe: Yes. The working party has reviewed the arrangements by which the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) obtains information on the adverse effects of medicinal products and has considered whether any changes are needed in these arrangements.

The working party recommends that for the foreseeable future the CSM should continue to operate its existing voluntary adverse effects reporting procedure, based on the yellow card report form. It also recommends that additional arrangements should be introduced for providing post-marketing surveillance studies on new medicines, particularly those intended for widespread long-term use. The working party has discussed this matter with the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry which has advised that pharmaceutical companies would be prepared to agree with the CSM arrangements for mounting such studies. I understand that the committee and the association are to hold formal discussions on the arrangements governing the studies.

The working party concludes that the CSM may also need to commission studies on specific problems, for example, to obtain data to help in establishing the comparative risks of medicines within the same therapeutic group.

Among its other conclusions, the working party considers that none of the surveillance techniques so far developed offers immediate prospects of improvements in the monitoring of very rare or long-latency adverse drug effects. In the future, schemes which link patients' hospital discharge diagnoses with their prescribing histories might be of value, provided acceptable arrangements for the identification of patients can be developed. It recommends that current research into such record linkage schemes should be continued.

The report has been approved by the Committee on Safety of Medicines. Copies are available in the Library.

Health Bodies (Funding)

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all statutory health bodies, indicating the funding available from his Department for each body for each of the past five years.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 25 November 1985, c. 477]: There is no precise definition of statutory health bodies. The table lists bodies engaged in providing or assisting the provision of health services (excluding voluntary organisations) for which funds have been provided by the Department from Class XI, Vote 1, in the Appropriation Accounts, and the amounts made available in each case.

NHS Employees

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number and rate per thousand of the population of whole-time equivalent (a) nurses (b) midwives (c) doctors (d) dentists and (e) health visitors employed in each year 1978-1985 (i) nationally (ii) in each authority and (iii) in each regional health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 321]: The tables show whole-time equivalent staff in post at 30 September of each year 1978 to 1984, and their rates per thousand population, nationally and for each regional health authority. Figures for 1985 are not yet available at this level of detail. Corresponding figures for district health authorities could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Complaints Procedure

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions in each of the last three years the Health Service Commissioner has criticised the whole or parts of the complaints procedure; and in which cases.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1986, c. 558]: The Commissioner has made specific criticism of the complaints procedures set out in circular HC(81)5 on one occasion—case W4 and W158/1983-4, published in the report of the Health Service Commissioner — Selected Investigations completed October 1983—March 1984 (HC 476).

DEFENCE

Jet Provost Trainer

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Jet Provost T mk 3 and mk 5 will be withdrawn from Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We plan to withdraw the Jet Provost mk 3A and mk 5A aircraft from the pilot training role by 1990; mk 5 aircraft will continue to be used for navigator training until the mid-1990s.

Defence Review

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will undertake a complete defence review.

Mr. Younger: No. While, in the usual way, decisions on priorities will have to be taken in the coming months in order to match the forward programme to the available cash, I see no need for any fundamental change in our defence commitments or in the main roles undertaken by our armed forces.

United States Air Force

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the area of United States Air Force controlled air space and its orientation, about the following: Lakenheath, Mildenhall, Woodbridge and Bentwaters, Alconbury, Greenham common, Sculthorpe, Wethersfield, Kemble, Upper Heyford and Fairford.

Mr. Lee: Each of the airfields is contained within an aerodrome traffic zone subject to the provisions of rule 35 of the Rules of the Air and Air Traffic Control Regulations. Aerodrome traffic zones extend laterally for 1·5 nautical miles from the airfield boundary and vertically to 2,000 ft above ground level. With the exceptions of Lakenheath and Mildenhall, which lie within the Honington military control zone, the airfields are also contained within military aerodrome traffic zones whose regulations are mandatory for military aircraft but advisory for civil airspace users. Military aerodrome traffic zones extend to a radius of five nautical miles from the centre of the airfield's main runway with additional stubs in line with the runway and extending to 10 nautical miles from its centre. The area of a military aerodrome traffic zone is about 118 sq miles. Those at Sculthorpe, Wethersfield and Greenham common are activated only when the airfield is in use.

Upper Heyford is additionally contained within a radar advisory service zone which covers an area of some 400 sq miles. The service provided is mandatory for military air traffic only. Civil aircraft in the vicinity of Upper Heyford may request a radar advisory service from military air traffic controllers if they so wish. New arrangements with regard to this aerodrome are planned to come into effect on 10 April.

Type 23 Frigate

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to order the next batch of type 23 frigates.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave on 14 January at column 915.

Equipment Contracts

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will detail the procedures adopted by his Department in order to ensure that competitive bids are received for his Department's equipment contracts.

Mr. Lee: The Ministry's procedures are designed to ensure that procurement staff secure competition for our requirements whenever it is practicable and reasonable to do so. In addition, our main contractors are required to make the maximum use of competition in their subcontracting. For a fuller account of the procedures I would refer the hon. Member to chapter 5 of the SDE 1985.

Rosyth and Devonport Dockyards

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the companies/consortia which have shown an interest in bidding for the refit and repair services at Rosyth and Devonport dockyards, detailing the amount of current contracts placed by his Department with such organisations or any subsidiaries;

(2) if he will list the personnel of the companies which have visited Her Majesty's dockyards at Rosyth and Devonport in order to acquaint themselves with facilities and services in which they might be interested in relation to the Dockyard Services Bill and the personnel of his Department whom they met on such visits.

Mr. Lee: I shall answer shortly.

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give estimates of the total amount of capital expenditure authorised for Rosyth dockyard and the percentage of that expenditure which can specifically be allocated to the Trident programme.

Mr. Lee: Current plans for Rosyth dockyard envisage expenditure on capital works of £220 million, of which 20 per cent. is specifically allocated to the Trident programme, and expenditure on plant and machinery of £82 million, of which 22 per cent. is for the Trident programme.

Mr Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give estimates of capital expenditure at Rosyth dockyard which has been specifically allocated for dual refitting of nuclear-powered ballistic missile submarines and nuclear-powered fleet submarines.

Mr. Lee: Expenditure on capital works of £188 million, and on plant and machinery of £23 million has been allocated for dual refitting at Rosyth dockyard of nuclear-powered ballistic missile submarines and nuclear-powered fleet submarines.

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give estimates of capital expenditure at Rosyth dockyard which has been allocated for conventional refit purposes.

Mr. Lee: No major capital works associated with refitting of conventionally propelled submarines and surface ships are currently planned. The sum of £59 million has been allocated for expenditure on plant and machinery associated with such refits.

FH-70 (155mm Shells)

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current delay on the delivery of the 155mm shell ordered for British forces' use on the FH-70 and placed with Rheinmetall, Dusseldorf, West Germany.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 450]: Pilot lot deliveries from Rheinmetall of the L15 high explosive shells orderd by the United Kingdom have been made. First full production deliveries were due to start in October 1985. Due to the need to validate this new production source, United Kingdom and West German ammunition experts are only just completing their evaluation of the pilot lots, preparatory to releasing full production.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many redundancy notices have been issued at each of the Royal ordnance factories since July 1985.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 450]: This is a matter for Royal ordnance plc. however, I understand that the information requested is as follows:

	Number of redundancy notices issued
Blackburn	8
Bridgwater	93

A further 12 redundancy notices were issued to headquarters staff employed by Royal Ordnance plc.

I also understand that the company has today announced redundancies at its factories at Chorley and Birtley. The maximum numbers will be:

	Number
Chorley	385
Birtley	446
TOTAL	831

SP-70 Shell

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on the tripartite agreement to develop and manufacture the SP-70 shell; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 448]: There are no plans nor any tripartite agreement to develop a new shell specifically for the SP-70 gun. A range of 155mm ammunition, including shells already developed under the FH-70 programme and other shells which may then be on the market, would be procured for the SP-70 gun when it enters service.

Multi-launch Rocket Systems

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to place orders for further multi-launch rocket systems.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 448]: I anticipate that the pilot nation for European production, Germany, will place a contract with the European Production Group by about May of this year for the MLRS phase I system. This will include the United Kingdom requirement to equip three regiments with MLRS. No further orders are currently in prospect although our requirements are, of course, kept under review.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 31 January 1986

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Telephone Faults

Mr. Harrison asked the Lord Privy Seal how many telephone complaints have been registered in the Palace of Westminster, and how many faults have been reported, in each year since 1969.

Mr. Biffen: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Select Committees

Mr. Greenway asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will detail visits, home and overseas, made by each Select Committee since 1979, indicating the number of members involved, the place and purpose of the visit and the cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1986, c. 529]: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Debt Collecting

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he has any plans to introduce legislation to seek to supersede the warrant sale method of debt collecting; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The Government are aware of the criticisms levelled at the warrant sale procedure in recent years. Last November we presented to Parliament the Scottish Law Commission's report on diligence and debtor protection containing wide-ranging recommendations for reform of the law, including that relating to warrant sales. We are anxious to see the law reformed and, with a view to introducing legislation at the earliest possible opportunity, have issued a consultation paper inviting comments.

The commission stresses the need to look at its proposals as a whole and also emphasises the need for a system of debt enforcement to be effective as well as humane.

Since the consultation period lasts until mid-March 1986 and final policy decisions on implementation of the proposals have yet to be made, it would not be appropriate to make any further statement at this time.

Copies of the report and the consultation paper are available on the Libraries of both Houses.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General when he first approached the Prime Minister or her office with a request that a leak inquiry should be set up into the disclosure of extracts from the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine); what response he received; what subsequent discussions took place on the matter between him or his office on the one hand, and the Prime Minister and her office, on the other; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave on 30 January to a similar question from the right hon. Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams). When I initially sought the views of the head of the Civil Service on 7 January, as my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister described to the House on 27 January, the Prime Minister's office was informed.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the total number of neighbourhood watch schemes operating in the Metropolitan police district broken down by (a) boroughs and (b) police divisions.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that at the end of 1985 there were 3,770 neighbourhood watch schemes operating in the Metropolitan police district. The breakdown of these schemes by police division is as follows:

The information required as regards London boroughs, which are not conterminous with police divisions, is not held centrally and could be obtained only with considerable difficulty and at significant cost. Moreover, a number of neighbourhood watch schemes will almost certainly cross borough boundaries.

Burglar Alarms

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many premises are fitted with audible intruder alarms and in respect of what proportion of these the police have been notified of at least two keyholders.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that this information is not available as there is no requirement to report the installation of alarms signalled by bells only. Where such notification is nevertheless received, it is force policy to require the alarm holder to notify the police of at least two keyholders.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide details of the operation of the list of premises where false alarms regularly originate, maintained by the Metropolitan police; whether the police intend to make a charge for removal of such premises from the list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that no such list is maintained for alarms signalled by bells only. Records are, however, kept of alarm systems whose signals go to the police direct or via central stations maintained by alarm companies. The Metropolitan police, in common with other police forces in England and Wales, continues to operate a policy of withdrawal of direct police response to such alarms if they generate an unacceptable number of false calls. Police response is reinstated only after a specified period, and after inspection by the Metropolitan police burglar alarm inspectorate. There is currently no charge for this inspection, but the Commissioner is considering the introduction of one.

Police Rent Allowances

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to remove tax on police rent allowances.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Tax legislation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. But under regulation 50 of the Police Regulations 1979, the tax paid on rent allowance is reimbursed by police authorities in the following financial year by means of compensatory grant. Rent allowance is thus effectively tax free.

Criminal Injuries

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time taken by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in dealing with claims.

Mr. Mellor: Information is not available on the average time taken to deal with applications to the board. As stated in the board's past annual report (Cmnd. 9684, paragraph 5), three quarters of cases resolved in the 1984-85 financial year were resolved within a year of application.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any investigations are carried out by inspectors, employed under the Cruelty to Animals Act, into the source of animals used in experimentation.

Mr. Mellor: No, this is not currently part of the duties of inspectors appointed under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876. Under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill, the source of all animals used in scientific procedures will be controlled by means of conditions attached to the project licences, and to the certificates of designated breeding, supplying and scientific procedure establishments. One of the duties of the inspectors will be to visit designated establishments to ensure that conditions of licences and certificates are being complied with.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Home Office inspectors employed between 1980 and to date, under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876, have previously performed experiments on animals in commercial, academic or Government laboratories.

Mr. Mellor: It is not the practice to provide information of this kind.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to prohibit the draize eye irritancy test.

Mr. Mellor: No. There is not yet any proven non-sentient alternative to this test. However, we intend to issue guidance to researchers with the aim of ensuring that the test is used only where absolutely necessary and that any painful effects are reduced to a minimum.

Sussex Police Authority

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the authorised establishment of the Sussex police force; what is the present strength of the force; and what representations he has received from the Sussex police authority on the level of grant.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The authorised establishment of the Sussex police is 2,830. The strength of the force on 31 December 1985 was 2,790. My right hon. Friend has not received any representations recently from the Sussex police authority about the level of grant.

Mr. Claude Dixon

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the policy implications of the report by Mr. Nigel Baker QC, on the incident at Fulbourn hospital, Cambridgeshire, involving Claude Dixon, a former patient at Broadmoor; if, in light of the report's findings, he is satisfied that it was in the public interest to discharge this person from Broadmoor; what arrangements he has made for the future safe custody of this person; and if he will review the criteria applied when considering the recommendations for release of psychotic killers from prison hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: We have received a copy of Mr. Baker's report and are studying it, as I understand is my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services.

The committee of inquiry found no reason to criticise the decision to transfer Mr. Dixon to Fulbourn hospital, and we consider that it was reasonable in the light of the information which was available at the time. We already take full account of considerations of public safety when considering proposals for the transfer of mentally disordered offenders from special hospitals such as Broadmoor. Mr. Dixon is now being detained in Broadmoor hospital under a restriction order made for an indefinite period.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Morning Worship

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, column 710, to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire of 17 January, what steps he proposes to take to monitor the level of compliance of local education authorities with the statutory requirements regarding morning worship in schools under the Education Act 1944.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has no plans to collect information centrally on this matter. Where complaints are made to him that the requirements of the Education Act 1944 on collective worship are not being met in a particular school, he obtains details of the circumstances of the individual case and carefully considers these in the light of his statutory functions.

Art Teachers

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many teachers employed specifically to teach art there are in each local education authority.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information requested is not held centrally. Information for England as a whole is available from a staffing survey carried out by the Department in 1984 among a sample of maintained secondary schools. It is estimated from this survey that some 23,000 full-time and 3,000 part-time teachers had art as a subject forming part of a qualification above A-level. Some 16,000 full-time teachers were teaching art. Not all of them had the subject as part of a qualification above A-level, but those who did not were providing only about 5 per cent. of tuition in art. Some teachers of art were teaching others subjects as well.

EMPLOYMENT

Conference of Ministers of Labour

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the outcome of the third conference of European Ministers of Labour organised by the Council of Europe.

Mr. Alan Clark: At the conference there was a useful exchange of views on employment trends, youth unemployment and the impact of new technology on employment, which provided a good opportunity to explain United Kingdom Government policy on these issues. I shall be arranging for a copy of the final communiqué to be placed in the Library as soon as the definitive text is available.

Job Clubs

Mr. Murphy asked the Paymaster General what consideration has been give to the encouragement of job clubs in Hertfordshire; how such organisations are run; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Manpower Services Commission currently operates 30 job clubs to help longer term unemployed people find jobs, and is evaluating their effectiveness. Should this confirm their early success, the commission has been asked to introduce a national network of 200 job clubs by the end of this year. These plans include a proposal for a job club at Stevenage jobcentre. Other sites have yet to be chosen.

Job clubs are organised by jobcentre staff. The job club leader runs a series of sessions over a two-week period designed to restore self-confidence and teach job-hunting techniques. The leader then encourages and supports members in their search for work. Initial evidence suggests that two thirds of all people passing through job clubs enter employment.

Self-Employment

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Paymaster General what is his latest estimate, by trade and professional categories, of the number of self-employed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: Estimates from the labour force survey conducted in spring 1984 of the number of self-employed in the United Kingdom by occupational groupings are contained in the following table:

Self-employed persons by occupation, United Kingdom, 1984

	Classification of Occupations 1980 Occupation Order	Thousands
I	Professional and related supporting management; senior national and local government managers	143
II	Professional and related in education, welfare and health	150

XIV	Construction, mining and related	268
XV	Transport operating, materials moving and storing and related	120
XVI	Miscellaneous	6
	All occupations*	2,698

* Includes inadequately described occupations and occupation not stated.

Redundancy Payments

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General if he plans to introduce legislation to seek to increase the minimum amount of money given to people made redundant.

Mr. Trippier: There are no plans to change employees' statutory entitlements, although an order already approved increases to £155 the amount of weekly earnings reckonable for redundancy pay purposes.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is (a) the level of output, (b) the number of jobs and (c) the percentage of the work force in the Northern Ireland manufacturing industry for each year since 1979.

Dr. Boyson: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Index of manufacturing output (1980=100) (annual average)	Employees in employment in manufacturing at June	Manufacturing as a per cent. of total employees in employment at June
1979	106	144,950	28
1980	100	135,360	26
1981	95	121,240	25
1982	91	108,700	23
1983	94	102,510	22
1984	96	101,430	22
1985	*98	101,070	22

* 1985 figure is an averge of the first three quarters only.

Northern Ireland Industrial Development Board

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs were created by the Northern Ireland Industrial Development Board in 1985; and if the board met its target of new jobs for this year.

Dr. Boyson: In the calendar year 1985, the IDB promoted 3,966 new jobs in Northern Ireland. The target for new job promotions in the financial year 1985-86 is 5,750.

This has proved a difficult period for investment but at present it is not possible to say whether or not the target will be achieved.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets have been fired in Northern Ireland since the beginning of the current year; in what circumstances; in what locations the bullets were fired; and how many persons were injured as a result of the use of plastic bullets.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 408]: During 1985 1,173 plastic baton rounds were fired in Northern Ireland. Eleven people were allegedly injured during that period. So far this year 10 plastic baton rounds were fired and there have been no reports of anyone having been injured.

I am writing to the hon. Member with the information he has requested about the circumstances and places in which the baton rounds were fired. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many firearms, by type, namely, handguns, rifles, shotguns or fully automatic weapons, were seized by the security forces in Northern Ireland in the latest calendar year and to date; and, for each type, how many were legally held weapons stolen by terrorist organisations from (i) civilians, (ii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, (iii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, (iv) the Ulster Special Constabulary, (v) the Ulster Defence Regiment and (vi) the Regular Army.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 408-9]: Information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available about weapons which have been recovered or stolen is given in the following table:

January 1985 to December 1985

	Pistols/revolvers	Rifles	Machine guns/ sub-machine guns	Shotguns

PRIME MINISTER

Westland plc

Mr. Hancock asked the Prime Minister if any disciplinary action is to be taken against any member of her staff over their conduct in the disclosure of the Solicitor-General's letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine).

The Prime Minister: Breaches of discipline by officials are matters for Heads of Departments, but so far as I am aware there has been no breach of the disciplinary code in this matter.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the production of the Trident warheads will begin.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The production of warheads will fully support the Trident submarine in-service date of the mid-1990s.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the testing of the Trident D5 warheads.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Bosworth (Sir. A. Butler), in response to a question from the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) on 24 May 1985 at column 600.

Royal Navy (Frigates)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the report by Lord Hill-Norton into the choice of the new frigate for the Royal Navy; when he will be in a position to announce what action he proposes to take on it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I cannot comment on Lord Hill-Norton's report until it is received and I have had the opportunity to study it. Publication will, of course, be a matter for the author.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if officials of his Department have had any discussions with United Technologies concerning British participation in the strategic defence initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No such discussions have taken place.

Royal Naval Air Service, Yeovilton

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any plans further to privatise facilities provided at, or duties carried out by, established Ministry of Defence units at Royal Naval Air Service, Yeovilton.

Mr. Lee: The Ministry of Defence already makes extensive use of civilian flying services under contract to perform certain support and training tasks at RNAS Yeovilton and this will continue. Further privatisation of the maintenance of aircraft ground support equipment and ground radio installations is being considered. In addition, in line with other RN establishments, responsibility for grounds maintenance will be transferred to the PSA which will then put the task out to contract. For Yeovilton this is likely to occur by early 1987.

Nimrod

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Nimrod programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend on 14 January at column 914.

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for British Aerospace generally and its Woodford plant in particular of a possible cancellation of the Nimrod airborne early warning programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: British Aerospace work on the Nimrod AEW Mk 3 project is well advanced; but I can assure my hon. Friend that no decision on the future of the project would be taken without careful assessment of the industrial implications.

105 FD Ammunition

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he proposes to place an order for 105 FD ammunition; and which companies he proposes to order it from.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We have this week placed an order for 105 FD ammunition with the RO factory at Chorley. We expect to place a further order for a smaller quantity later this year; it has not yet been decided with whom.

Marine Services Department (Audit Report)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the audit report into the Marine Services Department.

Mr. Lee: A copy of a consultative document detailing the audit's findings was placed in the Library when the report was issued to the trade unions last July.

Royal Dockyards (Related Establishments)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of the related establishments to Rosyth and Devonport royal dockyards, as referred to in the Dockyard Services Bill.

Mr. Lee: Those "related establishments" for which Rosyth and Devonport dockyards currently provide support and which may, under the terms of the Dockyard Services Bill, continue to receive such support from commercially managed dockyards, include:

HMS Drake
HMS Raleigh
HMS Fisgard
HMS Cambridge
HMS Seahawk

Admiralty Surface Weapons Establishment

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any plans to put the work of Admiralty surface weapons establishment, Portsmouth, out to private contractors.

Mr. Lee: The former Admiralty surface weapons establishment was merged on 1 April 1984 with other units to form the Admiralty research establishment (ARE). So far as ARE sites in the Portsmouth area are concerned, there are currently no firm plans to contractorise operations but a number of possibilities are being examined, including the operation and maintenance of facilities at Haslar and at the experimental diving unit and physiological laboratory at Portsmouth and Alverstoke, respectively.

"Damage to Ship Containing Chemical Weapons"

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the closed document in the Public Record Office, entitled "Damage to Ship Containing Chemical Weapons" (AN2—13585) will be released;

(2) whether the closed document in the Public Record Office, entitled "Damage to Ship Containing Chemical Weapons" (AN2—13585) refers to the SS John Henry in Bari harbour in December 1943; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The document in question is not closed, but is open to inspection by members of the public.

Rosyth and Devonport Dockyards

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the personnel of the companies which have visited Her Majesty's dockyards at Rosyth and Devonport in order to acquaint themselves with facilities and services in which they might be interested in relation to the Dockyard Services Bill and the personnel of his Department whom they met on such visits.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his answer, 30 January 1986, c. 629]: About 40 representatives of companies which have expressed an interest in tendering for the contracts to operate the royal dockyards at Devonport and Rosyth have visited the dockyards in pursuit of that interest. It would be a matter for the companies concerned to give the names of their representatives who have visited the dockyards. Detailed records of the many dockyard and naval base staff in my Department whom the representatives met do not exist, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies-consortia which have shown an interest in bidding for the refit and repair services at Rosyth and Devonport dockyards, detailing the amount of current contracts placed by his Department with such organisations or any subsidiaries.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his answer, 30 January 1986, c. 629]: The following companies and consortia have shown an interest in tendering for the contracts to operate the royal dockyards at Devonport and Rosyth:

A & P Appledore/Plessey/Trafalgar House
Babcock International/Thorn EMI.
Balfour Beatty/Weir Group.
British Aerospace.
Costain.
Devonport Dockyard Ltd.
Flight Refuelling.
Foster Wheeler.
GEC.
Hawker Siddeley.
Northern Engineering Industries.
Press Offshore.
RCA Services.
Seaforth Welding.
STC.
Taylor Woodrow.
Tyne Ship Repair.

Some of these have subsequently withdrawn their interest.

The information requested about current contracts placed by my Department with such organisations or any subsidiaries could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Approved Stockists

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is satisfied the British Standards Institute Register of approved stockists for his Department's purposes can ensure that products supplied against Ministry of Defence requirements have direct traceability to, and have been supplied by, his Department's approved sources of manufacture.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 448]: Yes.

Westland Helicopters

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what rates of exchange were used to cost the various options open to his Department for the purchase of helicopters; and what effect there would be if the costings were all adjusted to current rates of exchange.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 533]: Whenever purchases involving foreign exchange are being considered, the appropriate current rate of exchange is used. However, none of the three collaborative projects—EH101, NH90 and light battlefield helicopter—has yet reached the point where production orders are about to be placed.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations were made to the Governments of France, Italy and Germany before 29 November last to persuade them to take a shareholding directly or indirectly in Westland helicopters in return for a commitment by the United Kingdom to buy a continental helicopter.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 533]: There were discussions with the Governments of France, Italy and Germany about ways and means of meeting helicopter requirements on a number of occasions. The possibility of a United Kingdom commitment to buy a continental helicopter in the context of a possible shareholding in Westland did not arise.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Palestine Refugees

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to how much was subscribed in each of the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 by each Government who contributed to the budget of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees in the near east.

Mr. Renton: I am arranging for the relevant extracts from reports by the Commissioner General of United Nations Relief and Works Agency to be placed in the Library of the House.

Five Continents Peace Initiative

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the latest proposals and role in arms negotiations of the five continents peace initiative.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Deakins) on 3 December 1985, at column 202.

Hong Kong

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had in the European Economic Community and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade about the international trading status of Hong Kong after 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: None.

Hong Kong's future position in the GATT is one of the subjects under discussion with the Chinese Government in the Sino-British joint liaison group.

Dependent Territories (Philatelic Policy)

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review current philatelic policy in respect of the remaining British dependent territories, in consultation with those territories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: None. The current policy provides an effective safeguard for the best interests of the dependent territories while having due regard to the royal prerogative in the field of postage stamp policy.

Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration has been given by Her Majesty's Government to the proposal by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for on-site inspection for verification of a comprehensive test ban treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: For a number of years the Russians have claimed a willingness to consider on-site inspections, but they are now making prior acceptance of a moratorium a pre-condition for such consideration. We welcome this willingness to the extent that it implies recognition of legitimate Western concerns on verification. But the demand for prior acceptance of a moratorium is unacceptable.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of any recent representations he has received from the Governments of signatory nations of the non-proliferation treaty regarding progress on the agreement of a comprehensive test ban.

Mr. Renton: Since the review conference of the NPT last September, the only substantive approach we have had was contained in the 15 January proposals by Mr. Gorbachev, the General Secretary of the Communist party of the Soviet Union.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will detail the problems of verifying a comprehensive test ban treaty which Her Majesty's Government believe are still outstanding.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, North (Mr. Eggar) gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Best) on 11 December 1985 at column 636.

Disarmament

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Western proposals at the conference on disarmament include provision for the verification of chemical production by limited companies as well as by state-run concerns.

Mr. Renton: Yes. United Kingdom proposals to this end were tabled at the conference on disarmament in Geneva on 6 March 1985 with full Western support. These provide for controls based on routine, random inspection or data exchange to be applied to all industry, both privately and publicly owned, which manufactures particular chemicals potentially subject to misuse.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration he has given to Mr. Gorbachev's most recent proposals on nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Mr. Gorbachev sent a message to the Prime Minister on 15 January setting out the latest Soviet arms control proposals. We are giving these careful consideration in consultation with our allies.

Nepal

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his forthcoming visit to Nepal, he will raise with the Government of Nepal allegations of persecution of Nepalese Christians.

Mr. Eggar: No. Allegations about the treatment of Nepalese citizens in Nepal are an internal matter for the Government of that country. We have no locus standi to intervene. Her Majesty's embassy at Kathmandu is in regular contact with Christian leaders and missionary societies in Nepal.

We have no hesitation about making our views on human rights clear to other Governments when necessary. His Majesty King Birendra and the Nepalese Foreign Minister—who is himself a Christian—are aware of our position. I understand that the Foreign Minister has undertaken to investigate any specific allegations of persecution of Nepalese Christians. In the circumstances, I do not consider it would be appropriate for us to make representations.

I understand that the delegation which the hon. Member recently accompanied to Nepal received the full and open co-operation of the Nepalese Government.

THE ARTS

Arts Council

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister for the Arts what has been the funding for the Arts Council in each of the last five years.

Mr. Luce: Grant-in-aid for the Arts Council in each of the last five years was as follows:

	£ million
1981-82	80·5
1982-83	91·3
1983-84	94·6
1984-85	100·0
1985-86	105·0

On 14 November 1985 I announced that the Arts Council's grant for 1986-87 would be £135·6 million, including £25 million "abolition funding".

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the share of total personal incomes taken in direct and indirect taxation and social security contributions in each financial year from 1978-79 to 1985-86; and what comparable figures are available to him for the United States, France, West Germany and Japan, respectively.

Mr. Moore: The latest available estimates are for calendar years as follows. No comparable estimates are readily available for indirect taxation on households in countries other than the United Kingdom.

	Percentage of total personal income
	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983
United Kingdom
Direct taxes on households	14·1	12·9	13·0	13·3	13·4	13·1
Social security contributions	2·9	2·8	2·9	3·3	3·7	4·0

The figures should be used with caution since the international comparisons are subject to limitations because of the differences between countries in their economic and financial structures and the degree of Government involvement in the provision of services. Also, "households" include unincorporated businesses for all countries referred to, except for the German Federal Republic.

European Monetary System

Mr. Best asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, in the light of recent exchange rate movements, the United Kingdom is to become a member of the European monetary system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer my hon. Friend to my statement in the debate on 29 January.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Wigley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to provide for value added tax paid on standard rated clothing and shoes purchased for use by children aged under 16 years to be fully refundable to the purchaser.

Mr. Brooke: No. The scope and operation of the present relief for young children's clothing and footwear was thoroughly reviewed in 1980. It was concluded that changes of the kind suggested would increase the cost of administering and cotrolling the relief, and increase the risk of its misapplication to persons for whom it was never intended.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the estimated cost of providing mortgage interest tax relief in 1985-86 and 1986-87, at 1985-86 prices, showing separately the estimated cost of mortgages previously under the option mortgage scheme.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, for the latest years now available, identifiable public expenditure by programme in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, and the United Kingdom expressed (a) in cash terms, (b) as a percentage of total United Kingdom public expenditure, (c) as an amount per capita and (d) as an amount per capita expressed as a percentage of the United Kingdom amount per capita.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Fallon) on 20 December 1985 at column 360. I will arrange for more recent data to be published in the Official Report as soon as it becomes available.

SCOTLAND

National Health Service

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when the report on the National Health Service staffing review of Scotland will be available.

Mr. John MacKay: The review, which is being undertaken with the full co-operation of the Scottish joint consultants committee, relates to medical staffing and is taking place on a specialty by specialty basis. A report is not expected before the summer of 1987.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the proposal to strengthen central manpower control in the National Health Service by making use of the regulatory mechanism already in existence by the Advisory Committee on Medical Establishment and to give additional powers to the Advisory Committee on Medical Establishment to redistribute hospital doctors to protect patient services.

Mr. John MacKay: The remit of the Advisory Committee on Medical Establishments has, with the agreement of the profession, been extended to include (a) a requirement to approve paragraph 94 (clinical assistant) appointments where the post involves six or more sessions per week and (b) the authority to transfer junior posts from the better endowed centres when it considers a request for an additional post in another centre is justified.

No further proposals to extend the remit of the advisory committee have been put to the Scottish Home and Health Department.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the effect on patient care in Scotland of the Greater Glasgow health board's decisions not to replace junior posts as doctors' contracts expire and to offer early retirement to acute sector consultants.

Mr. John MacKay: I am advised by the health board that it has taken no general decision not to replace junior doctors' posts as contracts expire, but that—in the light of its assessment of priorities against the resources available to it — it is considering various proposals relating to medical staffing, including an early retirement scheme for consultants, in conjunction with the BMA and the area medical committee. In the meantime, the board proposes to review carefully the need for immediate replacement of posts which fall vacant. In every case I expect the board to give full consideration to the implications for services to patients.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether in the light of population trends more recent than those upon which the Scottish Health Services Allocation of Resources in the Eighties formula was based, he is satisfied that the Greater Glasgow health board is not being under-funded.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish health authorities revenue equalisation formula (SHARE) provides for annual uprating of weighted population figures. The figures used in the calculation of allocations for a given year are an average of (a) the figures for the years three and four years prior to that year (the most recent years for which firm data are available) and (b) the Registrar General's estimates for the immediately preceding year. The weighted population of the Greater Glasgow health board's area has declined steadily since the SHARE formula was introduced. The board was overfunded in SHARE terms when the formula was introduced and remains so.

Road Expenditure

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will show 1984-85 outturn expenditure, 1985-86 estimated expenditure and 1986-87 planned expenditure on (i) trunk roads (a) new construction and improvement, (b) structural maintenance and (c) routine maintenance, (ii) local authority roads (a) new construction and improvement and (b) maintenance, (iii) public transport administration, (iv) local authority car parks (a) capital and (b) current (net) and (v) road safety in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

£ million cash

	*1984-85 Outturn	1985-86 Estimate	1986-87 Planned
(i) Motorways and Trunk Roads
(a) New construction and improvement	84·7	88·8	†77·2

* Local authority outturn figures are provisional only.

† Reflects in part a transfer of £6 million to local authority roads and transport capital to assist with the Edinburgh City Bypass, and the transfer of additional funds to structural maintenance.

‡ Local authority expenditure on administration of roads and transport services.

§ Excludes expenditure by the Department of Transport on national road safety publicity. Expenditure on new construction and improvements and on maintenance also contributes to road safety.

ENVIRONMENT

GLC Property Disposals

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 6 Fortress road, NW5, for which the Greater London council applied on 25 November 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 41-45, Shorts gardens for which the Greater London council applied on 1 November 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 8 Kellner road, for which the Greater London council applied on 31 October 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of the Peacock public house for which the Greater London council applied on 21 October 1985.

Mr. Tracey: Consent has been given to these applications.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of the Avon trading centre for which the Greater London council applied on 7 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I am not aware of any application from the Greater London council for consent under the Local Government (Interim Provisions) Act 1984 or the Local Government Act 1985 to the disposal of the Avon trading centre. However, consent has been given to an application dated 7 November 1985 from the council for the refurbishment of the Avon trading estate phase IV.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of The Ivories public house for which the Greater London council applied on 17 December 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of land fronting Northumbria street for which the Greater London council applied on 11 December 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 38 Southall high street for which the Greater London council applied on 11 December 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of 155 and 165 Lower road for which the Greater London council applied on 5 December 1985;

(5) why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of property in Barnsbury street for which the Greater London council applied on 25 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on Tuesday 21 January at column 141.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal of Rishmore Crescent, E.5, for which the Greater London council applied on 16 December 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I am not aware of any such application. Consent has been given to the letting of a contract by the Greater London council for works at Rushmore Crescent, E5, pursuant to an application dated 16 December 1985.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has not yet given his consent to the disposal North East Regional Stores for which the Greater London council applied on 29 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I am not aware of any such application. Consent has been given to the acquisition by the Greater London council of North East Regional Stores pursuant to an application dated 25 November 1985.

Town and Country Planning Order 1972

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received with regard to the proposed review of the Town and Country Planning Order 1972.

Mr. Tracey: By 30 January my Department had received 116 written representations on the subject of the Town and Country Planning Use Classes Order 1972 in response to the proposals of a sub-group of the property advisory group, which were published on 2 December 1985.

Historic Buildings

Mr. Hancock asked the Sectetary of State for the Environment what representations have been made to him with regard to the possible listing as an historic buiding of the central barrack block at the Royal Marines barracks, Eastney, Portsmouth; if he intends to list this building; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My Department was approached in October with a request to consider the central barrack block for listing. We are now seeking the advice of the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission on the case. I shall write to the hon. Member when a decision has been made.

Invincible (Wreck)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the wreck of the Invincible off Southsea.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has received a request from Invincible Conservations (1744-1758) Limited to call in planning applications by the Southern water authority for works in connection with a proposed long sea sewage outfall. The trust considers that the discharge from the outfall will harm the wreck and interfere with the work of divers.

My right hon. Friend has been advised by his right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport that the advisory committee on protected wrecks is concerned that the wreck of the Invincible may be at risk.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what applications have been made to him by the Invincible Conservation Trust in connection with its work on the wreck; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Invincible Conservations (1744-1758) Limited have requested my right hon. Friend to call in Southern water authority's applications to Portsmouth city council for the construction of a jetty and the temporary use of land in connection with a proposed long sea sewage outfall.

My right hon. Friend decided not to call in these applications but he will take account of the trust's representations if and when he is required to consider an application by the Southern water authority for consent to discharge.

Sellafield (Radioactive Waste)

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he was advised in advance of the discharge of radioactive material from Sellafield into the Irish sea on Friday 24 January; if he authorised this discharge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My Department was informed in advance of the discharge of radioactive material from Sellafield into the Irish sea on Thursday 23 January. The amount discharged was well within the limits specified in the authorisation for disposal of radioactive waste issued jointly by my Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. My officials have nevertheless asked British Nuclear Fuels Limited for an explanation of why they chose to discharge this material in preference to any other options that may have been open to them.

"Paying for Local Government"

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the implications of his proposals contained in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" for the rate concession to firms which locate in an enterprise zone; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our proposals will have no effect on the rate holiday for businesses locating in enterprise zones.

Housing Capital Expenditure

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much of the gross provision for housing capital expenditure by local authorities in England for 1986-87 relates to receipts accumulated and unspent by the Greater London council or to the non-prescribed proportion of receipts which have accrued to the Greater London council or which will accrue to the London Residuary Body.

Sir George Young: The gross provision for housing capital expenditure by local authorities in England is determined at the national level, and neither this figure nor the estimate made of the aggregate spending power available to local authorities from accumulated receipts, is broken down into figures for individual authorities or regions.

Housing (Renovation Programme)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give an assurance that the existing renovation programme covering ex-Greater London council housing stock will be completed on schedule by 1992.

Sir George Young: I cannot give such an assurance. After the abolition of the GLC, the boroughs will receive the resources which would otherwise have been given to the GLC for this purpose; but it will be for the boroughs to decide how to employ those resources according to their own priorities.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much of the housing investment programme has been allocated to the London borough of Lambeth for 1986-87 in respect of the ex-Greater London council housing stock in that borough;

(2) how the liabilities inherited by the London boroughs from the Greater London council have been taken into account in the determination of the housing investment programme allocations for 1986-87.

Sir George Young: The allocations to boroughs took full account of the boroughs' bids and of estimates made by the GLC of liabilities for 1986-87 and the balance of the renovation programme.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his estimate of the share of national housing resources which will be available to London local authorities in 1986-87 from housing investment programme and capital receipts; and how this compares with the resources available in 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86;

(2) whether he will give the housing investment programme allocations for each of the years 1979-80 to 1986-87 (a) for London, (b) for inner London boroughs, (c) for London as a proportion of the national housing investment programme, (d) for inner London boroughs as a proportion of the national investment programme and the prescribed proportion of housing capital receipts for each of those years (i) in London, (ii) in inner London boroughs, (iii) in London, as a proportion of national housing capital receipts and (iv) in inner London, as a proportion of national housing capital receipts.

Sir George Young: The HIP allocations were as follows:

	(a) London £ million	(b) Inner London £ million	(c) London per cent	(d) Inner London per cent
1979-80	887	458	34·9	18·0
1980-81	769	417	34·9	18·9
1981-82	552	308	30·8	17·2
1982-83	632	389	28·8	17·7
1983-84	596	350	26·7	15·7
1984-85	560	331	30·2	17·9
1985-86*	483	286	30·3	18·0
1986-87*	430	305	30·5	21·6

* Figures for 1985-86 and 1986-87 are initial allocations

The prescribed proportions of housing capital receipts reported by authorities were as follows:

	(i) London	(ii) Inner London	(iii) London per cent	(iv) Inner London per cent
1979-80	0	0	—	—
1980-81	0	0	—	—
1981-82	133	51	26	10
1982-83	215	80	23	9
1983-84	183	51	20	6
1984-85	215	88	28	12
1985-86	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
1986-87	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

Authorities may increase the spending power of allocations each year by the prescribed proportion of accumulated unused and current year capital receipts. Detailed estimates of accumulated receipts are not at present available.

Hillingdon

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the London borough of Hillingdon will receive any housing capital receipts from the London Residuary Body as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council.

Sir George Young: Yes.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what liabilities the London borough of Hillingdon will inherit as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council in relation to housing stock transferred to the borough from the Greater London council.

Sir George Young: According to Hillingdon council and housing associations working in its area, some £600,000 in respect of transferred stock and housing association stock.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 27 January, Official Report, column 426, if he will name the bodies or individuals who made representations to him about the interim budget issued by the London Residuary Body; if he will place the submissions in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: No. It is for those making representations to make them available if they wish.

Housing Capital Receipts

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to use his powers under section 77 of the Local Government Act 1985 to direct the London Residuary Body how and when to distribute housing capital receipts to the London boroughs.

Sir George Young: Yes.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the timing of the notification of the distribution of housing capital receipts by the London Residuary Body.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend has received representations from the London boroughs and has drawn them to the attention of the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to notify the London boroughs of the amounts they will be able to spend as a result of the distribution by the London Residuary Body of housing capital receipts.

Sir George Young: The timing of the distribution is a matter for the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how he will take account of the outstanding repair work on housing stock transferred from the Greater London council in the distribution to the London boroughs of the capital receipts accruing to the London Residuary Body.

Sir George Young: The capital receipts will be distributed in proportion to HIP allocations, which are themselves a measure of need for repair and other capital work in the boroughs.

North Southwark District Plan

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to approve the north Southwark district plan; and why he has not already given his decision.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has decided that he should call in the north Southwark local plan for his own decision. A letter conveying that decision was sent to the London borough of Southwark on 28 January.

Cash Limits

Mr. Dover asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any changes to announce to his Department's cash limits.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Yes. The level of receipts from disposals of the new town property has been running at a higher level than expected. Accordingly, the non-voted cash net limit (DOE/NT1) for this year has been reduced by £15·88 million from minus £99·6 million to minus £115·53 million. The net cash limit is negative because, with the new towns programme nearing completion, disposal receipts now exceed the amount of gross new investment.

£1·63 million of the additional receipts arises from a further disposal of properties from the Central Lancashire Development Corporation to various housing associations.

To permit the acquisition, the non-voted net cash limit DOE/HC1 has been increased accordingly, from £698·4 million to £700·03 million.

The overall effect of the changes is a reduction of £14·25 million in the Department's public expenditure provision.

TRANSPORT

Channel Fixed Link

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to provide increased funding to British Rail to move to a programme of modernisation based on electrification and electric multiple units, instead of the current plans based on diesel multiple units in preparation for the completion of the fixed Channel link.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is for BR to bring forward investment proposals including proposals resulting from a Channel fixed link. BR proposed the current investment in diesel multiple units which are predominantly for local services and I approved it on financial grounds.

British Rail

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, when he next meets the chairman of British Rail, he will raise with him the implications for revenues from freight traffic of the current shortage of locomotive power; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The availability of locomotives is a matter for the management of British Rail.

Road Traffic Act 1980

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends bringing in legislation to amend the Road Traffic Act 1980 in line with the recommendations of the Rayner scrutiny published a year ago concerning revision of certain parts of the Act in relation to a levy to charge against a driver of any vehicle involved in injuring a person needing hospital attention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Rayner scrutiny recommendations concerns section 155 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 which provides for the collection of prescribed fees from drivers for emergency treatment of road accident victims. The Government intend to introduce legislation to abolish the emergency treatment fee payable to health authorities at the earliest convenient opportunity.

Airline Seats (Fireproofing)

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Civil Aviation Authority regarding fireproofing of aircraft seats; if he will have discussions at international level to seek to produce improved international safety standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Aviation safety and standards are the statutory responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority. The authority has kept me informed of its new regulations regarding the fire-resistance of aircraft seats and has confirmed that these regulations apply to the seat cushions and seat backs taken as a whole, rather than to the seat coverings. Equivalent requirements are being applied in the United States and most European countries and are expected to be adopted in other countries.

Motorways (Interchange)

Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Transport why no provision has been made for vehicles using the M25 motorway in both directions to turn on to the M26 motorway in order to join the M20 motorway south-east of London.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are direct connections between the M26 motorway and the M25 motorway to the west. No provision has been made for connections between the M26 and the M25 to the north because the volume of traffic predicted to use them was not expected to be sufficient to justify the cost; there is a full interchange and additional links between the M25 and M20 motorways at Swanley.

We will review the need for additional facilities on the M26 later in the year after traffic patterns have been established following the opening of the Swanley-Sevenoaks section of M25.

Airports (Libyan Student Engineers)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many Libyan student engineers are in training at (a) Heathrow (b) Gatwick and (c) any other airports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 387]: My Department does not keep a detailed record of the numbers of Libyan students being trained at United Kingdom airports; the arrangements whereby foreign nationals are admitted to and remain in this country are a matter for the Home Secretary. I understand that 180 Libyan engineering apprentices are being trained by British Airways at Heathrow, 22 are being trained by British Caledonian at Gatwick and about 50 are being trained at other United Kingdom airports. My Department has issued guidelines to British Airways and British Caledonian on the special security arrangements to which these apprentices should be subject.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Productivity

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the average annual increase in agricultural labour productivity from 1983 to the latest available date.

Mrs. Fenner: Labour productivity, as defined in table 24 of the annual review of agriculture 1986 White Paper (Cmnd. 9708) is estimated to have increased by an annual average of 7 per cent. between 1983 and 1985.

ADAS Laboratory, Bangor

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations his Department has received concerning the proposed closures of the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service laboratory at Bangor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: My Department has to date received three representations specifically about the proposed closure of the ADAS agricultural science laboratory at Bangor which I announced, together with the closure of three other laboratories, on 11 October 1985. A copy of that announcement was printed in the Official Report for 21 November 1985 at column 298-99. I stated there that the arrangements for maintaining the essential services needed in the areas concerned would be announced later. Analytical services for the whole of Wales will be concentrated at the ADAS laboratory at Trawscoed, near Aberystwyth. Other advisory services will continue to be available in north and south Wales from offices at Caernarfon and Cardiff. Every effort is being made to find alternative jobs for the staff affected by these laboratory closures. The veterinary investigation centre at Bangor is not affected by these proposals, and will continue to operate there.

Hens (Battery Cages)

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent progress there has been in reaching a Community-wide agreement on the size of battery cages for hens.

Mrs. Fenner: The draft directive on minimum welfare standards for battery hens has not been discussed since the meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers on 9 and 10 December, about which my right hon. Friend made a statement on 11 December 1985 at column 922.

Sellafield (Radioactive Waste)

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the implications of the discharge of radioactive material from Sellafield on 24 January for the fish stock in the Irish sea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: On 23 January, BNFL discharged 440kgs of uranium into the Irish sea from its Sellafield plant after a minor fault had developed in an evaporator. This discharge, which was well within the authorised limits, is not expected to have any measurable effect on fish or other marine life. My officials have, however, asked BNFL to provide a full statement of the circumstances.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state, for each industry in public ownership in 1979, the latest annual payment paid to former owners; and, in respect of any such industry which has been privatised, if there is any contribution from public funds for compensation payments to former owners.

Mr. Butcher: Compensation from public funds to former owners of nationalised industries sponsored by my Department has been paid in full and amounted to:

	£ million
Steel industry	834
Aerospace industry	158·75
Shipbuilding industry	75·54

The Post Office has never been in private ownership.

National Weights and Measures Laboratory

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total of capital and revenue expenditure so far incurred in the move of the national weights and measures laboratory from Chapter street to Teddington; and how much more money he expects to spend to complete this move and to equip and man this new facility.

Mr. Howard: Total expenditure so far incurred in the move of the national weights and measures laboratory from Chapter street to Teddington is £584,000. It is expected to cost a further £3,470,000 to complete the move.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Butcher: There are no such agencies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Butcher: In 1984-85, the voluntary bodies assisted by my Department were the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux, the Scottish Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux, the National Federation of Consumer Groups and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents. Their respective grants-in-aid in 1984-85 were £6,393,217, £700,000, £11,000 and £63,000.

CR6 Taxi

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has received from the company concerned regarding the reasons for the delay in bringing the CR6 taxi cab into production; whether, in the light of these delays, the Government are reconsidering their policy towards financial support for the project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Various reasons for the delay in putting the CR6 into production have been put to my Department by the company but these are commercially confidential. As my hon. Friend will be aware from press reports, however, the company has now decided not to proceed with the Range Rover CR6 but is proposing to introduce a new taxi, capable of carrying a wheelchair-bound passenger based upon the existing FX4. My Department is discussing the future of the project with LTI and will then consider any implications for its financial support.

Trade Balance

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current deficit in trade between (a) the United Kingdom and the European Economic Community and (b) the United Kingdom and the non-European Economic Community countries in (i) manufacturing, (ii) steel, (iii) motor vehicles and (iv) textiles; and if he will give equivalent figures for 1972 and 1979.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 605]: The balances for manufactures derived from figures on the balance of payments (BOP) basis, with both exports and imports valued exclusive of freight and insurance charges, are:

£ million

	1972	1979	1985
European Community	−50	−2,555	−8,218
Rest of World	+2,195	+5,253	+5,140

For the other commodities, figures are available only on the Overseas Trade Statistics (OTS) basis with imports, but not exports, valued inclusive of freight and insurance charges. The relevant figures, together with those for manufactures on the same basis for comparison are in the following table:

United Kingdom crude balance of trade

Cosmetics

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to ban cosmetics that require experimentation on animals.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1986, c. 534]: No. But when the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Bill becomes law, applications for licences to test cosmetics on animals will have to be considered by the independent animal procedures committee. The intention behind this provision is that they will only be granted if the information needed to produce safe cosmetics cannot be obtained without such tests.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Primary Care

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what criteria he selected district health authorities to be eligible for financial support under the £9 million primary care package.

Mr. Hayhoe: Additional funds from the primary care package were made available to regional health authorities for use in those districts which cover local authorities already designated under the Government's inner cities policy as "inner city partnership" or "urban programme" areas, or are within the London Dockland Corporation. A few other districts were included which have been recognised as having similar problems to those areas.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in view of the transmission of legionnaire's disease by whirlpool baths and the enhanced vulnerability of elderly people to this disease, he will take steps to secure the removal of such baths from hospitals, and other institutions catering at public expense for the elderly and infirm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I have no plans to do so. Such baths have a therapeutic function, and, provided an adequate water treatment regime is followed, they can be used safely. I understand that the Swimming Pools and Allied Trades Association has published helpful guidelines on the necessary treatment.

Patient Appointments

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the specialties in rank order according to the length of the waiting time for (a) out-patient appointments and (b) in-patient treatment.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the right hon. Member all the information he seeks. Information on the waiting time for outpatient consultation is not held centrally. The estimated median interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital in England, ranked by specialty, is given in the table for the latest year for which information is available centrally.

* These estimates were based on a small sample number and should be treated with caution.

Retirement Pension

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the cost of providing the basic retirement pension at a level one third of national average earnings in industry for a single person, and one half for a married couple.

Mr. Major: The estimated additional cost of raising the basic retirement pension to one third of national male average earnings for a single person and one half for a married couple would be £10,250 million in a full year on current benefit rates.

Marriage Statistics

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the average length of a marriage in the United Kingdom; and what has been the trend in this figure since 1955.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not available in the precise form requested but some material relating to marriages in England and Wales is contained in an article published in "Population Trends No 27" (Spring 1982) on "The Proportion of Marriages Ending in Divorce", a copy of which is in the Library.

National Association of Health Authorities in England

Mr. Ernie Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the annual budget of the National Association of Health Authorities in England; and what is the source of its funding;

(2) what is the annual budget of the National Association of Health Authorities in Wales; and what is its source of funding.

Mr. Whitney: The National Association for Health Authorities in England and Wales is an independent body wholly funded by subscriptions from its constituent member bodies. Membership is open to all regional and district health authorities in England and Wales the majority of whom are, I understand, members. The hon. Member may therefore like to seek the information he requires from the association itself.

Bracken Health Risks

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in preparing his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 347, about bracken health risks, he had given consideration to the studies in this area by the university of Wales.

Mr. Whitney: No. I am not aware of the studies mentioned by the hon. Member.

Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the membership of the committee on medical aspects of radiation in the environment and the frequency of its meetings.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gosport (Mr. Viggers) on 24 October 1985 at columns 227-28. It is anticipated that this committee will meet four times each year.

Hospital Beds (Occupancy Rate)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the occupancy rate for hospital beds at the Stone House, Bishop's Castle, for the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how this figure compares with each of the other National Health Service hospitals in Shropshire.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 399]: The latest available information is given in the table. The figures are based on a midnight count of beds and therefore do not take into account the occupation of beds by patients who do not stay overnight.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 90

SESSION 1985-86

20th—31st January 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
